DAVENPORT, Iowa, Dec. 17.—Quite a sensation has been created in church circles here by the announcement that the Rev. M. L. Williston, of the Edwards Congregational church, has declared his intention of leaving the Congregational church and becoming a candidate for holy orders in the Episcopal church. He has already made application to Bishop Perry, with this end in view, and the date of his ordination has been fixed. Mr. Williston is a graduate of Amherst college, and has sustained an excellent reputation in the denomination to which he has up to this time belonged. His services have been temporarily secured by Grace church, of Cedar Rapids. His connection with the Congregational church of this city will close Jan. 1.

The American Turf Congress.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 16.—A special meeting of the American Turf congress was held here Wednesday to take action upon the proposed admission of Minneapolis and Kansas City. It is very probable that both circuits will be admitted, thus facilitating the establishment of an independent general circuit for the west. If there should be, there would be no reason for western owners to take their horses east.

The St. Paul Ice Palace.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 16.—At a meeting of the officers of the Carnival association, held Tuesday evening, the contract for building the ice palace was given out and work will be begun at once. The international snow-shoe, skating, and other races heretofore held in Montreal will be held here this season during the two weeks' festivities.

Horribly Mangled by Machinery.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Dec. 15.—Matthew Kruska, a middle-aged miner employed in a limestone crusher of Calumet and Hecla gas machinery, got caught in a gearing Tuesday morning. Both legs were torn from his body, and he was disembowled and mangled in a most horrible manner.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

A RADICAL CURE.

Intemperance has come to be largely regarded in the light of a disease which requires medical treatment. It is plain that the victims of intemperance lose to a considerable extent the power of self control, and require external aid to effect their recovery. If this be the true state of the case, it becomes a matter for the careful consideration of the philanthropist and those who are intimately connected with, and deeply interested in the condition of friends who are so unfortunate as to fall under the power of this vice, are earnestly urged to use every proper means to restore them to mental and physical soundness. What treatment will best accomplish the object, is a matter concerning which differences of opinion exist among experts. There are many nostrums for the cure of inebriates from which we are told that persons often emerge no better and rather worse; but these institutions, however wise in their plans or successful in their methods, are often beyond the reach of many who very much need their assistance. An effective prescription for the "home treatment" of inebriates seems to be exceedingly desirable. As a contribution to the literature on this subject we introduce an account of the radical cure of an intemperate man, copied from one of our exchanges. It is as follows:

A young wife in Michigan had just got settled in her new home. All seemed fair and promising, for she did not know that her husband was a drunkard. But one night he came home at a very late hour, and very much the worse for liquor. When he staggered into the house, the wife, who was greatly shocked, told him he was sick, and to lie down at once; and in a moment or two he was comfortably settled on the sofa in a drunken sleep. His face was reddish purple, his breathing was heavy, and altogether he was a pitiable looking object. The doctor was sent for post haste, and mustard applied to his feet and hands. When the doctor came, he felt his pulse and examined him, and finding that he was only drunk he said:

"He will be all right in the morning."

But the wife insisted that he was very sick, and that severe remedies must be used.

"You must shave his head and apply blisters," she urged, "or I will send for some one who will."

The husband's head was accordingly shaved closely, and blisters applied. The patient lay all night in a drunken sleep, and, notwithstanding the blisters were eating into the flesh, it was not till near morning that he began to beat about, disturbed by pain. About daylight he waked up to a most uncomfortable consciousness of blistering agonies.

"What does this mean?" he said, putting his hands to the bandaged head.

"Lie still—you mustn't stir," said the wife; "you have been taken very sick."

"I'm not sick."

"Yes, yes you are; you have the brain fever. We have worked with you all night."

"I should think you had," groaned the poor victim, "what's the matter with my feet?"

"They are blistered."

"Well, I'm better now; take off the blisters, do," he pleaded piteously.

He was in a most uncomfortable state—his head covered with sores, and his feet and hands were still worse.

"Dear" he said groaning, "if I should ever be sick in this way again, don't be alarmed and send for the doctor, and above all don't blister my head."

"Yes, indeed I will—all that saved you was the blisters, and if you ever have another such spell, I should be more frightened than ever—for the consistency I am sure is to apoplexy, and from the next attack you would be likely to die, unless there were the strongest measures used."

He made no further defense, suffice it to say he never had another attack.

It is well understood in medical circles that dangerous diseases require energetic remedies. We are not able to decide what would be the result of the general introduction of this style of practice but in view of the vastness of the evil to be combated, we think that this method of treatment for young husbands who come home to their wives drunk at midnight is quite worthy of consideration. It has the advantage of being comparatively inexpensive, and in the case referred to, it seems to have resulted in an immediate and permanent cure. If such were its uniform effect, the knowledge of it must prove a boon to afflicted humanity.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Christmas festival receives due recognition in the January number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, which begins with a reproduction of Milton's magnificent Ode, "On the Morning of Christ's Nativity," a poem which cannot be too widely read. Article on "Christmas in other Countries," introduces us to some peculiar foreign customs and one on "Carols," is interesting and pleasant. The solid articles in the number are one on "George Bancroft," by Ausburo Towner, and one on "The Telescope and its Revelations," by Arthur Vaughan Abbott, both very properly illustrated. There is also a good illustrated article on "Columbia College." The two serial stories continue, and these are sketches, interesting anecdotes, poems, miscellaneous articles and an abundance of beautiful illustrations.

Professional Ignorance

Nothing is more common, nor less true, than for physicians to tell patients in the first stages of heart disease that the trouble is only nervous, etc., and of no account. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing as shown by the great number of people who die of heart disease when its existence is not expected. Take warning. Don't neglect the first symptoms, and if you would avoid sudden death, angina pectoris, etc., take Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure. Sold by Fischer & Hall's drug store.

The RURAL NEW-YORKER of New York city is recognized as the leading farm and garden weekly of America. It has the best writers; it is original throughout. It is the only journal that conducts an experiment farm. It costs more to publish than any other journal of its class. (Its illustrations over 500 yearly) are from nature, or else original conceptions. Among the latter class, the Rural is publishing a series of powerful cartoons, nothing approaching which has ever before been attempted. They illustrate the Power of the Grange, the Curse of Monopolies, the Farmer Enlightening the World, the Improvement of Land, the Effects of the Destruction of Useful Birds, etc. These printed on fine heavy paper, with a sample copy of the Rural New Yorker, will be sent free to any farm readers who apply as above.

Old and reliable Medicines are the best to depend upon. Acker's Blood Elixir has been prescribed for years for all impurities of the Blood. In every form of Scrofulous, Syphilitic or Mercurial diseases, it is invaluable. For Rheumatism, has no equal.

The house of Henry Warner, situated two miles south of Ogden, was destroyed by fire on the 16th inst. Some children had been playing in the loft of the house, through which a stove pipe passed, and it is thought they threw some rags against the pipe. The loss bears heavily on Mr. Warner, who is a poor man, and his friends and neighbors are giving substantial sympathy to sympathy.—Adrian Times.

A Sensible Man

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung Troubles, than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized Baker & Hall to refund the money if after taking three fourths of a bottle, relief is not obtained. Price 50c and $1. Trial size free.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A CABBAGE TRENCH ILLUSTRATED AND DESCRIBED.

Requirements Necessary to the Successful Employment of Artificial Incubators.

How a Cross Fox Sow May Be Used by One Man—Cleveland Bay Horses.

Inasmuch as many fairs this season have provided a regular class for Cleveland bays, and this breed of horses appears to be coming into prominent notice throughout the country, we give the picture of the stallion Royalty, who stands at the head of one of the largest Cleveland bay studs in America.

ROYALTY, CLEVELAND BAY STALLION.

There exists but little definite information concerning the origin of the Cleveland bays. The vale of Cleveland in Yorkshire was peculiarly their home. This fact, together with their uniform bay color, gave them their name. The Cleveland Bay Horse society in England was organized in 1884. This breed was introduced in this country some ten or twelve years ago. The Cleveland Bay society of America was organized a year ago.

A Cleveland bay is of medium size, standing 16 to 16 1-2 hands high and weighing from 1,350 to 1,450 pounds. This breed supplies the demand for strong, showy coach horses. They are also well adapted for general purpose horses.

A Convenient Garden Hot Bed.

For a small garden hot bed excavate a trench two feet deep, three feet wide and as long as desired, selecting a sunny and well drained spot; sprinkle a little stable litter in the bottom, and on this shovel enough horse stable manure to make twelve or fifteen inches in thickness after it is well trained down; around the bed construct a frame or crib of boards, a foot high in front and eighteen inches at the back, with ends beveled to fit the sides, the whole to be covered with glass in sash that can be conveniently raised or lifted off when required. Some manure should also be put around the frame on the outside and covered with earth to keep out the cold air. Horse stable manure mixed with a moderate amount of the bedding is the right kind to use, and it should be hauled out and piled up a few days near the trench, and be forked over several times and kept moist, but not drenching wet, until the heap is well heated up, when it should be shoveled in the pit as directed, and covered with five or six inches of rich soil as a bed for the seed. If the heat is excessive at any time remove the whole or a portion of the sash, and on warm days this should always be done. Where old sashes are on hand the bed may be made of a size to suit them and save the expense of new. In sprouting large quantities of sweet potatoes for plants many practicals cover their beds with coarse muslin, as being cheaper than glass and answering the purpose quite as well.

Sugar Making in This Country.

The experiments conducted under the auspices of the National Department of Agriculture, at Fort Scott, Kan., in making sugar from sorghum cane have been announced a complete success by Commissioner Colman. The new process is rapid, less costly and more efficient than the old process. By the latter it is estimated that about one half of the saccharine matter was wasted, even in the southern sugar cane. The diffusion process, it is claimed, saves about 95 per cent. of the saccharine matter. Experiments are being conducted in Louisiana with making sugar from the ribbon cane by the new process. Commissioner Colman believes that these experiments and their results are as important to this country as the invention of the cotton gin.

The only entirely successful experiment in beet sugar production in this country has been at the Alvarado factory in California. It appears from a recent report that there are possibilities of supplementing the crop of the San Joaquin valley so as to lengthen the factory season in California to five months instead of three, the length of the season in Europe.

A Homemade Sawing Machine.

In the illustration is shown how a cross cut saw may be used to good advantage by one man. Prairie Farmer explains the arrangement as follows:

One end of the saw—the handle being taken off—is hung by a swinging bar several feet long to the side of the woodhouse. The swinging bar should run between two horizontal strips, which will make it run steady. To support the stick which is to be sawed, a heavy piece is fastened on the corner of the shed, and a crooked piece is fastened to the side of the shed, either by nailing from the inside or by bolts or by setting it on the ground. The saw should have a good set and will cut [illegible] wood without pinching. The swinging bar [illegible] the saw will have Artificial Incubators.

The manufacturers of incubators and the operators of the artificial method of hatching claim for the success of the employment of this method the following:

1. The regulation of 103 degs. Fahrenheit.
2. Proper ventilation.
3. Moisture and fresh air.
4. Sufficient cooling.

The difficulties of artificial incubation, but it has not been found so very easy in practice. The past few years, however, have developed several very good incubators by the use of which fairly satisfactory results have been obtained. In careful hands the better class of incubators give good results, but intelligent attention is an absolute necessity not only in the management of the incubators but in the care of the chicks after they are hatched. The supply of heat in the incubators must be regular, and amateurs, as a rule, fail in keeping an even temperature. Beale, the well known English authority, says: "No part of an ordinary dwelling is as good as the cellar to set the incubator in. Here the temperature varies but little between day and night, while may show the thermometer may stand at 55 degs. and the next to zero—a change which not unfrequently occurs several times each winter in the northern states—and all parts of the house feel more or less."

Numbered with the better class of self regulating incubators is a machine consisting of a small water heater which warms the water in a tank placed over the egg chamber. The source of heat may be either kerosene oil or gas. The eggs, placed in trays, are warmed by radiation on the upper surface only. Under the trays are shallow pans of water, six to ten degrees cooler than the eggs, the aim being to imitate the conditions which are observed when hens make their nests on the ground. The air in the egg chamber is also moistened by water from troughs suspended above the eggs. Ventilation is provided through tubes which introduce a constant flow of fresh air close under the tank, thus warming it before it comes in contact with the eggs. The impure air is taken out from the bottom. All the eggs are turned at one time by means of an ingenious contrivance of the egg tray. A set of thermostatic bars above the eggs raise and lower the flame of the lamp, or gas burner, and thus adapt the heat given out with changes of temperature in the room, and hold the heat of the machine close to the desired point by a constant action. There is a chamber under the egg trap which is used as a nursery for the chickens.

Another well known machine, made similar to the above, that is, the water tank is above the eggs, etc., etc., possesses the peculiarity of doubling its capacity after the first ten days with a double layer of eggs. Experienced hatchers differ in their opinions as to the merits of this feature.

A comparatively new incubator has no water tank, and no water is employed except to supply moisture. The [illegible] warmth to the eggs is imparted by air warmed by coming in contact with two metallic lamp tines. Then there is an incubator which is peculiar in having no automatic regulating apparatus. This machine consists of two tanks, placed one above and one beneath the egg drawer, and connected by tubes in such a way as to cause a very free circulation of the water. The source of heat is a kerosene lamp under the center of the lower tank. The flame of this is regulated according to the judgment of the attendant.

In careful hands machines such as have been described give fair results. The hen, however, remains the only certain incubator for inexperienced, busy or careless folks, who will not give patient, persistent attention to the artificial ones.

Burying Cabbage for Winter Use.

The usual mode of burying cabbage for winter use is with the roots up and exposed, as seen in the cuts. This plan applies to cabbage that is already fully headed, the object in inverting them being to turn off the water.

A CABBAGE TRENCH.

In the cut is given a perspective view of a trench of cabbage. A cross section of the trench is also shown, giving a good idea of the manner in which the cabbage is covered. A trench two feet wide and six inches deep is made in self drained soil. In this rye or wheat straw is scattered [illegible] inches in depth, and on this the cabbages are placed, top downward, [illegible] inches apart until the trench is full, when straw is scattered around the heads, and part of the stem. This is covered with earth from four to eight inches in depth, according to the severity of the weather. The boards at the sides prevent the earth from washing away the dirt.

When it is desired that the heads shall further grow, the covering may be placed in the trench and the plants right side up.

DOC SIFERS.

Of all the doctors I could cite you to in this 'ere town
Doc Sifers is my favoritte, jes' take him up and down.

Count in the Bethel neighborhood, and Rollins, and Big Bear,
And Sifers standin's jes' as good as ary doctor's there!

There's old Doc Wick, and Glenn, and Hall, and Wurgler and McVeigh,
But I'll bet Sifers gainst 'em all and down 'em any day.

Most old Wick ever knowed, I s'pose, was whisky;
Wurgler—well, his actions show, and fact's reliable;

WURGLER, SIFERS AND M'VEIGH.

But Sifers—though he ain't no sot, he's got his faults; and yit
When you git Sifers onct, you've got a doctor, don't fergit!

He ain't interested in the church, or, like mostly, he's gone where
You'd natchurly think certain fer to ketch the feller there!

But don't blame Doc: he's got all sorts o' curious notions—as
The feller says, his "odd come shorts," like smart men mostly has.

He'll mor'n like be potter'n' round the blacksmith shop, er in
Some back lot spadin' up the ground er gradin' it agin.

Er at the work bench, planin' things; er buildin' little traps
To ketch birds: galvanizin' rings; er graftin' plums, perhaps.

Make anything! good as the best!—a gunstock er a flute:
He whittled out a set o' chessmen onct o' laurel root.

Durin' the army got his trade o' surgeon there—I own
Today a finger ring Doc made out of a Secesh bone!

An' glued a fiddle onct fer me—jes' all so busted you
D'a throwed the thing away, but he jes' fixed her good as new!

And take Doc, now, in ager, say, er biles, er rheumatiz,
And all afflictions thataway, and he's the best they is.

Er janders—milk sick—I don't keer—k-yore anything he tries—
A abscess, getherin' in yer yeer, or granilated eyes.

THE LITTLE PEOPLE.

One of those interrogation point small boys accompanied his mother calling the other day and asked questions enough to fill a catechism. There were six or eight persons in the parlor, and Tommy got in his work during the lapses in the conversation.

"Mamma," he said, "is this a velvet chair?"

"Sh! Tommy; yes."

"Are they all velvet, mamma?"

"Yes. Keep still."

"That's a funny one there, ain't it, mamma, with a gilt edged back and a red seat?"

"Don't talk so much, will you?"

"What made the seat red, mamma?"

"I don't know. Keep still, I tell you."

Tommy kept still for a moment or two, and then when there was a lull, he resumed:

"I know, mamma. I guess it must have been a spanked."

Tommy went home in a very few minutes.—Washington Critic.

Had Been There.

On the way he inquired: "Mamma, does God make skunks?"

"Why, yes, Eddie, I suppose he does," was the hesitating answer.

Eddie, after a moment's thought, said: "Well, he got a good sniff of one once. I'll bet he'd never make another."—Babyhood.

Proposed Compromise.

A small sized Hartford girl had been corrected by a mild punishment, and was asked if she would do as her parents wanted her to in the future.

"Yes," replied the penitent, "but you musn't ask me to do anything I don't want to do."—Hartford Post.

A Ripe Chestnut.

Our youngest editor of The Fireside is original if the rest are not. Some time ago a tooth becoming loose he was taken to a [illegible] young Ed. came running to his mother with "O mama! see! I got another ripe tooth!"—Minneapolis Fireside.

An Original Theory.

A little 4-year-old boy was standing at the window watching the rain, which, much to his disgust, kept him in the house. Turning to his mother, with puckered brows, he said: "I guess God took a drink and forgot to turn the water off.—New York World.

On the Way to Brooklyn.

A sunburned old fellow with an oilcloth traveling bag was sitting on a bench in the Fulton ferry house the other day.

Suddenly he arose from his seat, accosted a passing gentleman, and inquired:

"Eh—kin you tell me what time the boat leaves?"

"Why, there's boats leaving every few minutes or so," was the reply.

"Every few minutes er so, hey? Wi' what's the reason this boat don't start then?"

"What boat?"

"W'y this 'ere boat."

"Man alive! This ain't the boat; this is the ferry house."

"Yew—don'—say so?" slowly ejaculated the sunburned old fellow. "The ferry house!" he went on, with a foolish smile. "An' here I've been a-waitin' three hours for the blamed thing to start for Brooklyn!"

And he rubbed his chin reflectively and walked on.—Drake's Travelers' Magazine.

A GOOD OLD POET.

Whittier Receives a Host of Friends and Remembrances on His Birthday.

BOSTON, Dec. 30.—Saturday, notable as the anniversary of the birth of the poet Whittier, was a matchless "open winter" day, the air clear and bracing, the ground bare and the brooks running free as in summer, and when the poet entered his breakfast room the sun shone through the windows on specimens of corsets, wreaths, mottoes, pictures, etc., which loving hands had arranged about the walls and on the table. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. had sent a large portrait etching, and the students of the Indian school at Hampton, Va., a view of that institution, while a fir pillow from Helen Hunt Jackson's grave, in Colorado, ornamented a side table. The pillow was inscribed, "Our Pines are Trees of Healing." The whole was the work of an Indian student at Hampton.

WHITTIER

THE POET'S BIRTHPLACE.

News Item, the first paper published in the new town of Whittier, Los Angeles county, Cal., printed on white satin. The engravings, etchings, vases, bouquets, and laurel wreaths which were strewn about the house, already rich in souvenirs, were almost innumerable, the gifts of children and adults from near and far. The visitors began early to arrive, neighbors and townspeople naturally forming the vanguard, and though his family urged him to spare himself, Mr. Whittier insisted on seeing all, and received all who came with quiet dignity and grace, and was assisted by his niece, Mrs. S. T. Pickard, of Portland, and his cousins, Mrs. Woodman, the Misses Johnson, and Miss Woodman. Among those who paid their respects were Governor and Mrs. Ames, the lieutenant governor, the members of the governor's council and staff, and a host of other men prominent in state and nation.

Mr. Whittier received a private note of congratulation from his old friend, Dr. O. W. Holmes, which he declined to give to the press, and has a market-basket of letters from all over the globe. He is 80 years old, and gives promise of living many years.

POWDERLY IN BAD HEALTH.

He Has a Hemorrhage Resulting from Excessive Work.

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 15.—General Master Workman Powderly arrived here Monday night from Philadelphia, suffering from a violent attack of hemorrhage. He was stricken while journeying from Providence, R. I., to Philadelphia. His condition Monday night until early Tuesday morning was a critical one. No one was aware of his illness but his immediate friends. The attack is said to be more serious than has been made public.

The physicians in attendance upon General Master Workman Powderly stated to a correspondent Tuesday that, while a slight improvement was noticeable in the condition of their patient, he was not yet quite out of danger. The doctors say that Mr. Powderly's nervous system is completely broken down, the result of excessive mental and physical overwork. He is, however, gifted with a strong constitution and great will power, and his recovery is looked for.

Hopkins' Trial Adjourned.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 16.—At midnight Tuesday night Judge Sage, of the United States district court, was advised by telegraph of a serious change for the worse in the condition of his wife, who has been an invalid for a long time. She is at their home at Lebanon, O., thirty miles away. No train being available, the judge took a carriage and drove to Lebanon at once. The consequence is that the trial of Cashier Hopkins, of Fidelity bank, is adjourned until next Thursday.

Want $750,000 from Bennett.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The Tortilita Gold and Silver Mining company has brought suit in the supreme court against James Gordon Bennett for $500,000 for alleged libel. Joseph H. Reall, president of the Tortilita company, has also brought personal suit for $250,000 damages against Mr. Bennett for alleged libel.

ITEMS OF GENERAL INTEREST.

At Cincinnati Friday a Base Ball Reporters' association was formed, with the following officers: President, George Munson, of St. Louis; vice president, Henry Chadwick, of New York; secretary, George E. Stackhouse, of New York; treasurer, John H. Mandigo, of New York.

Representatives from nearly all the local assemblies of the Knights of Labor in Philadelphia held a meeting Monday, at which resolutions were passed recommending that a demand be made upon the general executive board for an itemized account of its expenditures during the last year.

The issue of standard silver dollars during the week ending December 10 was $721,951, which is $95,062 greater than that of the corresponding week of last year.

The breweries of Des Moines, Iowa, valued at $200,000, were closed Saturday by the authorities. The owners, who have no desire to contest the matter in the courts, have asked for a reasonable time in which to close up their business, and it is believed that the Prohibitionists will favor the granting of this request.

The Michigan state grange, in session at Lansing, adopted a resolution Wednesday in favor of the local option law, and pledging the members to secure the prohibition of the liquor traffic in their several localities.

Monday, at Detroit, the wife of Dr. J. R. Book filed suit for divorce, and next day the case was heard in private, the women, who remained veiled, whispering her story to the judge, who granted her a divorce. Don M. Dickinson was counsel for Dr. Book.

Mr. Gladstone will celebrate the 78th anniversary of his birth Dec. 29.

It is reported from Eldorado, Kan., that a raid upon the Oklahoma district is being secretly organized in three states, the arrangement being that the way to open the Indian territory to settlement is "to open it." One hundred thousand men, it is said, are prepared to invade the territory at a given date.

A convention of delegates of Dakota counties in the territory of Dakota, was held at Aberdeen Thursday. A memorial to congress was unanimously adopted praying that body to pass an enabling act admitting Dakota to the Union as one state.

AN EXPLOSION'S VICTIMS.

FIVE PERSONS, INCLUDING A LITTLE GIRL, INSTANTLY KILLED.

One Unfortunate's Head Blown Off and the Girl Meets Her Death a Square Away—Five Others Badly Wounded, at Least One Will Die—Recovery of the Dead and Wounded.

WESTCHESTER, Pa., Dec. 17.—Five persons were killed and as many more injured Friday afternoon by the explosion of one of the boilers in the works of the Edison Electric Illuminating company. The killed are: T. Walter Renbree, superintendent of the works, head blown nearly off and body badly crushed; Elwood Beck, colored hod-carrier, body terribly scalded and crushed; Mary Jones, a school girl, 14 years of age, struck on the head by a plank and died instantly; Samuel Webb, a colored laborer, and John Bradley, colored laborer.

The injured are: Edward Schofield, a fireman, badly scalded and scalded, injured internally, and will die; Frank Kunan, a lumberman, scalded about the face and slightly bruised; William Richardson, a fireman, scalded and cut on the forehead; Jacob Brown, a laborer, seven cuts on head; William Allison, laborer, legs cut and badly scalded. D. O. Taylor, clerk of the courts, and several workmen whose names are not known, are missing.

The explosion was terrific. For squares away the houses were shaken and windows broken. The big building was almost demolished and large pieces of iron and machinery were thrown hundreds of feet in the air. Many bricks and pieces of iron and wood were found several squares away. Before the smoke and steam had half cleared away the tall and heavy smoke-stack fell with a crash, knocking down the walls of the building, which were still standing, and burying the men who had before stood some chance of getting out alive.

Work was immediately begun to extricate the living and then attention was turned to the dead. There was known to have been at least ten persons in the building when the boiler blew up. In half an hour all of those still living had been dug out. None of them are thought to be dangerously wounded, except Schofield. The physicians say it will be impossible for him to live. Two or three of the others are severely scalded.

Mary Jones, the little school girl, was walking a square away at the time of the explosion. A heavy plank struck her and crushed her skull. She was instantly killed.

Plans For Heating Railway Cars.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 17.—In response to a resolution adopted last January, the secretary of the treasury has sent to the house suggestions as to the construction of heating apparatus for passenger cars and steamboats, so as to prevent the loss of property and life by fire. The secretary says he sent out a circular calling for suggestions on the subject, that 216 letters and communications were received, and the different methods suggested by the correspondence are classified as follows: 1—heating cars by use of steam from locomotives; 2—heating cars by hot air from locomotives; 3—heating cars by heat from independent car; 4—heating and lighting cars by electricity; 5—heating by improved heaters or stoves in cars; 6—prevention of disaster by fire by means of specially constructed safety cars; 7—heating and lighting cars by gas; 8—miscellaneous, not classified under the previous classifications. The supervising inspector general says the fact that congress did not appropriate money to pay expenses of practical experiments prevents it being settled whether the plans proposed are practically efficient. Many of them are theoretically efficient.

A Hanging in Iowa.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, Dec. 16.—Chester Bellows was hanged Friday forenoon. He had to be supported to the gallows, and as the rope was placed around his neck he exclaimed three times: "Please don't." As the sheriff placed the white cap over his head he exclaimed again: "Please don't. I am innocent." The trap was sprung at 10:45, and in eight minutes and forty-three seconds his heart ceased to beat. His neck was broken. This is the first hanging in Iowa in twenty years. The crime for which Bellows was hanged was committed on a gallop near Charles City, July 8, 1886, and was a particularly brutal and cold-blooded murder. The victim was his niece, Miss Alice Waterman, a beautiful and spirited girl of 16. Strange and unnatural as it may seem, he killed her because she would not marry him.

Big Transfer of Mining Property.

ASHLAND, Wis., Dec. 16.—Deeds were filed Tuesday conveying the following iron mining properties to John H. Rice, of New York: Kalkaska, $80,000; Nimkoin, $180,000; Atlantic, $[illegible]; Bessemer, $[illegible]; Moore, $200,000; Bounce, $200,000. Other property of the Moore-Benjamin group was sold as follows: Laura D. Benjamin, $[illegible]; N. D. Moore, $10,750; Gideon H. Gile, $7,500; Moore, Benjamin & Co., $28,750. Although the nominal transfer is made to Mr. Rice, it is known that it is for the Superior Iron Mining company, of which Stephen A. Do[illegible] and Jesse R. Grant is secretary, [illegible] of the United States [illegible] and ex-Register of the [illegible] also in the syndicate.

A Whisky Trust Organized.

PEORIA, Ills., Dec. 17.—The executive committee of the whisky trust, in session here, has perfected arrangements for the inauguration of the trust Jan. 1. The value of each distillery is ascertained and the owners offered trust certificates. If he accepts them he is [illegible] under control of the trust officers. The trust now includes all the houses that once composed the Western Export association, with the exception of Duffy & Farnsworth's establishment at Chicago. The amount of certificates thus far issued is about $5,000,000. Certificates are issued as fast as presented, an offer of 50 per cent on $100,000 worth having been received.

Costly Blaze in Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 17.—At 3 o'clock Saturday morning fire was discovered in the third story of the store of J. C. Wonser & Co., jobbers in art supplies and manufacturers of picture frames and looking glasses. The building was gutted. The loss will exceed $100,000. There is $[illegible],000 insurance on the stock.

Blair's Educational Bill.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 16.—The senate committee on education and labor has unanimously agreed to report with favorable recommendations Blair's educational bill. The bill appropriates upward of $76,000,000 to be distributed among the states and territories in proportion to the percentage of illiteracy.

BURDETTE'S PHILOSOPHY.

"Rhymer," said Maulstick, "do you recall the little poem you read in my studio last Christmas eve, before sending it to Harper's?" "No," said Rhymer, shaking his head like one awaking from a dream. "I didn't recall it; they sent it back." And he lifted his eyes from the fire and gazed long and steadfastly at Maulstick's greatest effort, "Last in the Desert."

The Lime-Kiln Club.

Judge Openhouse Cabiff, chairman of the committee on meteorological disturbances, reported that the thermometer invented especially for the club by Professor Moses Clingstone, of St. Louis, had not been found up to his warrant. During the heated term in August it registered from 8 to 10 degs. below zero right along, and during the cold wave of November it marked 250 degs. above zero for several days in succession. It had been greased with bear's oil, boiled in milk and baked in the oven, but there it was at that moment on the wall, registering over 100 degs. below zero. He didn't suppose that a difference of 20 or 25 degs. in either heat or cold made any great difference to any member, but such a wide margin as had been recorded was piling it on rather too thick. He recommended that it be cast aside, and that Professor Clingstone be notified to remove it within thirty days.

On motion of Shindig Watkins, who is inventing a colored man's thermometer himself, the recommendation was adopted.

Judge Cadaver had been sitting on the edge of his stool for the last ten minutes, and as soon as the above business was disposed of he arose and offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, Dat we condemn de wisdom of de policy which induced the American colonies to frow off de British yoke."

The silence for the next minute was deep enough for a steamboat drawing twenty-two feet of water. Brother Gardner looked down upon the smiling judge and tried to say something, but not a word would come. He then motioned to Giveadam Jones, Sarsaparilla Smith and Sundown Davis to take him out of the lodge room and do with him as they thought best. He went out with them, and was seen no more during the evening. The trio returned in about ten minutes, each one favoring his right leg, and the matter was dismissed.

The Hon. Cavendish Cahoots then arose to ask for information. Was the sun drawing nigher the earth? He had heard it was, but didn't propose to accept the statement without having it affirmed by the club.

"Brudder Cahoots, have you got any butter to melt in case de sun do draw nigher?" asked the president.

"No, sah."

"Has you laid in any extra coal to prepar fur de sun gwine furder away?"

"No, sah."

"Den you set down! Jist let de sun alone. Doan' worry about him. A chap who still owes $20 on his spring clothes has no business to git nervous ober either de sun or moon."

The librarian, surmounted by the fate of Cahoots, also declined to make inquiry. Should a solitaire be passed among those gathered in the library that evening?

"Yes, sir," said the president. "Nobody goes out of this room out of shape to keep the cold out of his feet, but in case anybody gets out of shape he will be 'spected to make a few remarks in an apologetic tone. Let us now adjourn to the Lones."—Detroit Free Press.

They [illegible] gaily and evidently enjoying themselves. The famous soldier and tragedian was telling stories. Turning to the party in the group he said: "One of the most valiant achievements of my life, which I look back to with unalloyed pleasure, was the saving of Joe's life. It occurred last summer. We were both in the parlor [illegible] talking to some ladies. Joe had to leave early, and excused himself. After he [illegible] out I noticed a bundle of manuscript on the floor. I thought at first it belonged to me, but finding mine safe I hurried out to the elevator after Joe. But he had gone down by way of the stairs. I ran down after him two steps at a time. I finally caught up with him, and, handing him the manuscript, said: 'Here, Joe, you've forgotten something.'

A serious expression spread over his face as he took it and said in tremulously solemn and impressive voice: 'My God, you've saved my life!'

"It was his autobiography, which he was engaged upon at the time."—New York Evening Sun.

Napoleon III and His American Guest.

The following relating to Napoleon III—the authenticity of which we absolutely guarantee—is not generally known. On a citizen of Yankeeland being presented to him by Mr. Dayton, the American minister at the court of the Tuilleries, Napoleon III, wishing to be most gracious, remarked pleasantly: "I know New York well, and have some very pleasant reminiscences of my visit there." The feelings of the occupier of the unsteady throne founded by the coup d'etat may be more easily imagined than described. When the Gothamite, not to be outdone in civility, blandly replied: "I am glad to hear it; I hope we shall have the pleasure of seeing your majesty there again before long." But the poor emperor was used to this sort of thing, for when Lady Blessington, shortly after he had been proclaimed emperor, went to the Tuilleries, expecting a hearty welcome for the sake of the old days at Gore house, Kensington, and met with a chilly reception from the French sovereign, who, full of his new dignity, could not overlook the scandal which her ladyship's known intimacy with Count D'Orsay could not fail to give rise to, the nephew of Petit Caporal distinctly got the worst of it.

"Do you intend staying long in France?" coldly asked his imperial majesty, with marked emphasis.

"No, sire," replied the Irish countess, with a twinkle in her eye: "do you?"—Modern Society.

Was it Sattonstall's Joke?

Life would be very dreary for Mr. S. N. Dyer, Jr., private secretary of Collector Sattonstall, if he could not have a little fun once in a while; hence the issue by him yesterday of the following notice:

"In accordance with departmental orders, the custom house will be closed on the first day of January next."

This order was received during the day by the different heads of departments and by them formally turned over to their clerks to promulgate. The effect on the employees was electric. All were highly pleased, but they could not understand the motive that prompted this seeming liberality of the government; for it is not, and never has been, the custom to close the offices on New Year's Day.

After a while, one clerk who was brighter than the rest observed that Jan. 1 falls on Sunday, and ventured to suggest to the secretary that he appeared to have made an error in writing Jan. 1, when he meant Jan. 2.

But it wasn't an error; it was only a joke. Custom house clerks are not so happy as they were.—Boston Transcript.

"You [illegible] made an awkward blunder," said one of the household to the visitor, "that person meaning Sam is the king's cousin." The visitor immediately went up to Sam, who was standing like a statue of indignation, and taking his hand, said that "Hawaiians are the politest people on earth, the king takes my hat one day and his cousin another." Sam was thoroughly satisfied with the condescension.—Honolulu Daily Bulletin.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A BARREL HEADER THAT SECURELY PACKS THE FRUIT.

Detailed Instructions About Making and Keeping Cider Sweet and Sparkling. Attractive Device for Plants—Convenient Rack for Shocking Corn.

A Kansas correspondent in Prairie Farmer tells how to make a rack for handling shock corn that will be appreciated by any one who has been accustomed to husking on the ground in a cramped position.

RACK FOR HANDLING SHOCK CORN.

Make the sills or bed pieces of poles or of scantlings twelve feet long. Nail on three stiff boards about thirty inches long for cross pieces. One of these should be on the under side, and the other two on top about three feet apart; fasten on legs firmly about three feet from the ends. In using it a shock is laid across the rack, and a man or boy may stand on each side of the corn between the side pieces of the rack and throw the ears on one side and the stalks on the other. This rack is often handy to carry the fodder on when feeding it, or when putting it in larger shocks after husking.

Drying Fruit Under Hot Bed Sash.

Popular Gardening suggests that owners of hot bed sash utilize these for making a sun drier for drying surplus fruit. The sash should be elevated on a frame four foot higher behind. A rack with supports for drying trays at four or five inches apart should be constructed under the sash, to be reached from behind. The place of approach for sliding in or taking out the trays may be covered with fly screening, the other sides with boards. The sash will both increase the heat and keep off the dews and rains, thus allowing the drying to proceed from beginning to end speedily and with the smallest possible amount of bother.

Barreling Apples.

Barreled apples are frequently sent long distances by rail or other transportation, and the constant jolting and rough handling bruises the fruit if not securely packed. Hence it is advisable when filling barrels, at every addition of a half bushel of fruit, to gently shake the barrel, and thus secure close packing. Fill the barrel so that quite a number of apples will be above the level of the upper part, then place on the head, above which lay a bit of plank that will easily fit within the end of the barrel, and press the head to its original position by one of the many methods used for the purpose.

A BARREL HEADER.

In the cut is shown a barrel header described and recommended by Country Home. It consists, as will be seen by the cut, of a frame of sufficient dimensions to admit the barrel, which stands upon a plank platform. The pressing is performed by means of a screw, either wood or iron, passing through the upper and horizontal part of the frame.

Attractive Arrangement for Flowers.

The floral cone is a pretty ornament for the conservatory or window garden. American Garden gave recently an illustrated description of one, which is here reproduced for the benefit of our readers.

The cut shows the construction and finished side. Four circular shelves are arranged one above another for a foundation, the diameter of the same depending upon individual taste. A convenient size for the cone is got by making the lower shelf 12 inches from the ground and the shelves 10 inches apart from center to center, with the stand for the pot 8 inches above the highest shelf. Allowing for a pot 6 inches high and for the plant in it to project 6 inches above it, the height of the cone will be 62 inches. For this height the lowest should be about 30 inches in diameter; the next higher, 33 inches; the next, 27 inches, and the highest, 18. The spaces between the shelves are filled with soil, much as a pot would be filled. First is a layer of coarse gravel or broken crockery and charcoal and then mold within two or three inches of the next shelf. The shelves are properly braced to bear the weight put upon them. The outer surface of the soil is made in the direction of the shelf just above, except on the lower shelf; on this the surface is perpendicular.

FLORAL CONE.

The soil should not reach quite so far out as the periphery of the shelf that holds it. The soil is watered by inserting the long spout of a can between the soil and the shelf above it. Holes are bored around the center of each shelf, to allow the water to drain through. The lower shelf is planted in something that will droop to the ground. Here the seeds are planted on the level surface, from the edge back three or four inches. Above this the seeds are planted not only on the level surface, but also on the inclined outer surface. Annuals are the best, and one may select to suit his own fancy.

Making Cider.

Numerous machines for making cider—some to be driven by steam and many to be worked by hand power—have superseded the old fashioned cider mill. These save time and labor, but for making a superior article of cider no improvement has really been made over the old time mill that slowly mashed and squeezed the apples, instead of rapidly reducing them to a pulp or grinding them to a fine pomace.

September, October and November are the cider making months, but the nearer cold weather it is produced the better the beverage will keep.

Good cider cannot be made from defective apples and the picking up of all sorts with leaves and dirt attached for making cider cannot be too severely condemned. On the contrary, where cider (not vinegar) is the object, it will pay to reject all unripe and unsound apples, and wash them clean and dry them in the sun until they are a little wilted, for the more water that can be removed from them at this stage the better the cider will be. The finest table apples do not make the best cider, the preference as a cider apple being universally given to the Hughes or Virginia crabs, a small apple of a little more than twice the size of the common wild crab, not remarkable for the quantity of its juice and entirely destitute of any good edible qualities, but producing cider that will command double the price of that made from more sightly and fine flavored apples. Next comes the Harrison, an apple yellow in color, twice as large as the crab, whose juice so closely matches that of the crab that where they are grown in the same orchard they are made into cider together. There are many other good cider apples, but none that surpass the ones mentioned.

Crab cider is remarkable for its sparkling qualities and spirit, rivaling champagne; for the making of the latter beverage crab cider is no longer employed. The secret of handling crab cider consists in cleansing it from all foreign matter, scum and sediment, without arresting fermentation by heating with fire, or the use of mustard or chemicals. This is done by standing it in large open casks holding three or four barrels until fermentation has begun and considerable scum has risen and been skimmed from the top, when the cider is carefully racked off through faucets placed in the casks (about eight inches) from the bottom so as not to draw off the sediment, and it is then sometimes strained through filters of clean sand or charcoal, when it is barreled and stored in a cool cellar ready for sale. Where one or more additional rackings are given, the slow filtering may be dispensed with. Whenever the suppressed fermentation going on in the barrel manifests itself so strongly as to swell out the heads, it is necessary to give the gas a temporary vent by a small gimlet hole near the bung which at once gives relief, when it may be stopped with a pin plug that can be easily drawn out to allow another escape of the gas when it becomes necessary. This treatment is equally applicable to cider made from other varieties of apples, but to those who prefer sweetness to sparkle and spirit, a different one is required.

There are various ways of preventing fermentation. The best, though requiring more labor than others, consists in scalding the cider in copper kettles or a large copper still that will hold three or four barrels, the scalding to stop just as boiling is about to begin, when the fire should be drawn from under the still and the liquor be placed in an open cask large enough to hold it until it becomes entirely cold, when it is drawn off in the same manner as directed for crab cider. During the heating a great mass of fine pomace will rise to the top in the still, which should be continually skimmed off and several inches of fine sediment will remain in the bottom of the cask after the cider has grown cold. Where from fifty to 100 barrels of cider are made yearly about six of the large open casks will be wanted and should be be set high enough from the ground to allow cider to run from the faucets into barrels. Other processes are the use of mustard seed or sulphate of lime as soon as the cider is barreled, but whatever method is adopted to keep cider sweet, there are none that will preserve it precisely as it came from the press.

Cider is better when the pomace remains over night without being pressed. Clean rye straw is the best straining material to be used in laying up the cheese, and the press and casks should be thoroughly cleansed before using a second time. Cider should never be allowed to freeze and thaw. When from neglect it has frozen to any considerable degree it should be drawn off into other barrels, leaving the ice when melted to be thrown away or used to replenish the vinegar barrels. As a compensation for the waste incurred in freezing, whether done accidentally or purposely, the cider when drawn off will be found improved to an astonishing degree by nature's own process for expelling the surplus water. Evaporating the water by boiling the cider will ruin it for a beverage. Champagne cider is quite frequently made by charging cider that is deficient in spirit and sparkle with carbonic acid gas, and manufacturers of cider who are not farmers have many methods of presenting the article to their customers in a pleasing form that are not practicable on the farm.

The New Corn Ensilage.

The latest plan with ensilage is to cut the entire corn crop—stalks, ears, and all—into the silo. The kernels of the corn will be wholly digested by the cattle, as it does not dry out nor lose its milky character, which gives it succulence for rapid digestion. A farmer who has made this point one of special investigation so reports, and affirms that there is not a visible trace of corn in the voidings.

CHRISTMAS TURKEYS.

As our reporter was straying along R. R. street yesterday he halted at the old Cummins Carriage Factory and found the building had been transformed into an extensive poultry dressing establishment. "What does this mean?" he inquired of the proprietor, Hannibal Osborn. "Mean?" said Mr. Osborn, "it means that I have the finest lot of Dressed Turkeys ever shown in Tecumseh—the cream of the best flocks in Lenawee Co.—which I am now dressing and packing for the Christmas trade. I make a specialty of prime Turkeys. I know EXACTLY how to dress and pack the bird and have the very best facilities for doing so. Look at that 22-pound Turkey. Did you ever see a nicer one? I am packing 1,000 a day of just that kind of birds. I get the top price in the New York market, and hence can pay the top price here at home. I have several hundred bushels of St. Patrick POTATOES for sale, the very best potato for family use. Put this in your supplement. FARM AND GARDEN.

CONTRIVANCES THAT KEEP PLANTS FROM INJURY IN TRANSPLANTING.

Observance of Christmas on the Farm. [illegible] Horses—Wire and Board Fences of Desirable Construction.

In the first cut is represented a wire and board fence similar to one in use on the great hogs farm of W. L. Elwood & Co., Illinois, and originally illustrated in Prairie Farmer. Several miles of this fence have been built around the pastures in which this company's herd of Percheron Norman horses are kept. It is high, strong, easily seen by stock and the wires are so high as to cause no injury to the limbs of the animals. It is an excellent fence to place around a tame pasture.

FIG. 1—HORSE AND OX FENCE.

Large and long posts must be used, as the fence is five feet high. The distance to the first board, between the several boards, between the top board and the lower wire and between the two wires is in all cases six inches.

[illegible] excellent tight fence for the general farmer, being cattle, sheep and hog proof.

FIG. 2—CATTLE, SHEEP AND HOG FENCE.

The authority quoted from says that it has all the advantages of the wire fence in being proof against the larger animals and is perfectly adapted to sheep and hogs. It is reasonably cheap.

Colic in Horses.

Dr. Detmers, in a recent report of the Ohio Experimental station, classifies colic into two kinds, true and spurious colic. True colic, he again divides into essential and symptomatic colic. Essential colics may or may not be caused by anomalies of the contents of the intestines. In the latter case they may be produced by over feeding, by development of gases (wind colic), or by solid obstructions in the intestinal canals, as hard feces, concrements, stones, etc. Symptomatic colics are caused (1) by entozoa (worms), (2) by poisons, (3) by displacements and morbid changes in the textures of the intestines, (4) by peritonitis. Until recently the real predisposing cause of colic, and probably the sole cause in numbers of cases was not known. It was discovered by Professor Bollinger in Munich. A small worm causes an aneurism in the anterior mesenteric artery. Coagulation of blood, exudation and finally degeneration of the interior coat of the artery ensue, followed by obstruction of the circulation. Professor Bollinger found this condition—the worm and aneurism—in 94 per cent. of all old horses killed for anatomical purposes in the Royal Veterinary school at Munich. Three old horses were killed last winter for anatomical purposes at the veterinary school of the O. S. university, and the aneurism and worm found in every one of them. These facts show that such an aneurism is a frequent occurrence in [illegible] old horses. As a parasite within the [illegible] it is not strange that it [illegible] exists largely in one part of the [illegible] country and another is comparatively free from it. The aneurism (entozoon of artery) may exist for years, however, and the horse remain free from colic as long as no exciting cause arises. [illegible] causes are [illegible] cold, [illegible] food, concentrated food, etc.

Treatment should have last one of [illegible] the prevention of the circulation of the blood and the possible action of the remedies. [illegible] follow the farmer. Manage [illegible] the proper remedy. A horse [illegible] paw, [illegible] own [illegible] roll, roll, and thus brings into action mechanical forces that sooner than anything else will remove obstruction and promote the flow of blood. Where these movements of the horse cannot be [illegible] with, but given full play, unless they become so violent as to threaten injury to the animal. If a horse shows a tendency to lie down and not move, and [illegible] rapid pulse and quick breathing, rouse the animal, and make him get up at least every twenty or thirty minutes. Gentle friction along the abdomen, particularly on the right side, if the animal is quieted, is useful, but violent exercise, as compelling the horse to trot or run, is decidedly objectionable.

In cases of great agony and violent exertion, a subcutaneous injection of warm soap suds or salt can do no harm and may [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] wind [illegible] bleeding, use the [illegible] and [illegible] in time. If it is known that the animal has swallowed large quantities of food, a physic may be advisable, and if spasms are very severe a few doses of camphor will relieve.

Christmas on the Farm.

The approach of the holidays brings [illegible] Christmas is a busy time for the [illegible] of the household. A Christmas tree and greens is felt so great an need nothing as many are inclined to believe. The girls and boys will all be home to spend the season, and unable to attend when these cannot be procured in the market. Christmas decorations appropriate include whatever green and bright hued plants and berries can be found in our own locality. Foremost among these is holly with its dark green shining leaves and crimson berries. Next comes the mistletoe which, as every one does not know, is found in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, as well as the more southern states. Of a attractive [illegible] berries are the color of pale [illegible] and red cedar berries. Evergreen [illegible] berries, [illegible] climbing bittersweet, red and white berries, or the pretty scarlet berried [illegible] Mountain laurel is also beautiful [illegible] Christmas purposes. Around [illegible] pine affords a valuable [illegible]

While [illegible] decorate the [illegible] at least give a holiday air by arranging a few branches of Christmas greens here and there about doors and windows, around pictures and in graceful fashion upon the walls. The Christmas dinner will taste all the better for an attempt to make bright and cheery this holiday of holidays.

Authorities on Apple "Scale."

[illegible] Apple Scale before the American Pomological society, he explained that apple scale is caused by a fungus that also attacks the leaves. Where it attacked the leaves it causes them to drop, weakened the trees and led to winter killing. Like other fungi it thrives best in warm, wet weather, and therefore, a summer of drought is unfavorable to its development, and hence a great blessing. Crab apples are especially liable to the disease in its leaf form. In reference to prevention and cure, this disease belonged to the same fungi of mould the Peronosporas that causes one kind of grape rot, and that is so deep rooted to be prevented by outward applications. He would advise growing such varieties as are most liable to its attacks. Some varieties of apples develop a waxy secretion upon the fruit and leaves, and he finds that such varieties are less liable to contract the disease.

E. S. Goff, of New York, said that he had tried sulphate of soda for this disease with good results. The operation was not expensive. His trial of the sulphate of copper, as recommended by the Department of Agriculture, resulted in destroying most of the leaves in three applications.

G. W. Campbell, of Ohio, who had used the sulphate of copper for grapes, said that he made it much weaker than the department's recipe, as he suspected it to be too powerful.

Suggestions on the Care of Horses.

During the shedding of a horse's coat the skin is very sensitive, and at this period he needs the comfort of a moderately warm stable. If while putting on the winter coat the horse is exposed unduly to severe cold the hair bulbs become chilled, the coat becomes broken and all winter long it is remarked that the horse's coat is not what it ought to be and gives him an unthrifty look.

Cleanliness of the body and legs is next to be considered, for after the horses have been in a condition of nature, and they are suddenly brought into the artificial state of domestication, they cease to roll or shake off the dirt accumulating on their bodies and legs. Now, if the stable men will attend, cleanse, and dry the legs of horses by genuine elbow grease, the trouble they call scratches will never be heard of again. Scratches, cracked heels and grease are all the result of bad stable management and chronically lazy grooming.

Cutting Corn with a Reaper.

The comparatively new plan of cutting fodder corn with a reaper has been reported on this season from several sections as an expeditious and economical method. A New York farmer who has tried it two seasons says the reaper will cut the fodder as fast as five men can pick off the ears of corn, this being done as soon as the corn has become generally glazed. He put three horses on the reaper and started the pickers at each corner, so as to keep but two rows ahead, by which they had to throw the ears only outside of the row the reaper ran in, and the reaper cut two rows at a time. The corn, thrown in heaps, ripened as well as any corn ever raised, while the fodder was in better condition for cattle food than if permitted turn into wood fiber through exposure to the sun and wind, as is usually the [illegible]

Aids in Transplanting.

The little implement designated in accompanying cuts is an invention patented whereby one can [illegible] any sort of plant, [illegible] or [illegible] The genius [illegible] the following description in the Ag[illegible]

FIG. 2—TIN TUBE

Now, these pieces will be 10 inches long by 4 1-2 inches wide, or perhaps a fraction more. Make a bend on each end of each piece, the [illegible] together [illegible] the pieces, and [illegible] the ends for soldering if necessary, so as to [illegible] tin tube [illegible] shown. Make as many of these tubes as may be required. Stand the tin tubes on trays or [illegible] be set on a wheelbarrow and take where your plants are. Suppose it is strawberries you want to take up. Gather up the leaves of your young plants and slip the tube over them, pushing it down [illegible] as possible to the crown of the plant. Now set your spade [illegible] two times [illegible] and so [illegible] tion of [illegible] cuts off the runners [illegible] with a box full of [illegible] into [illegible] where you are going to set out the plants. If the soil is soft and mellow you can scoop it out and set the tubes in half their depth almost as fast as you can crawl along on your hands and knees. No trimming is near so [illegible] the plant comes just as it did, the roots are all spread out and the same dirt it was feeding from before you moved it will feed it in its new location.

When ready to pull the tubes out, fill up with water, let stand a few minutes, take hold of the tin and pull a little, it will slip out easily, leaving the plant in its purified soil saturated with water, and then mulched with dry [illegible] all around it. These tubes may be made [illegible] size, the [illegible] being especially adapted for [illegible] raspberries where the canes are small, celery, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce and tomatoes.

THE COUNTRY'S CROPS—BRIEF REPORT OF THE FAT STOCK SHOW.

The Famous Jersey Cow Eurotas and Her Descendants—How to Make a Cheap and Serviceable Ice House—Matters of General Interest.

Ice is regarded in many sections of the country as a necessity, and most farmers who have built ice houses and harvested and put up their own ice claim that it pays a good profit in addition to affording a luxury. There are many plans for ice houses; the success of all these in large measure depends on ventilation at the top, drainage below and plenty of packing material all around the ice.

FIG. 1—ICE HOUSE.

The illustrations show an above ground ice house described and approved by Minnesota Farmer. The house is constructed of a single wall, boarded up on the inside. It may be built with double walls if preferred, but this will add somewhat to the cost. The filling and removing is done at the end, boards being slipped in to close the opening; a swinging door may be used if preferred. The building is left open at the gables, as shown, or horizontal slats may be used, being sure to leave space between sufficient for ventilation. Engraving No. 2 shows a cross section and the manner of packing the ice; a drain pipe is shown underneath.

FIG. 2—SECTIONAL VIEW.

The walls may be of well matched, rough boards, and the roof the same, well battened so as to shed rain. See that the drainage is good; if not naturally underdrained, put in tile or a stone drain. The small squares in Fig. 2 represent the blocks of ice, which are best cut of uniform size. The small dots show packing material—saw dust, tan bark, finely cut straw, or some other non-conducting material. If cut straw is used the layer must be at least a couple of feet in thickness, and there should be a similar amount above and below the ice; it is safer to put still more on top, and be sure to weight it down well. Of course, if double walls are used, less of the packing material will be needed at the sides. Pack the ice blocks firmly together so that there will be no air spaces between. A solid mass of ice is what is wanted.

Crops of the Country.

The quality of the corn crop is much lower than usual. The last estimate made by the department of agriculture placed the yield at 19.9 per acre, or about 1,453,600,000 bushels.

The final estimate for the potato crop is 131,000,000 bushels, against 165,000,000 bushels last year.

The apple crop, while small everywhere, is, according to Statistician Dodge, the largest in the eastern states, the average standing being Maine, 55; New Hampshire, 65; Vermont, 58; Massachusetts, 74; Connecticut, 83, and New York, 76. These figures are very low compared with prosperous years, yet from New Jersey southward to the Carolinas there is no return of over 45.

There appears to be no question but the cotton crop of the country is short of expectation and smaller than the world's requirements. Hence it is predicted that cotton growers will receive enhanced prices for their crop.

The American clover seed crop is short, but it is thought there will be enough for home consumption. From England come reports of an average crop.

The onion crop, it appears, is a short one all over the country.

Death of the Famous Cow Eurotas.

The death of the famous Jersey cow Eurotas, at Mr. A. B. Darlington's farm at Darlington, N. J., recalls this wonderful cow's record as a butter producer, and the fabulous prices at which her descendants have been sold at public and private sales. Eurotas (2,454), calved Aug. 13, 1871, bred by R. M. Hoe, Morrisania, N. Y., by Rioter H. (59), dam Europa (176). When two years old she became the property of Mr. Darlington, and has since been a prominent feature of Valley Farm, at Darlington. The fame of Eurotas came with the astonishing butter test that lasted through one year. She gave 778 pounds 1 ounce of butter in eleven months and six days and dropped a fine calf within the year. Her second bull calf, Pedro, sold for $10,000; another bull calf, Michael Angelo, sold for the enormous price of $12,500. To Eurotas and her descendants is due, in large measure, the popularity of the Jerseys and the lively competition among breeders, which has resulted in the many fine specimens that today exist in this country, not only of the various strains of Jersey blood, but that of other breeds.

Making Apple Butter.

Apple butter is old fashioned, but it is also very palatable and very healthful—two excellent reasons for calling attention to it. In any farmhouse that boasts of a kettle large enough to cook the apples in, and a pair or two of young, strong arms to assist in stirring the apple butter, it is recommended as one of the best possible products into which to tranform apples that have become bruised or specked and which will not keep long in the natural state.

To make old time apple butter, boil down sweet cider to a little less than half its volume. Pare and cut up the apples and place in a large brass or copper kettle and fill up with the boiled cider. Boil over a slow fire until the apples are thoroughly cooked. Skim the mass constantly with a wooden paddle or blade set at right angles on the end of a stick long enough for the one using it to stand back from the fire, and with the blade long enough to reach the bottom of the kettle, this boiling [illegible] the while. This constant motion is required, else the pulp would settle and burn on the bottom of the kettle.

Flavor with allspice, cinnamon and cloves to suit individual taste. When quinces are available a few added to the apples improve the flavor for most tastes.

Cooking Food for Swine.

The perennial question, "Does it pay to cook food for swine?" was agitated at the annual meeting of the National Swine Growers' association, at Chicago, members being about equally divided on the pros and cons of the subject. A member from Indiana advocated cooking food, especially when Professor Stewart's plan is followed, said plan being a mixture of clover hay or similar bulky substance with meal or shorts. This member steams the meal thoroughly and mixes with cut clover hay, making eighteen to nineteen pounds of pork from a bushel of meal. He uses oats, bran, a little corn and clover hay, even in summer, to get the desired bulk. In winter he gives the feed warm, his idea being that fattening animals should never be chilly.

Professor Henry, of the Wisconsin Experiment station, claims that he has data sufficient to warrant the statement that there is a positive loss in cooking food for fattening purposes. In addition to the loss by cooking, Professor Henry avers that hogs fed uncooked food do not consume so much, as a rule, in a given time. As gain in weight comes from the excess of food digested above that required for maintenance, the extra amount consumed all goes to give increased weight. Hogs when given dry food consume it much more slowly than when wet. In eating slowly there is probably a much larger amount of saliva mixed with the food, which may go far in aiding more complete digestion.

The Drive Well Patent Void.

The drive well patent, which has been a source of both loss and annoyance to farmers in many sections of the country, and which has heretofore been sustained by the supreme court, has been declared void. This decision was based on the record in the case of Andrews, Green and others against George Hosey, brought to Washington by an appeal from the United States circuit court for the southern district of Iowa. This court holds that the fact now made to appear for the first time in the drive well litigation that the invention was for the first time used at Cortland, N. Y., by others than Green, more than two years before the application for the patent was made, is fatal to the patent's validity.

The Christmas Turkey.

Turkeys designed for the holiday market, or, indeed, to grace the festive board at home, ought to be confined now in clean, warm pens and given plenty to eat. Corn meal and sweet potatoes cooked together make an admirable breakfast, on which the birds will fatten rapidly, the meat at the same time gaining a fine flavor.

The Fat Stock Show.

The fat stock shows have increased in popularity with each year, and it is safe to say that the tenth annual exhibition recently held in Chicago, Ills., stands ahead of the shows that have preceded it. The different states were well represented and the show of stock was a large one, with the quality of the exhibits quite up to the standard. Shorthorns took the sweepstakes for the best single animal and several of the prizes in special classes. The Aberdeen Angus took the award for the best herd shown. The exhibition of grades or crossbred animals was an interesting one.

The horse show held in connection with the fat stock show, although a recent feature, proved one of the finest exhibits of the kind ever made in this country. The exhibits in the various draft classes were very fine and there were also some attractive specimens of the American trotter—Cleveland bays, carriage and park horses. The draft horses represented the Percheron, Clyde, English shire, French draft, Belgian, etc.

A TAMWORTH SOW.

In the swine exhibit there were seventeen exhibitors with about 100 animals all told, including Poland-Chinas, Berkshires, Victorias, Duroc-Jerseys, Essexs, Suffolks, Yorkshires, Chester Whites, two Gothlands, one Tamworth, with various grades and crosses. The heaviest hog on exhibition was Sir Robert, a Tamworth, 5 years old and belonging to Thomas Bennett, Rossville, Ills. The weight of this animal was 960 pounds.

The sheep exhibit was a fairly good one; a novelty was the Dorset horned. Downs were well represented. There was a very creditable show of swine. The poultry show was immense, and included every known breed.

The premium list is said to have reached this year $17,000. Next year the word "fat" will be omitted from the name of the show, and the exhibition will include not only fat cattle, but breeding cattle as well.

Here and There.

At the National Beekeepers' convention in Chicago, Dr. A. B. Mason, of Toledo, O., was elected president for the ensuing year. The next annual convention will be held at Cleveland.

The lowest yield reported to the department of agriculture from the great corn states is from Kansas, where the estimate is only twelve bushels per acre.

Dakota reports a larger apple crop than the average.

Mr. C. J. Wetmore, secretary of the California board of state viticultural commissioners, reports the wine crop as a light one, about 15,000,000, and the raisin crop at from 750,000 to 800,000 boxes.

Truck farmers throughout southern Louisiana are making extensive preparations for the coming season. It is reported that 2,000 acres will be planted in strawberries, besides a large area in fruit trees and early vegetables of all kinds.

The cranberry crop is some 60,000 bushels less than was that of last year.

A Harlem lady bought a pair of hose in a small store for which she paid $1. When she reached home she discovered that there was a hole in the heel of one of them. Three days afterward, when she had occasion to pass the store, she returned the hose, saying: "There is a hole in the heel of one of these stockings. I wish you would exchange them."

The storekeeper examined them and handed them back, saying: "My dear lady, ve cannot exchange dem. You should haf returned dem immediately. You can darn dot hole up."

The lady indignantly took up the stockings and started out, when her steps were arrested by the proprietor calling out:

"Mrs. Brown, excuse me, but that dollar that you gave me had a hole in it."

"Is that so? Well, sir, you can just darn the hole up. Good day, sir."—New York Evening Sun.

BILL NYE IN WASHINGTON.

His Financial Embarrassments Briefly Touched Upon in a Personal Letter.

[Personal.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
ALONG TOWARDS MORNING, 1887.

Cashier World Office, New York:

MY DEAR SIR—You will doubtless be surprised when I left New York that I would write you at all while here. But I now take pen in hand to say that the senate and house of representatives are having a good deal of fun with me, and hope you are enjoying the same great blessing. You will wonder at first why I send in my expense account before I send anything for the paper, but I will explain that to you when I get back. At first I thought I would not bother with the expense account till I got to your office, but I [illegible] so that it is going to worry me to get there unless I hear from you favorably by return mail.

When I came here I fell into the mad whirl of society, and attracted a good deal of attention by my cultivated ways and Jeffersonian method of sleeping with a different member of congress every night.

Congressmen and their wives are daily landing at the great national Castle Garden and looking wildly around for the place where they are told they will get their mileage. On every hand all is hurry and excitement. Bills are being introduced, acquaintances renewed and punch bowls are beginning to wear a preoccupied air.

I have been mingling with society ever since I came here, and that is one reason I have written very little for publication and did not send what I did write.

Yesterday afternoon my money gave out at 3:20, and since that my mind has been clearer and society has made fewer demands [illegible] At first I thought I would obtain employment at the treasury department as exchange editor in the greenback room. Then I remembered that I would get very faint before I could go through a competitive examination, and, in the mean time, I might lose social cast by wearing my person on the outside of my clothes. So I have resolved to write you a chatty letter about Washington, assuring you that I am well and asking you to kindly consider the inclosed tabulated bill of expenses, as I need the money to buy Christmas presents and get home with.

My idea was that board and lodgings would be the main items of expense, but I struck a low priced place where, by clubbing together with some plain gentlemen from a distance who have been waiting here three years for political recognition, and who do not feel like surrounding themselves with a hotel, we get a plain room with six beds in it. The room overlooks the District of Columbia, and the first man in has the choice of beds, with the privilege of inviting friends to a limited number. We lunch plainly in the lower part of the building in a standing position, without restraint or finger bowls. So board is not the principal item of expense, though of course I do not wish to put up at a place where I will be a disgrace to the paper.

I wish that you would, when you send my check, write me frankly whether you think I had better remain here during the entire session or not. I like the place first rate, but my duties keep me up nights till a late hour, and I cannot sleep during the day, because my room mates annoy me by doing their washing and ironing over an oil stove. I know by what several friends have said to me that congress would like to have me stay here all winter, but I want to do what is best for the paper.

I saw Mr. Cleveland briefly last evening at his house, but he was surrounded by a crowd of fawning sycophants, so I did not get a chance to speak to him as I would like to, and don't know as he would have advanced the amount to me anyway. He is very firm and stubborn, I judged, and won't yield very little indeed, especially to

Yours truly, BILL NYE.

I will probably remain here until I hear from you favorably. I have met several members of congress for whom I have voted at various times, off and on, but they were cold and haughty in their intercourse with me. I have been invited to sit on the floor of the house until I get some other place to stay, but I hate to ride a free horse to death.—New York World. BILL NYE.

Walter White, brother of Doc's, is spending the vacation at his home in Bedford.

Henry Scoville visited his sister, Mrs. Joseph Cochran, the first of the week.

Chas. W. Myers, a former employe in the woolen mills, now of Jonesville, spent a few days in town this week.

Edgar Halladay of Napoleon, visited his relatives here this week.

We are happy to announce the safe return of our mutual friend Geo. VanGelson, who has been making an overland trip as far north as Lansing. He is looking as fresh as a rose.

Chas. Johnston and family of Detroit, are spenting the holidays here.

Chas. Larzelere of Dowagiac took Christmas dinner with his daughters, Mesdames Brooks and Cornice.

Will McDermott, eldest son of our popular drayman Andrew McDermott who has been gone for several years, is making his friends a most welcome visit. Will has changed greatly and many of his old friends do not recognize him at first.

Miss Kate Millspaugh, who has been at an Uncle's near Jackson, for a long time, is making her people a visit and brought a cousin with her.

John T. Clark was in town Tuesday.

The smiling face of Stewart VanDeMark was seen on our streets Monday and Tuesday, as he was calling on friends here.

Mrs. Hixson has been making her friends in Tecumseh a visit through the Christmas tide.

Geo. P. Wright, who is visiting his old home, occupied the pulpit Sunday evening at the union meeting, at the Baptist church. His sermon was most appropriate for the day and season and was listened to with close attention by the large congregation present.

Chas. T. Clark has been passing a few days with his sister, Mrs. Tuttle.

Mrs. Lizzie VanDeMark left Monday for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Ford in Chicago, whose eldest daughter was married Tuesday evening.

Frank Dorr spent Xmas in Detroit with his sister, Mrs. C. H. Fisk.

Jerome Richmond and wife of Jackson, and Lathan Miller and family of Chelsea, were at their mother Richmond's for the Christmas season.

Ed. Rose, who is passing the Holidays here, arrived just in time to assist the ladies in decorating the church, and we are informed rendered valuable assistance.

Libbie Jacobs, who is living in J. T. Clark's family at Claireview, is home for a two week's visit.

Little Louise Clark is visiting her grandma and aunties.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fabrique a son Friday Dec. 23d. '87.

Mrs. Carrie Tyler of Hillsdale, sister of Ben C. Ellis, is spending the holiday season visiting her relatives here.

The Christmas exercises at the M. E. Church and St. John's Episcopal church Saturday evening, passed off very pleasantly, the little ones rendering the carols in a pleasing manner, and in all they did acquitted themselves with great credit. The trees presented brilliant pictures with their varied colored gifts. It was worth infinitely more than the cost to see the bright faces and sparkling eyes of the children as their names were called out and they received the little gifts furnished by teachers and friends.

Irving Clark and wife of Saline, visited Will Ward and wife the first part of the week.

Several of our young people attended the concert and party at Tecumseh Monday evening. They pronounce the concert fine and the party a recherche affair. Some very elegant toilets were displayed by the ladies. We hope it proved as great a financial success as it was a social one.

Telegrams were received Monday evening, announcing the death at Bristow, Kansas, of Mrs. Judson Linden, nee Mary Dell. Although it was known she was very sick, yet the news of her death was a great shock to her relatives and friends. Her remains will be brought here for interment and will probably reach here Thursday afternoon or Friday noon. The funeral will be held some time Sunday. Mary was a fine type of woman and Judson has the heartfelt sympathy of all in this his terrible bereavement.

Geo. W. Kishpaugh, M. D. of Carleton, Mich., is spending the holidays with his parents and friends.

Mame Bradner is visiting friends in Detroit.

Eva Shuman has gone to spend New Years with her people at Petersburg.

The St. John's festival at Masonic Hall, Tuesday evening, drew together a large number of people socially inclined, and the evening was enjoyed by all present. The tables were nicely dressed and the menu was very fine.

Carrie Keyser is visiting in Detroit.

Eliza Green arrived in town Tuesday much improved in health.

Mrs. June has a sister and husband visiting her from Canada.

Lizzie Schmitt from the northern part of the state, is at Doctor White's to see her sister Katie, who is ill.

Mrs. D. R. Gibson is spending the [illegible]

Emma Saxton, who is teaching at Grand Ledge, Michigan, is spending the vacation with her family.

The schools that were closed on account of sickness are to commence again next Monday.

On account of the illness of Mrs. A. O. Miller, they canceled their engagement here Wednesday eve.

Williams & McDonald, the evangelists, who spent Christmas with friends in Milan, returned Wednesday noon and resumed their meetings at the Baptist church in the evening.

S. W. Demuth made a business trip to Detroit this week.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Beautiful winter weather so far.

Edith Cornell is slowly recovering from a very sick spell.

We learn from a letter from friends, that Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ramaly's little boy and only child, who has been sick for several weeks with typhoid fever, and of whom but little hopes of recovery seemed possible, is slowly on the gain.

W. H. Arner is a little better at present.

On account of an article in the Journal several days since a report was circulated that Ex-Postmaster Santus was found near Saginaw in a dying condition with no hopes of recovery, but we are glad through Wm. Campbell of St. John's, to learn that he is near Maple Rapids working on a farm.

Waring, of the firm of Waring & Potter, went to Detroit, Monday on business.

S. H. & W. B. Linn have been agents here to buy stave bolts and heading the present winter; they wish to purchase 1000 cords.

Mrs. W. H. and Geo. Arner attended the wedding of her niece, Miss Emma Schreder of Clinton to Lewis Waldron of Tecumseh, on Thursday evening of last week.

Mr. Waynright of Washingtonville Ohio, called at Samuel Barlow's, on Wednesday for a few hours.

Dr. D. W. Loree and wife left Saturday for a holiday visit with relatives at Detroit, Ionia and Fenwich.

Martin Palmer and Dean Loree are home from Flat Rock, spending their holiday vacation.

Prof. J. D. Huston and wife left for Cerryhill to spend their holiday vacation with his parents.

Mrs. A. J. Sisson visited friends at Dundee, Saturday, and Lula her daughter, is in Monroe, visiting her friend Miss Nelson, this week.

Mrs. Edna Barneby of Dakota, is at her aunts, Mrs. Susan Clark's.

Will Smith, an amateur sportsman, while exhibiting his science, had his gun blown to pieces by being overloaded; fortunately no one was hurt.

The W. F. M. S. will hold their regular monthly meeting at the lecture room of the church, on next Wednesday afternoon at 3 P. M. for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. No refreshments will be served, but a cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

Hattie Holloway and Edith Burns of Tipton, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Helm Tuesday.

Abbie Barrett is home on a visit at present.

Ace Smith has returned from Grand Ledge, where he visited his daughter, Mrs. Brown.

R. T. Bush and sons, Weddie and Irving, came out on a visit last week and will spend a few days here.

Lou Arner spent Saturday, Sunday and Monday with relatives and friends in Tecumseh.

The entertainment given at Cottage Hall last Friday evening, by the L. C. S was well attended and the exercises passed off successfully. The song by little Fen Van Duser, was extra for a little six year old. The juveniles as usual held their own, but the stars of the evening were the Crescent quartette singers, it being their first appearance in public, and they did splendid; they were encored very heartily and enthusiastically and again made their appearance amidst cheers. The entertainment closed with a tableau of an eclipse on the Crescent. The society realized $14.50, for which they are very grateful to the public.

The farmer's club that was to be held at W. P. Cadmus' next Wednesday evening, has been changed to Cottage Hall, on account of unavoidable circumstances. A short program is being prepared to be carried out at the time and will be free. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to be present. By order of Pres.

[illegible] the Library building this week Saturday evening. A fine program will be carried out. Miss Hayden and the Crescent quartette singers will assist on the musical part of the Program.

A new run has been put on the C. J. & M. between here and Tecumseh. It has no schedule time but runs wild and against everything; its time is one hour and five minutes. It is somewhat complicated, the engine is a two-driver with the latest improvements on the cars; the tender is a self-regulator. The train is made up of a mail and baggage car, a smoker, a first-class coach and sleeper, and will be known as the Potter accommodation. For full information enquire of Jesse Potter, Gen'l Supt. 1st. Div. who will explain the convenience of the new run. You will have to secure a stem winding Rockford watch in order to be in time, as it runs on Rockford time.

PUBLIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The Hall Library Association will give a literary and musical entertainment at the Library building, on New Year's eve. with the following program:

Music.
Devotional Exercises.
Music—Vocal Duet.
Inaugural Address—Dr. D. W. Loree.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

School resumed last Monday, after a two week's vacation.

M. J. Martin returned from attending the State Grange last Tuesday, and reports having a good time and making several desirable visits.

The raffling match at Tom Butler's Christmas eve, disposed of 30 or 40 fowls and fifty cans of oysters. There was also a raffle at Ed. Densmore's.

Miss Maud Easlick is down with scarlet fever.

Mrs. H. D. Johnson and Mrs. Ed. Miller are out from Sanford, to spend the holidays.

Mrs. L. C. Grady of Caro, and Mrs. O. Stevens of St. Charles, arrived here Saturday for a holiday visit.

Wm. W. Osgood and wife, Mrs. G. V. and Mrs. L. Osgood started for St. John's Saturday to remain over holidays. Misses Susie Osgood and Josie Clarkson started for Bay City Monday and will take in St. John's during their holiday vacation.

FARMER'S COUNCIL

About 50 persons met at A. Easlick's Tuesday evening, Dec. 20th, and completed the organization by adopting a constitution and electing the following named persons as officers of the council:

President—H. Williams.
Vice President—A. Easlick.
Secretary—Miss Rose Easlick.
Treasurer—Mrs. Minnie Cadmus.
Ex. Com.—B. F. DePuy, Kit Clark and W. P. Cadmus.

From the lateness of the hour only the musical part of the program was carried out. The next meeting will be held at Cottage Hall, Ridgeway, Wednesday eve, Jan. 4th, 1888, with the following program:

Music—Choir.
Rec.—Aggie Stewart.
Read.—Lulu Rappleye.
Music—Rose Easlick.
Dec.—David Gibson.
Music—J. D. Arner.
Question-box, under the supervision of the Ex. Com.

MACON MUSIC.

Christmas was generally observed here on Saturday, there being many home gatherings and presents made that day.

Will Reed's brother from Ohio, is spending the Holidays with him.

Ira Coller moved on the Garrett Aten farm last week, his father having recently purchased it.

Silas Austin returned from Ann Arbor last Friday. He had his foot treated successfully and is doing as well as could be expected.

The Macon Normal students are at home spending holidays.

Frank Augustus and wife of Ypsilanti, spent Christmas at his mothers.

Mr. Kline of Iowa, is visiting his cousin, Bertie Sage.

H. Niblack of Clinton and C. E. Triplet and wife of Tecumseh, attended services here Sunday afternoon. They expect to return to Washington the last of this week.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Jno. Campell has been making his parents at Wampler's Lake a visit this week.

E. E. Lyon from Wis. is visiting at the residence of his uncle, W. J. Holdridge.

Alice Bethel attended the duties of the station at this place last Saturday while her sister Adda made her parents at Willis, a short but pleasant visit.

Owing to the fact that Christmas came on Sunday, the section men were pleased to receive a message Monday morning that they might have the rest of the day to themselves.

Died, Dec. 24th, at his residence, one half mile west and one-quarter north of this village. William Wickwire. Deceased has been an invalid for seven years and confined to the bed for the last five years of the time.

A Bently from Toledo, has been visiting friends here for a week or so past.

May Satterthwaite, who is attending school at Hanover, spent Christmas with her brother and sisters at this place.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Lucy Payne has been very much worse since our last writing, but is now out of danger.

Mrs. M. A. Spears of Eaton Rapids, is visiting her brother, R. Taylor.

Mike Cummins and family, of Jackson, spent Christmas at his father's.

Parties from near Adrian were baling hay for John Burtless last week.

Some of our young people gave Watson Hunt and wife a surprise last Friday evening. A good time is reported.

Fred Davenport and wife are moving into Alanson Upkike's house.

Howard McCollum went to Addison Saturday, to spend Christmas with Rev. O. Winton.

Christmas has come and gone, and some of us breathe a sigh of relief over the prospect of the disappearance of that detestable "Xmas," which so offends good taste, every holiday season. Now, if Holloway and the other place would only drop their controversy.

Yon sturdy oak whose branches wide
Boldly the storms and winds defy,
Not long ago an acorn, small,
Lay dormant 'neath the summer sky.

Not unlike the thrifty oak in its germ, development and growth, is consumption. But even this mighty foe of mankind, positively yields to the wonderful curative properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery if taken early. Don't be blind to your own interests and think yours a hopeless case. This remarkable remedy has rescued thousands. Of druggists.

A ST. LOUIS MYSTERY.

A Married Man Brought Home in a Dying Condition.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 24.—Henry Altevogt, grocer, whose place of business and home are at Lucas and Twentieth street, left Monday evening to attend a lodge meeting. His wife says he had $300 in his pocket. Nothing was heard of him until Friday morning about 5 o'clock, when Mrs. Altevogt heard a noise at the door. Looking out of the window she saw three men run away, leaving a fourth against the door. She asked who was there, and a feeble voice said: "Me." She went down and found her husband soaked in blood and bleeding. She succeeded in getting him upstairs. Examination showed he had [illegible] would raise no statement. Morning his wounds. Only 35 cents was found in his pockets. Friday night at 11 o'clock he died, never having told any one who cut him. When he returned home he had all his clothing on, but his coat and vest were unbuttoned. His shirt and undershirt were cut all to pieces, but there was not a single cut in either the coat or vest. It is a hideous mystery.

Congressman Moffatt's District.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 24.—The state department was officially notified Friday of the vacancy in the Eleventh district, caused by the death of Congressman Moffatt. Governor Luce will probably defer calling the election until after the holidays. Already the race for succession has organized. The Hon. Jay A. Hubbell, State Senator Seymour, and Judge C. B. Grant are mentioned as upper peninsula candidates, with chances favorable to the latter. The nomination will undoubtedly go to that section of the district. A telegram from Washington City says the body of the lead representative left there Friday at 5:10 p. m., accompanied by the congressional delegation.

S. C. MOFFATT.

Judge Leffingwell, of Iowa, Dead.

CLINTON, Iowa, Dec. 24.—A. J. Leffingwell, one of the three judges of the district composed of Jackson, Clinton, Scott, and Muscatine counties, died at the Decker house, Maquoketa, at 5:20 a. m. Thursday, of inflammation of the bowels, after an illness of three days. He came from Sag Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., in 1832. His parents brought him to Muscatine county when 6 years old, where he spent his boyhood, and where he was later admitted to the bar, going into partnership with Harry O'Connor in 1861. He was a Democrat and a member of the Odd Fellows, United Workmen and Iowa Legion of Honor societies.

The Fatal Misunderstanding Again.

MASON CITY, Ia., Dec. 23.—Two passenger trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road collided about ten miles west of Calmar at an early hour Wednesday morning. Both trains were running at a high rate of speed. Both engines and two cars were overturned and piled up in confusion. Engineer Loup and his firemen, Brannigan, both of this city, were caught in the debris and it was over three hours before they could be extricated. Neither can live. The baggagemen on both trains were badly injured. The accident was the result of a misunderstanding of the time-table.

Two Disastrous Fires.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—At 2:25 Friday morning a telegram was received here stating that Winkelmeyer's brewery at St. Louis, one of the largest in the west, was burning. The entire fire department had been called out and there were no hopes of saving the building.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 2.—The dry-goods store of F. W. Ruff & Co. took fire Thursday night and raged until 1 a. m. Friday, when it was got under control, but the building and stock were destroyed. The loss is about $45,000; insurance, $34,000.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Several thousand men have been thrown out of employment by the closing of the Edgar Thomson steel works at Braddock, Pa.

At a meeting of the Central Traffic association Tuesday it was decided to advance freight rates from Chicago to the seaboard 10 per cent., the new tariff to take effect on Jan. 2.

An offer of 50 cents on $1 has been made by Searle, Vanneman & Co., bankrupt jobbers of white goods and notions at Philadelphia. The liabilities are $259,200, and the assets $170,000.

The Sioux Falls extension of the Illinois Central railroad, from Cherokee, Iowa, to Sioux Falls, D. T., is finished, and the first train went over the line Monday.

S. H. Frank & Co., retail dry goods at Toledo, Ohio, failed Tuesday, after filing chattle mortgages covering the stock for $45,000.

The gross earnings of the New York Central road for the year ending Sept. 30 were $[illegible], and the net earnings $[illegible]. The surplus is $1,570,356.

There were 261 business failures in the United States during the last week, and 30 in Canada.

Two mortgages for $10,000,000 each were recently placed on file in the recorder's office of Mercer county, Pennsylvania. They are on the New York & Pennsylvania railroad company, and given to New York parties. One occupies forty-three and the other fifty pages.

TRAVELERS IN PERIL.

TWO RAILWAY DISASTERS AND MANY PEOPLE WOUNDED.

But by Miraculous Good Fortune the Death List Is Light—A Train Load of Excursionists Piled in a Heap—Wonderful Escape of a Babe—Lists of the Victims—Losses of Life at Sea.

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—At 1:45 o'clock Friday morning the Pacific express to Chicago on the Minnesota & Northwestern railroad, met with a terrible accident after crossing Otter creek, between Tomah Valley and Melton stations, about twenty-six miles north of this city. The train was composed of the engine, tender, baggage, emigrant, two coaches, one first-class day coach, a Pullman buffet car, and three sleepers. There were about 150 passengers on the train, over seventy of whom occupied the sleepers and parlor car, while the remainder were divided between the emigrant and first-class day coaches. At the time of the accident the train was running at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. After crossing Otter creek the road curves south, there is a curve, and it was upon this that the accident took place. The rails not spread, but the engine and tender passed over safely.

The bridge over Otter creek is about fifteen feet high, and the locomotive had only proceeded about two hundred feet when the wheels of the tender jumped the track. The baggage, emigrant and first-class cars were thrown off the track in the shape of a triangle on one side of the track. Two of the sleepers were thrown on their sides on the other side, while the buffet-car lay at the end of a pile of the overturned sleepers, one of the sleepers [illegible] the track with its [illegible] engine until it reached the cut, about 1,000 feet from the bridge, where it came to a final stop in a snow drift. The emigrant sleeper [illegible] along on its wild career even after its trucks were gone, and plowed through the mud for at least four lengths, filling it nearly half full of dirt. The ends of the car were crushed out, and it fell on its side. The first-class car was also overturned, and the ends of all the cars were broken out, while the steps were twisted out of shape.

All of the passengers received a very severe shaking up, and about thirty were hurt more or less, but only one, so far as known, was dangerously injured. This was a lady from Winnipeg, who was hurt in the back and sides. She was left at a farm-house near the scene of the accident, and it is believed that her injuries will prove fatal. The passengers were mostly excursionists from Winnipeg en route to Canada to spend Christmas.

As soon as the passengers were able to extricate themselves from the wreck, a number of them went to Melton station to telegraph their friends of the accident, but that they were s[illegible]. The operator refused to send their messages, though some of them were of the most urgent character. No relief train arrived until 3 o'clock, the cars with surgeons, etc., being attached to the regular day express north. As soon as possible after the arrival of the train the passengers were transferred to new cars and taken to Chicago, where they arrived at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening. Miss Frankie Hune, of Dubuque, Ia., who was badly hurt about the head and hips, was quite cheerful. She was in the day coach and was thrown over twice, landing on the head of Mr. Hanna, of Manitoba.

Little James Cagley, who was with his father, is but 5 years old, and received a very severe scalp wound, but will recover. The little fellow was very patient, though suffering severely.

Mr. B. F. Mason, of Minneapolis, has a badly cut head. He was rather too weak to say much about the accident.

The following is the list of the wounded: D. C. Abraham, Minneapolis, wrist cut; A. Scromgrom, St. Paul, wrist and thigh bruised and scratched; A. Kemp, Devil's Lake, D. T., bruised on head; Mrs. Morwood, Forest River, D. T., cut on the head. Mrs. Archibald Chisholm, knee sprained; Mrs. James Brett, Park River, D. T., back sprained; Ada H. Tuttle, Minneapolis, arm sprained and slightly scratched on the limbs and face; B. F. Mason, Minneapolis, severe scalp wound and left leg badly bruised; Mrs. B. F. Mason, bruised on shoulder and contusion on back of head; John Costello, Minto, D. T., left shoulder and arm bruised; Mr. Cagley, Minto, D. T., knee sprained; James A. Ward, Minneapolis, several slight bruises; E. A. Lilly, Minneapolis, bruised on head; A. Feltenstein, Chicago, right foot cut; Miss Frank Hune, contusions on head and arm, and hip seriously injured; W. L. Hoover, Bottineau, D. T., face and arm badly scratched; Walter Seeter, St. Paul, slight contusions on head, arm and knee; Mrs. D. McBayne, Bottineau, Dak., cut on left wrist; Daniel Vollick, Le Sueur, Minn., bruised on back of head; F. W. Young, Chicago, left leg injured; James A. Cunningham, Leedsburg, Dak., breast and back of head bruised; Thomas Atkinson, Willow City, Dak., shoulders and neck bruised; Mrs. L. C. McIntyre, Winnepeg, slightly injured; C. F. Andrews, St. Paul, right hand cut; C. Girdlestone, cut on cheek bone and knee bruised; Mrs. M. Conway, Winnipeg, bruises on head and arm badly cut; Andrew Laing, Pembina, right shoulder hurt; Engineer Fish, Moose River, D. T., cut with glass and hip injured by water-tank; Alexander Forbes, Nova Scotia, cut in head and shoulder; A. F. Broad, Freeport, Ills., seven cuts in head and legs and burned; Mrs. Maher, Cavalier county, Dakota, left side badly bruised; Mrs. John McGuffin, hip and back badly bruised and injured internally.

BROKE A GOOD RECORD.

Fatal Disaster on the Wisconsin Central—A Babe's Miraculous Escape.

ASHLAND, Wis., Dec. 24.—The Wisconsin Central line broke its record Thursday night, and had an accident of importance. As the train that leaves Ashland at 7:50 o'clock for Milwaukee approached Coleidge, a small station, a broken rail was encountered which threw the sleeping car and first and second class coaches from the track, the baggage car and engine remaining on the road-bed. The cars were filled with passengers, and but a few escaped without injuries of more or less importance. One man was killed. His name was Montie. He got on the train at Butternut. He attempted to get out of a window when he felt the uneven motion of the train, and was caught under the car and crushed to a jelly. Conductor C. H. Greenfolo, who was passing through the train, was caught in the shower of falling debris and held a prisoner between two timbers. He was rescued but is thought to be fatally hurt. His injuries are internal. His leg is broken.

The others badly injured are: Thomas Mooney, Ashland, terribly bruised, will recover; Thomas Schoeider, Ashland, has a frightful gash in the head and is badly scratched; Mr. Clemens, wife and three children, Duluth, all badly bruised; M. Mahoney, Ashland, received bad cuts; Mrs. Sullivan, wife of Conductor Sullivan, en route to Stevens Point, received serious injuries to her head, her scalp being laid open; Mr. Mucklonoquox, residence unknown, seriously hurt; Mr. Moody, Eau Claire, and Mr. Connel, Chippewa Falls, were also injured.

Superintendent Wolford was in the sleeper, but escaped unharmed. Passengers who arrived here Friday noon credit him with great coolness and presence of mind in extinguishing fires that started in the coaches. Three section crews and crews of other trains were secured in short order. Mrs. Sullivan's little baby was thought to have been killed, but was found under a bundle of bedding in the sleeper. Berths over it were jammed into a heap. The little one was unharmed and the joy of the mother at finding her babe was intense.

In Love's Harness.

Most women naturally look forward to matrimony as their proper sphere in life. But they should constantly keep in mind that a fair, rosy face, bright eyes, and a healthy, well-developed form are the best passports to a happy marriage. All those wasting disorders, weaknesses, "dragging down" sensations, and functional irregularities peculiar to their sex, have an unfailing specific in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle, wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

THREE HARD-FOUGHT ROUNDS.

Paddy Ryan Knocked Out by Joe McAuliffe at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 24.—Paddy Ryan and Joe McAuliffe came from their training quarters and met in the eighteen-foot ring of the California Athletic club Friday night. Both men appeared to be in fine condition. McAuliffe, who is a young, strapping, fair-haired machinist, 23 years old, was trained down so that his six feet two of athletic humanity seemed all bone and muscle. Ryan carried a trifle too much flesh, but though he hurt his hand on Patsy Carroll's head the other day while exercising, he looked fit to fight a hard battle, and was very confident. The fight began at 10 o'clock and McAuliffe won in three of the worst-fought rounds possible to imagine. In the second round Ryan was knocked down twice. The third round was all a scramble. Ryan was groggy, and McAuliffe was too awkward to hit him. Ryan threw up the sponge on the fourth round being called. His truss slipped in the first round.

PADDY RYAN.

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems, at first only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free. Large bottles $1.

White Swelling.

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, one of the best known insurance men in North Carolina, writes from Winston, as follows: "Ever since I was seven years of age I have had what the doctors call hip disease, and which I call white swelling. My hip was drawn out of place. There was a swelling at the knee-joint, where there is a profuse running, which has been there for years. Of course this has greatly depleted my system, together with surgical operation on the leg bone. I tried every known blood purifier to build up my system, but none did me good until I took S. S. S. I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enables me to stand the long, trying, enervating, hot summer days. To me there is no such medicine for purifying the blood and building up the wasted system as S. S. S. On using it I soon became strong of body and easy of mind. My color changed from a pale, worn look to a healthy, robust complexion."

Mr. G. N. Frizzel, of Farmersville, Texas, writes: "About August 1st, 1885, an eruption appeared on my arms and legs, which pained me much and seemed to affect my physical condition generally. On the advice of a physician at this place, I finally commenced using Swift's Specific. I am glad to say that after using three large bottles the sores have all healed."

Salvation Oil is the greatest pain destroyer of the age. It speedily annihilates pain, whether from a cut, bruise, scald, burn, frost-bite, or from a wound of any other kind. Price only 25 cents.

Sick headache is readily cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones and regulates the digestion, and creates an appetite.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, careless, nervous, easily irritated, hard to please, with poor appetite, and mentally like a person who has committed some great error? Have you a dull pain in the head, with occasional dizziness, fullness or bloating after eating, or of gnawing hunger, or emptiness of stomach, at the mouth a bad taste, and a coated tongue, followed by headache, blurred eyesight, floating specks before the eyes, irritable temper, nervous prostration, irregularity of bowels, hot flashes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, fretful pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have a few of the above symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Chronic Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and [illegible]

MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS. The cabinet organ was introduced in its present form by Mason & Hamlin in 1861. Other makers followed in the manufacture of these instruments, but the Mason & Hamlin organs have always maintained their supremacy as the best in the world.
Mason & Hamlin offer, as demonstration of the unequaled excellence of their organs, the fact that at all of the great World's Exhibitions, since that of Paris, 1867, in competition with best makers of all countries, they have invariably taken the highest honors. Illustrated catalogue free.
PIANOS Mason & Hamlin's Piano Stringer was introduced by them in 1882, and has been pronounced by experts the "greatest improvement in pianos in half a century."
A circular, containing testimonials from three hundred purchasers, musicians and tuners, sent together with descriptive catalogue, to any applicant. Pianos and organs sold for cash or easy payments; also rented.

Letter from the Assistant Foreman of the "Delivery Department—Subject in which Thousands are deeply Concerned.

About five years ago I suffered from painful urination and great pain and weakness in the lower part of my back, pain in the limbs, bad taste in the mouth, disgust at food, and great mental and bodily depression.

I live at 241 York st., Jersey City, and on arriving home one night I found a copy of the Shaker Almanac that had been left during the day. I read the article, "What is the Disease that is coming Upon Us?" It described my symptoms and feelings better than I could if I had written a whole book. My trouble was—indeed "like a thief in the night," for it had been stealing upon me unawares for years. I sent for a bottle of Shaker Extract of Roots or Siegel's Syrup, and before I had taken one-half of it I felt the welcome relief. In a few weeks I was like my old self. I enjoyed and digested my food. My kidneys soon recovered tone and strength, and the urinary troubles vanished. I was well.

Millions of people need some medicine simply to act on the bowels. To them I commend Shaker Extract in the strongest possible terms. It is the gentlest, pleasantest, safest and surest purgative in this world. The most delicate women and children may take it. One point more: I have all the more confidence in this medicine because it is prepared by the Shakers. I may claim to be a religious man myself and I admire the Shakers for their zeal, consistency and strict business integrity. What they make may be trusted by the public. W. H. HALL.

FOR HONOR'S SAKE.

Miss White's cab stopped at Victoria station, and we stopped also.

"She's a smart looking woman, sir," whispered Fowler to me.

"She has a splendid complexion," I remarked.

"Put on, sir," said Fowler smiling—"put on. Leave a lady's maid alone to learn the tricks of the trade."

Ida White purchased a first class ticket for Epsom Downs, and we did the same. Had I followed my own judgment I should have avoided the carriage in which Miss White travelled, but Fowler pushed me in before him, and got in afterward, and, being under his command, I did not hesitate. He had purchased a number of newspapers, and shortly after we started he surprised me by opening a conversation with a stranger. He spoke with a Lancashire accent, and I should have been deceived by his voice had he not been sitting by my side. The subject, of course, was the Derby, and he appeared to be eager to obtain information as to the merits and chances of the various runners.

Meanwhile, Miss White, who had also purchased every sporting paper she saw, had taken from her pocket a racing guide, in which the performances of the horses were recorded. She studied this guide with great seriousness, and was continually consulting the newspapers to ascertain how far the opinions of the sporting prophets agreed with the information of the authority with which she had provided herself. "So," thought I, "this young woman, whose whole soul seems wrapped up in racing matters, is the same young woman who in court declared that she hated races and betting men." Before we were half an hour on our journey I felt perfectly at ease in her presence. It was clear that she considered herself safe, and among strangers. The conversation between Fowler and the gentleman became more animated; others joined in, and I observed that Miss White's attention was attracted to their utterances. Every now and then she made a memorandum in a small metallic book, and before we arrived at Epsom Downs she allowed herself to be drawn into conversation, and freely expressed her opinions upon the horses that were to run for the blue ribbon of the turf. I did not venture to address her, but Fowler had no fear, and extracted from her the names of the horses she believed to have the best chances. He slapped his thigh, and declared that he should back them.

We alighted at Epsom Downs and rode to the race course. The great rush of the day had not yet set in, but, although the grand stand was scarcely a third part filled, there were already many there who had taken up a favorable position from which to see the principal race of the day. Fowler improved upon his acquaintance with Miss White, and I obeyed the instructions he managed to convey to me not to stick too close to him. I did not lose sight of him, however, and presently he came and said to me, in an undertone, "It's all right, sir; I'm making headway. I've told her where I came from in Lancashire, and that I am a single man with a goodish bit of property which has just fallen to me through the death of my father. I've given her my card—I had some printed yesterday in case they might be wanted. We are going up stairs to have a bit of luncheon before the races commence."

Up stairs we went to the luncheon room, where Fowler called for a bottle of dry champagne, in which we drank good luck to each other. It was only by great exertions that we managed, after much to squeeze ourselves into the grand stand. The crush was terrific up the narrow stairs, and Miss Ida White would have fared badly had it not been for Fowler's gallant attentions.

I have no intention to describe the race. It presented all the usual features of a Derby, to which I paid but little heed, my attention being concentrated upon Miss Ida White. She was greatly excited. There were some bookmakers on the grand stand shouting out the odds, and she must have invested at least a dozen sovereigns on different horses, the odds against which ranged from 40 to 60 to 1.

The race was over. Melton was hailed the winner. I knew that Miss White had not backed Melton for a shilling, and I watched the effect the result of the race had upon her. Her lips quivered, her eyes glared furiously about. "Ida is an angel, is she!" thought I. "Ah! not much of the angel there."

A stampede commenced to the lower ground. The grand stand was half empty. Then it was that I saw a man who had just come up give a secret look of intelligence to Fowler, after which he strolled a few paces away, and stood with his back toward Miss White. Fowler joined him with a negligent air, and very soon returned.

"I am very sorry you lost," he said to Miss White, "and quite as sorry that I must wish you good by."

He took her aside and had a brief conversation with her, in the course of which [illegible] which her fingers instantly closed. Shaking hands with her, he beckoned to me, and we left the grand stand.

"What did you give her?" I asked.

"Only a card," he said, "with an address in London to which she could write to me if she felt inclined. I told her that I had never seen a lady I admired so much, and that I hoped she would give me the opportunity of becoming friends with her. In an honorable way—oh, quite in an honorable way," he added, with a laugh.

"And where are you leaving her for now?" I inquired.

"Because I know where Mr. Eustace Rutland is to be found," he replied. "It will take two or three hours to get to the place, and I suppose it is best to lose no time."

"Decidedly the best," I said; "but how about Ida White?"

"She is safe enough. My men are all around her. She won't be left for an instant, wherever she may go. The gentleman I entered into conversation with in the train was one of my fellows. You are a great lawyer, sir, but I think I could teach you something."

"I have no doubt you could. Where does Eustace Rutland live?"

"In Croydon, at some distance from the station."

We did not reach Croydon until past 6 and it was nearly another hour before we arrived at the address which Fowler had received.

[illegible] looking on it. "It doesn't look very flourishing."

It was one of a terrace of eight sad looking tenements, two stories in height, and evidently occupied by people in a humble station of life.

"Before we go in, sir," said Fowler, "I must put you in possession of the information I have gained. Mr. Eustace Rutland does not live there"—I started—"but Mr. Fenwick does. The young gentleman has thought fit to change his name; that is suspicious. He has lived there the last two weeks, having come probably from some better known locality, the whereabouts of which I shall learn by and by. When I say he came from some better known locality I am not quite exact; it will be more correct to say he was brought from some better known locality. He was very ill, scarcely able to walk, and is still very weak, I am given to understand. Now, sir, what do you propose to do? Do you wish me to go in with you, or will you see this young gentleman alone, without witnesses?"

"You are the soul of discretion, Fowler," I said, "and of shrewdness. I must see the young gentleman alone, and without witnesses. Meanwhile you can remain in the house, ready at my call, if I should require you. Keep all strangers from the room while I am closeted with him."

I knocked at the door and inquired of the woman who opened it for Mr. Fenwick. She asked me what I wanted, and who Mr. Fenwick was.

"Mr. Fenwick lodges here," I said. "I am a friend of his, and I wish to see him."

"How do you know he lodges here?" asked the woman.

"Simply," replied Fowler, "because we happen to have received a letter from him with this address upon it. What's your little game, eh, that you want to deny him to us?"

As he spoke he pushed his way into the passage, and I followed. The woman looked helplessly at us, and when Fowler said, with forefinger uplifted warningly, "Take care what you are about," she replied: "I don't know what to do; I am only following out my instructions."

"Your instructions," said Fowler, "were not to prevent Mr. Fenwick's friends from seeing him."

"I was told to admit no one," the woman said.

"And pray who told you?" demanded Fowler. "The lady?"

"Yes, sir," said the woman. "Miss Porter."

"Oh, Miss Porter," exclaimed Fowler. "A friend or ours also. Dark skinned. Black hair. Black eyes. Red lips. White hands. Rather slim. About five foot four."

"Yes, sir," said the woman.

Fowler had given a pretty faithful description of Miss Ida White.

"Well, then," said Fowler, whose ready wit compelled my admiration, "there is no occasion to announce us to Mr. Fenwick. Show this gentleman the rooms and while they're chatting together I will have a little chat with you."

"It is on the first floor," said the woman.

"Of course it is," said Fowler, "the first floor front, the room with the blind pulled down. Do you think I don't know it? How is the young gentleman?"

"Not at all well, sir."

I heard this reply as I ascended the stairs, in compliance with a motion of Fowler's head. When I arrived at the door of the room occupied by Fenwick, otherwise Eustace Rutland, I did not knock, but I turned the handle and entered. A young gentleman who had been lying on the sofa jumped up upon my entrance, and cried:

"Who are you? What do you want?"

I closed the door and turned the key in the lock.

"What do you do that for?" he exclaimed.

"You will very soon know," I replied. "I am here for the purpose of having a few minutes' conversation with Mr.—shall I say Fenwick?"

"It is my name."

"If I did not come as a friend I should dispute it, and even as a friend I shall venture to dispute it. Your proper name is Eustace Rutland."

He fell back upon the sofa, white and trembling.

"What do you mean? Why are you here?" he gasped.

"I will tell you," I said. "The time for evasion and concealment is past. Your sister"——

"My sister!" interrupted Eustace. "I do not understand you."

"You do understand me. You have a sister—a twin sister—whose name is Mabel. She lies at the point of death, and you have brought her to it."

He covered his face with his hands, and I judged intuitively that there sat before me a young man who, weak minded and easily led for evil as he might be, was not devoid of the true instincts of affection.

"Did you know of her condition?" I asked.

"No," he replied, in a trembling voice. "Is it true? Is it true?"

"It is unhappily true, and it may be that it lies in your power to rescue from the grave the innocent young girl who has devoted her life and happiness to you."

"My God! my God!"

"I will not deceive you. Such happiness cannot come to pass if you are guilty."

"I am not guilty!" he cried, starting to his feet. "God knows I am not guilty!"

"Swear it," I exclaimed, sternly!

"By all my hopes of happiness," he exclaimed, falling upon his knees—"by my dear Mabel's life, by my dear mother's memory, I swear—"

He was grovelling on the floor, and I assisted him to rise.

"And being not guilty," I said solemnly, "you were content to remain in hiding while another man was accused of the crime which neither he nor you committed? And being not guilty, you would have waited until he was done to death before you emerged once more into the light of day! I believe you when you say you did not know of your sister's peril, but you knew of the peril in which Edward Layton stood. Don't deny it. Remember, the time of evasion has passed."

"Yes," he murmured, "I knew it."

"Why did you not come forward," I said indignantly, rushing as if by an inspiration of reasoning to the truth, "to affirm that you and Ida White were in Prevost's restaurant, in the very room in which Edward Layton and your sister entered, on the night of March 25. Why did you not come forward to affirm that it was you who—by a devilish prompting—took Edward Layton's ulster, unknown to him, from the peg upon which it was hanging and went out with your paramour to the carriage in which he and your sister had arrived? Answer me. Why did you not do this, to prevent a noble and innocent man from being condemned for a murder which he did not commit?

"It was no murder!" cried Eustace. "It was no murder! She died by her own hand!"

"She died by her own hand!" I echoed, [illegible] complexion of the case.

"Yes," said Eustace, "by her own hand. Upon the table by her bedside there was written evidence of it."

"Which you removed!" I cried.

"No, not I, not I! Of which she took possession!"

"Speak plainly. Whom do you mean by she—Ida White?"

"Yes."

I paused. Truth to tell, I was overwhelmed by these disclosures.

"Bear this steadfastly in mind," I said, presently, in a calm, judicial tone. "You are in the presence of a man who has sworn to rescue the innocent. You are in the presence of a man who has sworn to bring the guilty to justice. Upon me depends your fate. I can save or destroy you. If by a hair's breadth of duplicity and evasion you attempt to deceive me, your destruction is certain. This is the turning point of your life. Upon your truthfulness rests your fate. Open your heart to me, not as to your enemy but as to your friend, and relate to me, without equivocation, the true story of your life from the time you commenced to plunge into dissipation and disgrace."

Awed and conscience stricken, he told me the story. In the course of his narration I was compelled frequently to prompt and encourage him, but that, in the result, it was truthfully told I have not a shadow of doubt.

His career at college ended, he came to London. There he made the acquaintance of Edward Layton's father, a man who, although well on in years, was as weak minded as he was himself. They entered into a kind of partnership, in which, no doubt, the elder man, now in his grave, was the leader and prompter. From Eustace's description of Edward Layton's father I recognized a man weak minded as Eustace himself was, and whose inherent honor and honesty were warped by his fatal passion for gambling. Old Mr. Layton for a long time kept his infatuation from the knowledge of his son, and it was not until he was actually involved in crime and disgrace that Edward became aware of it. Long before this Edward had, through his engagement with Mabel Rutland, been employed in the hopeless task of endeavoring to save her beloved brother, but when the knowledge of his own father's disgrace was forced upon him he knew that all hope of Mabel's father consenting to his marriage was irretrievably gone. It was not only that the young and the old man had lost money in betting—it was that they had actually been guilty of forging bills, which Mr. Beach, the father of the woman whom Edward Layton afterward married, held in his possession. It was this that first took Edward Layton to Mr. Beach's house. Mabel had implored him to save her darling brother, against whom Mr. Beach had threatened to take criminal proceedings. I do not at this moment know whether Edward Layton had revealed to Mabel the disgrace which hung also above his father; but that is immaterial. Agnes Beach, Mr. Beach's only child, saw and fell in love with Edward Layton, and her father, disreputable as he was, being devoted to his daughter, was guided by her in all that subsequently transpired. The bills he held he determinedly refused to part with, unless Edward Layton married his child.

In the terrible position in which he was placed, knowing that Mabel Rutland was lost to him forever—knowing how deeply and devotedly she loved her brother [illegible] the disgrace which [illegible] came, he saw no other [illegible] ruin than to enter [illegible] gement and to marry a [illegible] did not love. But, with a full consciousness of the disreputable connection he was about to form, he laid no pressing injunction upon his father to recognize the unhappy union; and, indeed, old Mr. Layton, aware that he was in Mr. Beach's power, was by no means desirous to meet him. Love lost, honor lost, the sword hanging over his head, Edward Layton submitted to the sacrifice. There was no duplicity on his part. Agnes Beach knew full well that he did not love her. He received, as he believed, the whole of the forged bills which Mr. Beach held, and it was not until some time after his marriage that he discovered that three of these fatal acceptances had been withheld from him. At the time he made this discovery he was leading a most unhappy life with his wife, and on more than one occasion she taunted him with the power she held over him.

It was shortly after the marriage that weak minded Eustace made the acquaintance of Ida White. She was an attractive woman, well versed in the wiles of her sex, and she played upon him and entangled him to such an extent that there was no escape for him. It is unnecessary here to enter into the details of this connection. It is sufficient to say that Ida White held Eustace Rutland completely in her power, with a firm conviction that if she could induce him to marry her she could, after the marriage, obtain the forgiveness of Eustace's father—which would insure her a life of ease and luxury. But there was still a certain firmness in the young man.

"Marry me," she said.

"I will marry you," Eustace replied, "when I get back the forged acceptances."

Where were they? In Mrs. Layton's possession.

Close as was the intimacy which existed between the unhappy lady and her quasi, Mrs. Layton retained so jealous a possession of these incriminating documents that Ida White was not able to lay her hands upon them. In the company of Eustace Rutland she was supping in Prevost's restaurant on the night of the 25th of March. She had supped many times Mrs. Layton's house, as she had often done before, to meet her young and foolish lover. She saw her master and Mabel enter the room, and observed Layton taking off his ulster. Then the idea suddenly entered her head that Eustace and she should personate her master and the young lady—with a full knowledge how deeply those two were compromised by their being together—and arrive home before them, by which time, doubtless, Mrs. Layton would be asleep. She knew that under her pillow Mrs. Layton kept the documents which Eustace frantically desired to obtain, and the possession of which would make her, Ida White, his wife. If Mrs. Layton awoke and resisted while the forged bills were being abstracted, Eustace would be at hand to use force, if necessary; and it was principally from the wish to compromise her lover so deeply that he would not dare to break his promise to marry her that she had determined to put her idea into execution. She knew that ordinarily Edward Layton kept the latch key of the street door in the pocket of his ulster. She disclosed the scheme to Eustace, and threatened him with exposure if he did not do as she desired. It was she who took the ulster from the wall of the restaurant, and it was she who, secretly and expeditiously, assisted Eustace to put it on; then they stole out together and entered the carriage. Before acquainting Eustace with her design she had ascertained that [illegible] was waiting for him and Mabel. She trusted to her own resources to keep her master out of his house after she and Eustace had entered it.

Here a word is necessary as to the true meaning of Edward Layton's proceedings during the day and night of March 25. Abandoned as were the hopes in which he and Mabel had once fondly indulged, she, still relied upon his efforts to save her brother from harm. Eustace had lost heavily upon certain races. He had made a despairing appeal to her, and she called upon Layton to assist the erring lad. It was in the endeavor to discover Eustace that Edward Layton had driven from place to place to obtain from him the information necessary to rescue him from his peril. Mabel had, by letter, engaged to meet Edward Layton in Bloomsbury square at [illegible] on the night of that day, in order that he might relieve her anxiety with respect to her brother. How they met, and what transpired after they met, have been already sufficiently detailed.

Ida White's maneuvers were successful up to a certain point. She and Eustace entered the carriage, were driven home, and, unsuspected, obtained entrance into the house. The correspondence between Eustace and Mabel had been for some time conducted through the medium of the system of the nine of hearts, and it was either by an oversight or by accident that Eustace, during the drive from Prevost's restaurant to Edward Layton's house, took from his own pocket one of these cards and let it drop into the pocket of the ulster. But when they were safely in Layton's house, and crept stealthily and noiselessly into Mrs. Layton's bedroom, they made the horrible discovery that Mrs. Layton, in a moment of frenzy, had emptied the bottle of poisonous narcotics, and had by her own will destroyed herself. The proof was at her bedside. When she had swallowed the fatal pills, the horror of the deed overwhelmed her. She summoned up sufficient strength to rise in her bed, to take paper and the pen from the inkstand, and before the death agony commenced in her sleep, to write upon that paper the confession which fixed upon her the crime of suicide.

Having reached this point of the strange story, I demanded to know from Eustace Rutland what had become of that confession.

"Ida took possession of it," he said, "and I have not seen it from that moment to this."

"Why did you not come forward and make this public?" I cried.

"Because," was his reply, "Ida told me that, if what we had done became known, nothing could save us from the hangman."

"Did she obtain possession of the forged acceptances?"

"Yes."

"How was it that the tumbler from which the fatal draught was taken was on the mantel shelf?"

"Ida placed it there."

It was enough. The entire facts of this mysterious case were clear to me. I required nothing more to prove Edward Layton's innocence that the possession of the document written almost in her death throes by the unhappy wife.

I unlocked the door and called up Fowler. Briefly and swiftly I told him what was necessary, and said it was not at all improbable that this document was in Ida White's lodgings at Brixton; and I had scarcely uttered the words before a rat-tat-tat came at the street door.

"It is she!" cried Eustace.

"Who?" I asked, in great excitement.

"Ida," he replied.

"It serves our turn exactly, sir," muttered Fowler to me, and then addressing Eustace, he said: "Is that your bedroom?" pointing to a communicating door.

"Yes."

"We will go in there. Let the lady come up."

We disappeared, leaving the communicating door partially open, and the next minute I heard Ida White's voice.

"Cursed luck," she cried. "I've lost £85 to-day. I tell you what it is, Eustace—if we can't wheedle your blooming governor into forgiving us after we are married, we shall have to raise the wind ourselves. You shall take the jewels, and I will do the clerking. It will be a lovely life, and we shall make pots of money."

Eustace did not reply.

"Why don't you speak?" she continued. "Are you struck dumb?"

Then came Eustace's voice, like the cry of a despairing soul:

"You are a devil! Why have you driven me to this? I hate you, I hate you, hate you! You fiend, you have killed my sister!"

Fowler did not wait for me to act. He seized me by the arm and pulled me after him into the room.

"What!" screamed Ida; "you two!"

"Yes," said Fowler—and in the midst of my own excitement I could not avoid observing the expression of quiet satisfaction on his face—"we two."

"What are you here for?"

"For reasons, Ida White," replied Fowler, which may or may not be fatal to yourself. Follow what I am about to say. We have here a confession from this young gentleman which, if true—that is, if it can be proved by documentary evidence—will bring undoubted disgrace upon you, but neither death by the hangman's hands nor penal servitude for life."

She recoiled, and echoed—

"Death! Penal servitude for life!"

"It is exactly as I have said. Death by the hangman's hands or penal servitude for life. All is known. Your theft of the [illegible] thing else. Your liberty at this moment rests upon a written document. If it never existed, or if you have destroyed it, you are doomed. If it exists and was saved—"

"You are a madman," she cried, but her face was blanched [illegible] pressed the table [illegible]

"I repeat [illegible] Fowler. [illegible] If the contents [illegible] from the table [illegible] exactness, you have [illegible] It is not your [illegible] no pardoning! It is life [illegible] you! The moment [illegible] which way."

Utterly overpowered, Ida White [illegible], with hands [illegible] raised, moved for mercy:

"I have the paper."

"Where?"

Her hands wandered to her pocket, and she took a purse from it.

"Here!"

"There is something else, lady bird."

"What?"

"The papers you stole from underneath your mistress' pillow. Ah! you have those also. Hand them over. Thank you, lady bird. Very satisfactory—very satisfactory indeed. A happy termination to a most remarkable case!"

VII.

"August 27, 1885.

"DEAR MR. BAINBRIDGE,—The letters will have placed you in possession of all that has occurred. Edward Layton is released with honor, and it has been the subject of hundreds of leading articles that the obstinacy of one person, who refused to be guided by circumstantial evidence, saved a noble young man from an unjust death. A great blow has been struck against the jury system. Eleven men wrong, and one man right—people could hardly believe it. But it was so in this instance, and I have no doubt it has been so in others. You being now a married man, domestically happy and contented, the news I have to impart will give you pleasure. Edward Layton is in Switzerland. He has gone upon a long summer and autumn tour. Alone? No. Mabel Rutland, restored to health, is with him. Well, but that is not enough? I take a satisfaction in prolonging the interest. I could almost fancy myself a novelist. Mr. and Mrs. Rutland are also of the company, and it is Mr. Rutland himself who invited Edward Layton to travel with them. In less than a year from this date the lovers will be united and faith and self sacrifice will be rewarded. Mr. James Rutland, Mabel's uncle, to whose obstinacy Edward Layton undoubtedly owes his life, and before whose obstinacy justice should bow, is also traveling with them. No one also? Yes. Mabel's brother, Eustace, repentant, humbled, reformed.

"I have had painted for me a very simple picture on a large canvas. It is the nine of hearts, which I intend shall always occupy the place of honor in my house. It cannot fail to attract attention, and when inquiries are made about it I shall have a story to tell.

"With a full appreciation of your rare generosity I remain, dear sir,

"Yours faithfully,

"HORACE BAINBRIDGE."

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Tuesday evening, Dec. 20th, the Farmer's Social Club met at John Fisher's. The literary part of the program partook of a Christmas character, which was very enjoyable.

The discussion was opened by Mr. A. P. Coddington, Dr. Finch not being present.

Mr. Coddington: I think the habit of going in debt and expecting to pay in the future is in the main injurious, and is the means of keeping many poor; still the credit system is advantageous and could not be disposed of. By the credit system many buy what they do not need and live extravagantly and fast, looking forward to turning over a lucky stone, but the stone is often never found and many are always kept poor, while if they had paid as they went, they would have lived within their means and have been prosperous.

Mr. Everhart: The credit system has had the tendency to elevate the [illegible] of our independence to the credit system. We have risen to our great importance by the credit system, and if we put down the great rebellion. Destroy the credit system and we would destroy nearly all of the great industries. The railroads and banks could not exist without the credit system; our beautiful farms have been improved and beautified by the credit system. Of course there are abuses of the system but it is done by dishonest men; but I think the credit system is one of the best systems we have.

Mr. Horton: There is great latitude to this question and implies much more than was intended to be discussed at this meeting. I think the credit system is a great injury to the poor laboring classes, or those who are in the habit of buying haphazard on credit, instead of paying cash. The merchant who sells to these classes does not intend to lose money by giving credit, and he adds to the cost of his goods the loss by credit. It would be much better for the laboring man to pay cash and save this credit to himself.

James Colvin: I understand this question to refer to the laboring classes. I think they have every advantage by the system, as they can thus procure many necessities by the system that they could not if they were compelled to pay cash. Mr. C. then demonstrated by example the benefits of the system.

John Fisher: A poor man's credit is his capital and I am in favor of the system.

F. Rector: I think there is much to be said on this question. The credit system is good, and we need it, but it is a curse to many.

A. Gillespie: from Mason. How is it that the farmers are complaining? The credit system is much to blame, for it builds up great monopolies that grind the laboring classes. Talk about the beautiful credit system. I tell you gentlemen it is only a question of time when interest will consume the principal. The statistics show that six out of seven farms are mortgaged, and I tell you it is only a question of time, if the low prices continue, when the farms will be owned by the few. This is the result of the beautiful credit system.

I. H. Schreder: I think this question was intended to refer to the laboring classes who receive month or day wages, and was not intended to cover as great range as the discussion has called out. For six or seven years we have not bought anything on credit, but have paid as we have purchased, and we have found it a saving; and I think if the poorer classes paid for what they purchased as they went, they would live within their means and be more prosperous.

Club adjourned to meet Tuesday evening, Jan. 3d., at John Schreder's, with the following program:

Congregational Singing.
Rec.—Charlie Schreder.
Essay—Mrs. Horton.
Select Reading—Grace Gillespie.
Acting Charade—Ora Gillespie.

Question—What is the best method to be pursued to obtain a good stand of clover, and what course to pursue to secure the greatest amount of money from it? Opened by F. V. Horton.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

THE N. L. FARMERS' CLUB.

Was entertained by Allen Wells on the evening of Dec. 21st with not as large an attendance as usual caused by the prevalence of scarlet fever in the neighborhood. After a short literary programme came the discussion of the question—"Does it pay farmers to raise special crops such as celery, peppermint etc." Opened by O. T. Remington. I can look around me and see monuments of success and of failures of special crops, notably such as hot houses etc. which shows that soil, man and management has something to do in making a success of special crops; while one man makes a success raising some special crop, another makes a complete failure. Take for instance celery, which requires low moist land, would be useless to try to raise on high dry soil. Peppermint I know but little about. I understand that it needs moist land, clean cultivation, and those that are in the business, say it pays. Some make general crops pay on special plan such as potatoes. I have made some money raising strawberries as a special crop; did not make much last year, but time will tell how I come out.

L. E. Taylor: Have made a special crop of potatoes and it pays me. Potatoes can be raised any season, wet or dry. It takes two or three years to prepare the ground; first manure sod and sow to wheat, seed to grass, mow or pasture one year, then the next season plow as early as you can, work until the first to fifteenth of June, plant in rows, 12 inches apart in row drop one eye a piece, harrow just as the ground begins to crack from the potatoes coming through; this will help the crop and kill weeds; when about two inches high bury them up. I use a planet cultivator for the purpose, what you call deep. Keep cultivator running shallow in season once a week or ten days, to retain the moisture; keep off bugs by applying Paris green mixed with plaster at the rate of one pound of Paris green to one hundred of plaster.

F. W. DePuy: We keep in the ruts of our father's in raising wheat and other crops, piling up that which we cannot sell unless at less than cost. Most every farm has more or less land adapted to celery, onions and roots, that we might raise at a profit; it is cheaper to raise more corn-fodder and less hay.

J. F. N. Bowen: If you do go into raising special crops stick to it. Some will surely fall back from lack of "sand" and then the crop will be sure to advance.

W. B. Keyser: From my observation most all farmers going into special crops commence when the crop is on the boom, and by the time they get their crop on the market it is a drug.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Almira McCollum's, on Wednesday evening Jan. 4th, 1888, with the following program:

Inst. Music—Bowen Bros.
Rec—Elsie Updyke.
Dec—Fred Welch.
Song—N. L. Quartette.
Select Read—Mrs. Willis Smith.
Dialogue—Four Girls.
Song—Mrs. Allen Wells.
Dec—Don Bowen.
Chip Basket—Jas. Updyke.
Dec—Hollis Taylor.
Song—Mrs. Tobias Mudgett.

Question—"Which is the most profitable way of raising hogs, buying mill-feed or raising corn to feed them?" Opened by M. G. Updyke, followed by A. Welch, F. W. DePuy and others.

THE NEXT GRAND MASTER WORKMAN.

From the Washington Evening Star of Dec. 20th we clip the following item, which will be interesting news to the many friends of Paul T. Bowen who live in this vicinity.

There has been some discussion in labor circles as to who would succeed Mr. Powderly. In reply to a query Mr. McGaughey said: "General Worthy Foreman Richard Griffiths would by succession in office succeed Mr. Powderly. But I don't think he would serve any longer than obliged to, for the reason that he is getting rather aged. The result would be that the general executive board would be obliged to meet and choose a successor to serve until the next meeting of the General Assembly in case Mr. Griffiths refused to complete the unexpired term. Who would make a good successor to Mr. Powderly? My choice would be Paul T. Bowen. He is a brainy man, is conservative, and is the best writer on labor topics in America to-day. At the head of the order's journal he would make the dry bones of the other fellows rattle as they never rattled before."

Paul T. Bowen is and has been for years a clerk in the Fourth Auditor's office at Washington. He is well known to inhabitants of Minneapolis as the former proprietor of the Hennepin County Mirror. He is about thirty seven years old. John Swinton calls him "the most able and forcible writer on labor topics in America."

Bowen is not very widely known outside the order, because he has kept himself aloof from the quarrels and office-seeking squabbles that have been made so much of in print. He is, however, said to have a very strong backing among the class of knights who are Powderly's strongest friends.

Professional Ignorance

Nothing is more common, nor less true, than for physicians to tell patients in the first stages of heart disease that the trouble is only nervous, etc., and of no account. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing as shown by the great number of people who die of heart disease when its existence is not expected. Take warning. Don't neglect the first symptoms, and if you would avoid sudden death, angina pectoris, etc., take Dr. Miles' New Cure before it is to late. Sold at Baker & Hall's drug store.

The Philadelphia Times Almanac for 1888 is received and it is about the best compendium of statistical information in a small form that is published. It is a very valuable little book for any newspaper office or counting room.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

LESSON for January 1.

HEROD AND JOHN THE BAPTIST.—MATT. XIV, 1-12

NOTES.—"At that season."—Our idiom would be, "about that time." ——"Herod the tetrarch."—Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great. His mother was Malthace. Tetrarch means a ruler of one fourth part. This designation applied to Antipas, literally. Archelaus had two fourths of his father's kingdom, while Antipas and Philip each had one fourth respectively. Antipas's share was the principality of Galilee and Perea.——"Unto his servants."—His courtiers and those of his ministry.——"And there"—Because John is risen from the dead. A terror-stricken conscience and the Pharisaic belief in the resurrection are in spite of himself the psychological starting-points of this exclamation.——"Put him in prison."—Josephus says that the fortress Machærus, some miles east of the Dead Sea, was the place of imprisonment. It was situated on the borders of the dominions of Herod and of Aretas, the Arabian king.——"Herodias, his brother Philip's wife."—Herodias was the daughter of Aristobulus, son of Herod the Great, and of Berenice. Her first husband was Philip, an older brother of Antipas and Herod by the second Mariamne. This Philip is not to be confounded with Philip the Tetrarch. The first wife of Antipas, rather his legal wife, was the daughter of the Arabian king, Aretas. The crime committed by Antipas and Herodias was a double one, then, as both were still married. When Herodias eloped with her own half-uncle she took Salome, her only daughter by Philip, with her.——"Herod's birthday."—It was not a Jewish custom to celebrate birthdays; but a common one in the Herodian families. This might have been a joint festival to celebrate his ascension to the throne as well as his birthday.——"Danced in the midst."—To dance was doubtless of a wanton, voluptuous character, calculated to captivate the senses of the on lookers. It was an act of shame for a princess to demean herself so in such a company; but no doubt artfully contrived by the mother.——"Whatsoever she should ask."—As wages of her shame, as any courtesan had a right to do.——"Give me here."—The "there" is emphatic delay would imperil the success of her scheme.——"A charger."—A large platter or wooden trencher.——"Was grieved."—Because he was about to put to death a distinguished man, and to rouse the multitude to hatred against himself.——"And he sent."—Herod was the murderer; four were equally implicated in the crime.——"His disciples."—To be near their master they were probably in the town of Machærus. What a touching scene! There could be no fitter sequel of this tragedy than to tell it all to Jesus.

INSTRUCTION.—It was not until Christ had been teaching two and a half years that the report of him reached Herod. The fault was Herod's not Christ's. Herod's method of thought and life was diametrically opposed to that of Christ. So it is with many to-day. We wonder at the surprising ignorance of spiritual truths that many apparently well-educated people show. It meets us on every side. How account for it?—Preachers puzzle their heads about it. So much teaching—such persistent ignorance! The answer is, that a life of carelessness, wantonness and vice is never conducive to the revelations that Christ is eager to make in the heart of each.

An accusing conscience is the most awful companion for a person to have. A startled, terror-stricken conscience in the midst of degradation may open the way for light and truth. Christ and his forgiveness is the only relief for gnawing sin. No matter how small this sin is, it is hateful to God. Throw it out of your life forever. This is repentance.

It may be a truism to say that those birthday parties are the best that leave no sting of remembrance behind. Hilarity is apt to lead to excess. Let there be plenty of healthful fun and jollity if need be. Anything that is immoderate or smacks of immodesty or leads to dissipation ought to be rigedly excluded. Such pleasures are dangerous.

Promises, hatched in temporary mental aberration and confirmed by immoral and illegitimate oaths, had better be canceled, and the wrong acknowledged. To make a foolish promise is wrong. The wrong is intensified not lessened if the promise is carried out.

Mothers! Pause and tremble! Yours it is to train daughters. Beware on your eternal life lest you lead them by example or practice into sin, however minute or disguised it may be.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, Oh, it will wear away, but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free, at Baker & Hall.

Died of Heart Disease.

Many eminent men, among them Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Hendricks, Gen. McClellan and Josh Billings died of heart disease last year. Authorities state that one person in four has it, though few know it. The symptoms are shortness of breath, pain or tenderness in side, palpitation, smothered feeling in the chest, tendency to faint, swelling of feet, ankles, etc. If you have any of these symptoms do not fail to try Dr. Miles New Cure for the Heart. For sale at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

A Happy New Year to all.

Fred Quine, of Toledo spent Christmas in Tecumseh.

Next Sunday will be the day to turn over a new leaf.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Whelan returned to Detroit last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs Jas. Jones are visiting friends in Detroit this week.

A. J. Whiting and wife of Somerset were at home on Christmas.

Miss Luez Fitzgerald of Manchester is visiting friends in Tecumseh.

Harry Dunn and Bert Hause are spending Holiday week in Tecumseh.

Jesse Potter of Ridgeway partook of his Christmas dinner at his father's in Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. Alf. W. James of Detroit ate their Christmas turkey in Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. Will R. Wooden of Battle Creek spent Christmas at his father's Joe Wooden's.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Waldron will [illegible] the thanks of the HERALD boys for that box of goodies.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Trann of St Louis are spending the holidays with their Tecumseh relatives and friends.

The Postoffice was overrun with bundles for the mail the latter part of the week: Christmas gifts going to and coming from distant points.

Ira G. Wesley and lady and Messrs. H. M. Judge, Irv Finch, Chas Weisinger and Geo M. Farnsworth of Adrian attended the Christmas party last Monday evening.

Paul Bowen, an old Raisin boy and now a resident of Washington is prominently mentioned as the successor of J. V. Powderly for Grand Master Workman of the Knights of Labor.

The Young People's Social of the Baptist church will be entertained by Mrs. Dr. Hamilton at her residence tomorrow evening, Dec, 30th. A very entertaining program has been prepared. Everybody come.

O. C. Craft of Summit City is spending a few days with friends in Ridgeway and Raisin. Mr. Craft has charge of the mill that is owned and run by the Michigan flooring and handle company.

The institute committees will meet Tuesday Jan, 3d. at 2 P. M. at the HERALD office. Let there be a full representation that the program may be completed in full.
MRS. F. C. RECTOR Sec.

Mrs N. M. Sutton has been in Detroit a few days at her daughter's, Mrs. James Wilson's. The welcome news has been received here that a ten pound boy made his advent at Mrs. Wilsons on the evening of the 22d.

Hannibal Osborn has just returned from New York, where he went with a large shipment of poultry. He will continue to pay the highest prices for poultry, and farmers who have any of the feathery tribe to dispose of will do well to give him a call.

A gentleman from Hillsdale has been calling on leading temperance men of Lenawee county with a view of securing a corporation of forces to continue the publication of the Lance. The arrangements are nearly completed for the organization of a stock Co. with that and in view.

There is no better time in the entire year to pay ones newspaper subscription than the first week in January. We respectfully commend this fact to our patrons and invite them all to call next week. The latch string will be out, and a plenty of blank receipts to accommodate all.

The women of Tecumseh are hereby cordially invited to attend a Mothers meeting to be conducted at the M. E. church by Dr. Julia P. Green of Adrian City, on Friday, January 6th. 1888, commencing at half past one oclock. The topics upon which she will speak, will be principally Hygiene and Heredity. Please give a full attendance and come promptly at the hour.

The New York weekly Star is without any doupt the ablest and soundest Democratic paper now published at the metropolis. Democrats who believe in genuine Jeffersonian Democracy and who believe it to be the duty of the party to sustain the President in his revenue reform measures, will find the Star a true exponent of their principles. The Star will be clubbed with the Herald at reduced rates.

The death of Dr. A. B. Palmer, Dean of the Medical Faculty at AnnArbor, removes one of the oldest professors connected with the University. The doctor began his professional career in Tecumseh, and was in partnership for a time here with Dr. Patterson. His Tecumseh residence was the home now occupied by Dr. H. L. Stewart on Chicago street. About the year 1850 he removed to AnnArbor and took a position in the newly organized Medical Department of the University, and has been connected with the institution ever since.

Miss Minnie Jones is visiting friends in Detroit this week.

L. E. Hoag of Saginaw is visiting his friends here this week.

H. E. Anderson has a new card this [illegible]

Mrs. Hixson of Clinton is spending holiday week with Tecumseh friends.

Dr. Chas. Slick and family, Mishawaukee, Ind., are visiting at James Heck's this week.

A splendid Christmas dinner was served at the Lilley House to a large number of guests.

T. C. Harris' mother and other Fremont friends, were visiting him the fore part of the week.

John Trainor died at his home in South Bend, Indiana, Wednesday. The funeral will be held Friday.

Miss Lillie E. Brown went to Lansing, Tuesday, to attend the State Teachers' Association held there this week.

Dr. R B. House of Springfield, Ohio, paid Tecumseh a flying visit yesterday. He is much pleased with his new location.

As Christmas fell on Sunday, Monday was a legal holiday. The banks and many of the stores were closed on that day.

The Tecumseh [illegible] joyed an extra good holiday trade this year, and they deserved it too for they advertise liberally.

Cyrus W. Wells, formerly of Franklin, now a resident of Minneapolis, is spending the Holiday season with his old Lenawee Co. friends.

Among the list of Michigan patentees published this week is the name of Thos. O. Perry, of Tecumseh, who has taken a patent out for a windmill derrick.

Those people who feel interested in the carrying of Lenawee County for local option should hurry up their petitions. We hear that Tecumseh and surrounding townships are circulating them.

The last spike on the Ohio connection of the C. J. & M. was driven Monday last. There is considerable ballasting yet to be done, but trains will be run over this line to Cincinnati early next year.

L. C. Blood of Lansing is a little ahead of time as usual with his subscribtion. In his note of remittance he says: We would as soon think of being without bread in the house as to be without the old HERALD.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lillie House, Monday Jan. 2d. It is not any more who is Dr. Bennett, but where and when can I find him. Go and see him for Piles and Hernia—with any old chronic trouble—he always cures them.

Frank Baxter has purchased the Battle Creek Sunday Morning Call and assumed the duties of his new position. He has always entertained an inclination for journalistic work and we predict that he will make his new Call ing sure. Here is our hand.

T. M. Sheriff, of Kalamazoo, Secretary of the State Assembly K. of L. was in Tecumseh last Thursday evening and addressed our local assembly. Several members of Clinton Assembly came down to hear him, and we understand his talk gave universal satisfaction.

Christmas was very generally observed by the churches last Sunday. All the pastors delivered sermons appropriate to the day and occasion. In the evening a Christmas concert was given at the Baptist, Presbyterian and Universalist Churches. A Special Sunday school sermon was given at St. Peters church in the afternoon.

The Co. C boys took exception to an item in the HERALD of the 15th inst. noticing their Christmas Party. We wish to assure the boys that we intended no reflection whatever, either upon them or their party. If any persons construed it that way, they utterly misinterpreted it. We can scarcely believe that the item in question kept any young people away from their party.

Last Saturday was a red letter day with Wes. Keyser's family. About 50 relatives on his mother's side gathered together to celebrate Merry Christmas. In the evening there was a Christmas tree well laden with useful and ludicrous presents, from a fried-cake man, for the hostess, some improvement on the old one, to many valuable presents for old and young. Relatives took part in the festivities from Manchester, Mt. Pleasant, Hudson, Franklin and Clinton. Four generations were present.

V. J. Woodward has commenced work on his toboggan slide. He is erecting a platform 30 feet above the ground level. A frame slide at an angle of about 45 degrees will be constructed 100 ft. in length, where it will strike the ground on the flat, and the track will then continue nearly 500 ft. more. The starting point is located in the rear of, and just east of Mr. Wookward's residence, on the east side of Mill st., and the track will run across the entire flat. He expects to have the slide completed all ready for business on Monday next.

CO. C's CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The Christmas Dance given by the Co. C members last Friday evening was largely attended and was the most enjoyable affair yet given by the party. The hall was much to overflowing, the orchestra were at their best, and the dancers all seemed to imbibe the spirit of the occasion. We venture to say a merrier company of dancers never assembled in Armory Hall. The tickets were placed at a low figure to insure a good attendance, and the receipts showed a handsome margin over and above expenses. In one respect Co. C has a decided advantage over any select committee; they have no hall rent to pay and that is quite an item saved. Sergt. Charles Crossman, Corp'l. Geo. Zimmerman, and others, who made up the committee of arrangements, have reason to congratulate themselves over their success, and those who participated will embrace the first opportunity to patronize Co. C again.

Not only was Tecumseh society well represented but the adjoining towns contributed their quota also, and old father Time rang the bell on the "wee sma' hours" before the company broke up. The guests were more than pleased with the unqualified success of the entire affair.

OUR CHRISTMAS PARTY.

The Christmas Party on Monday evening last proved to be even better than the one held last year. The Opera House was very neatly trimmed with evergreens and pictures and a few toboggans were used to decided advantage. Wolf's orchestra gave an instrumental concert, as published last week, which was superb, and at its close the Grand March, participated in by nearly fifty couples, filed around the room, led by Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Eccles. Nearly all the ladies were attired in costumes of light colors, which produced a brilliant beautiful contrast to the black suits of the gentlemen. At the conclusion of the Grand March they were greeted with a round of applause from the galleries, which were crowded with spectators. About midnight refreshments were served at Armory Hall by R. C. VanAntwerp, and it is needless to say that this part of the entertainment filled the guests with good viands and satisfaction. Enough covers were spread to accommodate the entire company at one sitting. After supper about three hours more of dancing were indulged in. The program consisted of quadrille and round dances alternated. The set of "The Wild Irishmen" capped the climax and occasioned more fun than could be packed into a bushel basket. The committee in charge consisted of these ten young men: Will Hayden, Bert Garlinghouse, Chas. Patterson, Geo. Field, Gus Cummins, T. C. Harris, W. T. Eccles, R. A. Heesen, Chas. Bell and James Boyd. Notwithstanding the fact that the expenses exceeded one hundred dollars the receipts were sufficient to liquidate them all and leave a small margin besides.

Most of our dancers in the village were present and both Adrian and Clinton sent delegations of young people who added much to the social eclat of the occasion. The same committee gave their first Christmas party last year and the success of that effort made it seem difficult to improve upon it. It was acknowledged, however, by all that No. two surpassed No. one in every respect. The dance-loving portion of our community owe the committee a vote of thanks for their splendid entertainment.

MARRIED.

We are indebted to Webb Anderson for a copy of the Pratt County, Kan., Register, of the 22d, which contains a notice of Miss Grace Parkhurst's marriage. Her many friends in Tecumseh will join with us in extending congratulations and wishes for her future happiness.

At the residence of the bride's stepfather, Mr. A. Hanford, on North Main street, on last Wednesday evening, Mr. W. M. McConnell was united in marriage to Miss Grace Parkhurst. Both have been residents of this city and are well known in society circles. The groom has been in the hardware business here for some time and is recognized as one of our most popular and successful business men. The bride is a popular and accomplished young lady.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Glendenning, of the Presbyterian church, in the presence of only a very few of the friends of the contracting parties.

The REGISTER joins the friends of the young couple in wishing them a long life of unalloyed happiness.

We clip the following from a Battle Creek paper.

A very pleasant wedding occurred last evening at the residence of Mr. Fred Hoyt on east Main Street. The contracting parties were Mr. Fred R. Miles and Miss Minnie Ross of Tecumseh, sister of Mrs. Hoyt, and Mrs. T. W. Adams. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Mather. A fine supper was served by Mesdames Hoyt and Adams. Numerous presents expressed the interest of friends whose affectionate regards accompany the young couple on their voyage upon the sea of matrimony.

[illegible] LOCAL [illegible]

At six o'clock Thursday evening, Dec. 22nd, occurred the marriage of Emma, youngest daughter of I. H. Schreder, and Lewis Waldron, at the home of the bride's parents. There were present about eighty-five relatives and friends. Promptly on time the bride and groom, without any attendants, took their place in the parlor in front of a beautiful bank of geraniums and foliage plants. As they took their place the laughter and hum of conversation was hushed and in the silence Rev. Wm. Babbitt performed the brief but impressive ceremony which made Lewis Waldron and Emma Schreder husband and wife.

Lewis is the eldest child of A. K. Waldron's family, and Emma is the youngest, except one, of I. H. Schreder's. They are each of a family of six children, who were all present, as also the father and mother of each. As the ceremony was concluded they received the heartfelt congratulations of their parents and ten brothers and sisters, also brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, then the best wishes of their friends.

After congratulations refreshments were served, and that they were prepared and served at Mrs. Schreder's is enough to say, as all and Mrs. Schreder's hospitality is too well known to need a description.

The presents were numerous, beautiful and useful, showing the high esteem and affection of friends for the bride and groom.

Shortly after refreshments the bride changed her wedding dress for travelling dress and wrap, and amid a shower of rice and gay jests and good-byes from the young people, Lewis and Emma started to take the evening train for a short bridal trip to Kalamazoo. They expect soon to go to housekeeping in Tecumseh where they intend making their future home. May their lives be happy, prosperous and useful is the wish of their many friends.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

On Friday evening, Dec. 23rd, the pupils in Dist. No. 2 assembled at the school-house to pluck the fruit of the Christmas tree. At 7 P. M. the house was well filled and presently Mrs. Santa Claus entered, fittingly attired, and with the proverbial bells. Having examined everything with apparent curiosity and settled things to her liking she wonders "why that old feller doesn't come," when lo! he enters, a veritable old Kriss Kringle indeed, with bright eyes twinkling beneath his snowy locks, long white beard and arctic dress, bowing and gesticulating in a way to delight the heart of every child present, grown-up big ones not excepted.

The exercises were then opened with a song by Miss Brown, Maud Poucher, Bessie Preston, Alma Luce.

Rec.—Christmas—Harry Langton.
Rec.—Anna's Wants—Anna Wilson.
Rec.—Our Christmas—Winnie Wilson.
Rec.—'Tis the Merry Christmas Time—Hattie Hurry.
Rec.—Kitty to Santa Claus—Edna Smith.
Song—Lilly Vedder.
Rec.—What Santa Claus Saw—Clarence Hurry.
Rec.—Don's Stocking—Jennie Osborne.
Song—Sweet Christmas Bells—Miss Brown and Alma Luce.
The True Story of Santa Claus—Etta Mattis.
Song—Jolly Old St. Nicholas—Hattie Hurry.

The little song, so sweetly and modestly sung, was loudly applauded, though old Santa most made her laugh in spite of herself.

Other exercises were omitted in order to give more time to the tree. Mr. and Mrs. Santa then began the regular work of the evening, and a very blessed work it was, filling the hands of the eager children with good things, to their infinite delight. Miss Brown had remembered every one of her pupils and each received a beautiful Christmas card, candy and popcorn, besides many beautiful and useful presents from their parents and friends. Nor were the older ones forgotten and many valuable presents were taken from the tree. Miss Brown received a handsome writing desk, a present from the District, as a slight token of their appreciation of her faithful and earnest labors for the interest and happiness of the school.

At the close of the exercises Rev. Mr. Pierce made some appropriate remarks, telling us something of the origin of gift-making at Christmastide.

Mr Hurry, Mr. Swartz, and Mrs. Hurry each arose in turn to express their sense of gratitude to Miss Brown, not only for her indefatigable labors in preparing for the children this happy Christmas treat, but for her earnest efforts to interest and help them in their studies from day to day.

The Detroit Evening Journal is forging right to the front since W. H. Brearley assumed control. Bro. Brearley has the proper newspaper gait and he gets there every time. The Journal may be a little "off" on the tariff question but in other respects it is a model newspaper.

The service held at the college yesterday commemorative of the life and work of Miss Marion A. Chase, was attended by most of the students who had known her, the faculty and a number of friends from the city. The exercises were opened by singing "Jerusalem my happy home," etc. Short portions of scripture were read, followed by remarks by Dr. Willsox, Prof. Brooks, Miss Sawtelle, Prof. Hadlock, Miss Pierce and Mr. Martin. Prof. Montgomery then moved the adoption of the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, It has pleased God in his providence to call away one who for several years labored among us; therefore,

Resolved, That we recognize the earnestness, fidelity and devotion which characterized the work of Marion A. Chase while connected with the college as a teacher.

That we gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to her as one of the chief promotors of the movement which has resulted in the erection of our new ladies' hall.

That we believe her generous sympathy and timely help so often extended to the less favored among our students will long be remembered by them.

That we extend to her relatives and friends our sympathy in their bereavement, and pray that the faith which she cherished may comfort them in their affliction.

These resolutions having been adopted, a motion was carried to send copies of them to Miss Jennie Chase of Cairo, Ill., Mr. [illegible] Wayland, Mich., the Kalamazoo TELEGRAPH, the Detroit Herald, and Tecumseh paper for publication.

The meeting then closed with singing and prayer.

A friend writing from Kalamazoo, and referring to the memorial service above mentioned, says: "I attended the memorial service for Miss Chase in the College Chapel this afternoon. The members of the faculty who had been associated with her spoke appreciatively of her labors and her devotion; two of the students also spoke of her kindness and genuine interest in each student. It is sad to think of her loneliness and helplessness. Surely she must be happy now." The writer further says that Prof. Brooks, in his remarks on the occasion, referring to Tecumseh as Miss Chase's home, spoke feelingly of Dr. Hamilton as her life-long friend and counselor, and paid a high tribute to his long-felt interest in Kalamazoo College, his unfailing loyalty to it, his benefactions, and his long and valuable service as one of its Board of Trustees. To the interests of the College, and the general welfare of the young who were gathered there for instruction, no doubt Miss Chase gave the best of her life.—F. A.

To Whom It May Concern.

TECUMSEH, MICH., Dec. 23, 1887.

It will undoubtedly be remembered by those interested that a number of the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity combined to resist the what they considered unlawful collection of their notes given to the M. and O. railroad Company. It will be remembered that there was some money raised and placed in my hands to defray any expense that might arise, and as I have not used but little of this money for said purpose, and there still remains in my hands a balance belonging to said company, therefore, I will set the 14th of January next, at one o'clock P. M., to meet as many of said company as can conveniently be present at the office of Webster Frazier in Tecumseh to settle with them.

Respectfully,
J. B. COLVIN.

WORK OF OUR SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES.

Constituents Can Look Over The Record and See If the Men They Voted For Are Accomplishing Any Good for the Country—The Week's Work in Senate and House.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 22.—[illegible] of Special Agent Tinsley's report on the condition of affairs in Utah was received in the Senate yesterday and referred to the committee on Territories. The report is said to be very voluminous and to contain a mass of information [illegible] the organization and history of the Mormon church, the practice of polygamy by the Mormons, the [illegible] recently established by the Mormons, the position taken by the priesthood on the question of obedience to the laws of the land, and the attitude of the Mormons towards the Gentiles. The report is said to aid in the establishment and temporary support of common schools, and to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the Territory, and to cover cattle diseases. The dispute between Sawyer and Butler as to the committee by which the postal appropriation bill should be referred was ended by a vote concurring in the reference to Sawyer's committee, and of the position taken by Pugh, offered a resolution declaring in the first place it expedient to retain the taxes on whiskey and tobacco. He opposed the abolition of the whiskey tax, but would agree to repeal the tobacco tax. Sherman moved to refer the president's message to the finance committee and said he would speak on the subject after the holidays, and the Senate adjourned.

DANIEL MANNING.

house by the speaker—the committee on rules. It consists of the speaker, Randall, Mills, Reed and Cannon. A lively debate was had on a proposition to refer the report of the court of claims to the appropriation committee, with instructions to report all proper claims in the general deficiency bill, and the motion was adopted. Numerous propositions for changes in the rules were offered, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 22.—In the senate Tuesday petitions were received in favor of Butler's educational bill and against admitting Utah as a state. The undervaluation bill provoking these dispatches yesterday was referred. Bills to quiet titles to Des Moines River lands were given to Mrs. Gen. Logan, Senator Harrison and others considered. Among the bills introduced and referred were the following: The postal telegraph bills (Pomeroy and Cullom's) were referred to the postoffice committee. Call wanted the Mormon memorial in favor of statehood for Utah printed, and Edmunds objecting, Call read the memorial, thus gaining a point. The Blair educational bill was then taken up, after which an executive session was held, and upon the doors reopening the senate adjourned.

Brown, in the house, offered a resolution urging the treasury department to use diligent efforts to prevent the landing in this country of large importations of paupers, alleged to be sent over by the European governments to take the place of the miners in the Lehigh valley, referred to labor committee. The house, then, after transacting some uninteresting business, adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 23.—A resolution was adopted by the senate Wednesday instructing the elections committee to consider the question of the adoption of a common form of credentials of senators for the guidance of state governors. The postoffice committee was instructed to inquire into the subject of reducing letter postage to 1 cent. A bill to appoint a surgeon, whose specialty shall be the heart, to the fish commission at a salary of $2,000 per annum, was passed. The usual resolution for adjournment over the holiday recess Christmas was adopted after a rather amusing debate. The Blair educational bill bill was then taken up as unfinished business, and after an executive session the senate adjourned.

Randall reported to the house from the rules committee, recommending the adoption of the old rules with the addition of the following standing committees, each consisting of thirteen members: On merchant marine and fisheries, [illegible] committees on civil service, election of president, vice president and representatives, Indian depredation claims, and alcoholic liquor traffic, this last eleven members. McCreary wanted to amend the report so as to require the appropriation bills to be reported within sixty days during the long session and forty days during the short session, but Randall said the committee was considering the subject. The report was then adopted and the house, after adopting resolutions of regret at the death of Representative-elect Kane, of New York, adjourned as a further mark of respect.

WASHINGTON CITY, Dec. 24.—In the senate Thursday Dolph introduced a bill providing for the payment of Indian depredation claims. The amount involved is about $15,000,000. Voorhees introduced a bill to provide for law and order in "No Man's Land," and Teller to provide for compulsory education of Indians. Dolph proposed a constitutional amendment empowering congress to pass uniform marriage and divorce laws and prohibiting bigamy and polygamy was taken up, an Dolph spoke in favor thereof. Bills were passed to establish two more land offices in Colorado and to remove the political disabilities of A. C. Meyers. The senate then went into executive session and half an hour later the doors were reopened. The death of Seth C. Moffatt, representative from Michigan, was announced and the senate adjourned until Jan. 4.

The house sent a resolution, to pay the employes of the house who have been discharged since Dec. 5 a month's salary, to the committee on accounts, and then the death of Representative Moffatt, of Michigan, was announced by Burrows, who made a brief address on the sad event, after which appropriate resolutions were adopted, providing for a committee of seven representatives and three senators to see majesty the remains to the deceased's home and the house adjourned until Jan. 4.

ASLEEP FOR ALL TIME.

THE KING OF WALL STREET.

Gentle Death Has Had Mr. Manning in Its Embrace.

[illegible] been up watching by the bedside without rest, went out for a short walk in the fresh air. He returned in a short time and entering the room where the nurse and patient were, discovered that his father was breathing faster, with shortened breath. The mark of death was on his countenance, and though Mr. Manning had repeatedly requested his family not to witness his passing away, it was [illegible] the household, and by the presence of his family Mr. Manning quietly and gently ceased to breathe.

About the bedside were gathered Mrs. Manning, James H. Manning, and Fred C. Manning with their wives, Mrs. John A. Delehanty and Miss Mary E. Manning, his daughters; Miss Martha V. Manning, his sister; John B. Manning, his brother, with his wife, and William J. Fryer and Robert L. Fryer, brothers to Mrs. Daniel Manning. Dr. Henry Ford, his physician, and Fred R. Moore, Mr. Manning's attendant, were also present, the latter having also been the attendant of Secretary Folger when he died. Moore was one of the coffin bearers for Mr. Folger and will probably also officiate in the capacity for Mr. Manning, as he had a great regard for Mr. Manning.

Mr. Manning died in the communion of the Episcopal church and was the recipient of the church's sacred rites during the illness, the celebrant being Rev. Dr. Livingston, of St. Paul's church, who was also present at the death bed.

The funeral will take place at St. Paul's Episcopal church on Lancaster street, at 2 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon. The remains will probably rest in the vault until spring, when interment will take place in the family lot, which is a large stone sarcophagus bearing the name "Daniel Manning" has stood for two years. To flags throughout the city are at half-mast and grief is general. Mayor Thacher has issued a proclamation calling upon citizens to display the usual mourning symbols during the funeral.

The physician says that Mr. Manning's illness commenced in Washington. He selected for his private office in the treasury building not the large room occupied by Secretary McCulloch, but the smaller room which Secretary Folger had occupied when the first symptoms of his fatal attack of Bright's disease with cardiac complications manifested itself. The room was subsequently found to be in a wretched sanitary condition, a large gas pipe, connected directly with a sewer, allowing the free escape of sewer gas into the office. The doctor evidently believes that Mr. Manning's occupancy of a room so bad in a sanitary view was the cause of his death.

Telegrams already received show that his funeral will bring together the most illustrious body of men Albany has collected in years. One of the first telegrams received was from President Cleveland, as follows:

TO MRS. DANIEL MANNING: Though in this hour of anguish the grief your sorrow is too sacred to be shared, and too deep to be reached by earthly comfort, may I express to you my sincere and tender sympathy, sanctioned by my own affection at the loss of a true and trusted friend and a loyal associate, who but lately stood at my side in full charge, with patriotic zeal, of solemn public duty.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Other dispatches of a similar tenor were received from Governor Hill, L. J. Fitzgerald, Secretary Fairchild, Col. Lamont, Samuel J. Randall, Secretary Bayard and many others.

Daniel Manning was born in Albany, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1831. His parentage was of Irish, English, and Dutch extraction. He was a poor boy, and his early opportunities for schooling were very limited. At 11 years of age he went to work as an office boy at the establishment of The Albany Argus, with which paper he was, in one capacity or another, connected until his appointment by President Cleveland as secretary of the treasury. In 1853 he assumed sole charge of The Argus and was elected president of the company. He was a member of the New York Democratic state convention of 1854 that nominated Samuel J. Tilden for governor and was a delegate to the St. Louis convention of 1876 that nominated Mr. Tilden for president. He was also a member of the New York Democratic state committee since 1876, was its secretary in 1879 and 1880, and was elected chairman in 1881. He was warmly interested in the nomination of Mr. Cleveland for president at Chicago. Several months ago Mr. Manning's health compelled him to retire from the cabinet.

Mr. Manning was active and successful outside of journalism and politics. He was long a director of the Albany & Susquehanna railway company and president of the National Commercial bank of Albany of, which he was first director and then vice president. He was also park commissioner of Albany and a director of the Albany Electric light company.

He has two sons and a daughter. His first wife died four years ago. He contracted a second matrimonial alliance in November, 1884, immediately after the election of Mr. Cleveland to the presidency, leading to the altar Miss Fryer, daughter of an Albany dry goods prince. He is worth several hundred thousand dollars.

[illegible] she thought she would [illegible] done [illegible] I repeatedly urged [illegible] Zo-Phora, but they were [illegible] prejudiced against "[illegible]." Finally the mother said [illegible] must do something, and this is as [illegible] help her as anything." She [illegible] persuaded the father to let the [illegible] try it. As a result in four months [illegible] functions were established and [illegible] and in six months she was [illegible] picture of health—a living wonder [illegible] all who had known her. [illegible] could describe 20 other cases, not [illegible] as this, but still very remarkable cures.

Mrs. Mary C. Chandler.

[illegible] Battle Creek, Mich.

To Hubbard's Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich.

Gentlemen—Your letter of the 7th, inst. before me to reply will say. If my [illegible] letter to you will do suffering humanity any good it should be published. It was through a letter from a [illegible] at Pontiac that first brought [illegible] my daughter's notice and my [illegible] regret is, that we did not know of it a year ago instead of the last six months. I shall still prescribe it to patients, as I think it the most wonderful medicine known, or ever placed before the public. Truly your reward will be great as suffering humanity is relieved, and as you become more [illegible] known. Very truly yours,

DR. A. E. CHAPMAN.

FITS

When I say Cure [illegible] FITS I do not mean [illegible] stop for a time [illegible] have them return again, but a radical cure. I have made the disease of Fits, Epilepsy or Falling Sickness a life long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not sending for a cure. Give express and post office address. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

UNEQUALED CLUB OFFER

TO READERS OF

THE HERALD.

TWO PAPERS FOR PRICE OF ONE

The Publishers of The Herald and Garden have arranged a club offer whereby they can offer their own paper and the Garden with their own the special terms given below.

WHAT "THE FARM AND GARDEN" IS

It is ONLY a farm paper devoted to the interests of its readers, and made up, managed, and edited from the farm standpoint. Contains no other matter than what pertains to farm life.

It is ONLY a farm paper that does not insert frauds upon its farmers in its advertising columns and fearlessly exposes them as fast as they appear in others.

It is ONLY a farm paper which takes pains to look up and verify all its statements about methods and about new varieties of fruits and vegetables. It intends not to mislead; it seldom does.

It is ONLY a farm paper which is edited with a view of helping the farmer rather than preaching at him.

It is ONLY a farm paper which believes the farmer can recuperate in some other way than by being disappointed. Specimens sent to farmers who send us two cents for postage.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER:

We will send The Herald and The Farm and Garden one year and The Herald one year for the price $1.50.

STEKETEE'S NEURALGIA DROPS

SURE CURE FOR NEURALGIA, RHEUMATISM, HEADACHE, BACKACHE, HEART CORRECTOR, OR PAINS.

It is the grandest FEMALE REMEDY known. It is the ladies' friend. Try it. No one should be without it.

Valuable Testimonials.

DON'T USE THE KNIFE.

A REMARKABLE CASE.—Doctors gave her up as incurable and her jaw bone must be removed, but is saved by the use of Steketee's Neuralgia Drops. The undersigned herewith wishes to say what a remarkable cure Steketee's Neuralgia Drops done in curing the undersigned of neuralgia. I had been troubled with pain in my jaw for a long time. I employed a skillful physician in this city. He intended that my case was incurable unless my jaw bone was removed. I called on Mr. Steketee for advise. He advised after having examined my case to use his Neuralgia Drops. The result of using one half bottle of said Neuralgia Drops entirely cured me, and without the use of a knife or violence.

MISS G. ROEST.

Corner of Clancy and Cedar Streets. Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 5, 1883.

Many people have written me if the above writing are true, I now answer all inquires that every word of the above writing is true. It is nearly four years since I was cured; had no more pain nor neuralgia. It is worth the weight in gold to me. MISS G. ROEST, November 1, 1887. Now Mrs. B De Korne.

Ask your druggist for Steketee's Neuralgia Drops. If they have not it for sale, then take nothing else, but send direct to G. G. Steketee, Grand Rapids, Mich., who will send three bottles on receipt of $1.50; express paid.

P.S.—Trial bottle sent free on receipt of 10 cents in U. S. postage stamps.

PAIN-EXPELLER

OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflammatory Injuries and Disorders.

Ointment is a safe and certain remedy for all inflammatory affecting the most wonderful cures to the unparalleled demand with which it has met at once as the greatest medicine ever for outward application.

Incredulous are convinced, and the are compelled to believe in the this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammations and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attended with Inflammation.

It fails to restore the natural functions of and equalize the circulation of the blood. Its action as a controlling power is gained over all malignant forms of disease. It penetrates every portion of the human frame; every muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is to the core and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that we have no space to publish which we have from all parts of the country. We simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. We but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Greatly Excited.

Not a few of the citizens of Tecumseh have recently become greatly excited over the astounding facts, that several of their friends who had been pronounced by their physicians as incurable and beyond all hope—suffering with dreaded monster Consumption—have been completely cured by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, the only remedy that does positively cure all throat and lung diseases, Coughs, Colds, Asthma and Bronchitis.

Trial bottles free, large bottles $1.

Robes de Nuit in Germany.

Before I went abroad I was of the opinion that the use of robes de nuit was nearly universal in all civilized communities, but an incident happened while I was in Germany taught me that my supposition was a mistake. I lived for some months in a house where about twenty German students had their rooms, and found them a very gentlemanly set of fellows and apparently quite sufficiently civilized. For some time I had noticed that my supply of night shirts seemed to be smaller than it should be, and finally took my washerwoman to task. She declared that she had returned every garment that had come into her hands. I said that a number of mine were missing, and suggested that she might have by mistake sent my night shirts to some of the boarders. "Oh no, sir," she replied. "That cannot be, for you are the only gentleman in the house that ever wears them." I could scarcely believe this statement, but was convinced scarcely a shop in the city kept this article for sale, the reason given being that the demand was very slight. I have come to the conclusion that either night shirts are not necessary to civilization or that the Germans cannot yet be regarded as entirely effete.—S. T. Hawley, in Globe-Democrat.

Nervous Diseases.

There are more nervous than blood diseases. Thus, a weakness of the nerves of the brain causes headache, fits, dizziness, sleeplessness, etc.; a weakness of the nerves of the stomach causes dyspepsia, pain, wind, etc.; of the lungs, makes "weak lungs" of the liver produces biliousness, constipation, etc.; of the women induces irregularities, sterility, pains, etc.; of the sexual organs, impotency, etc. For all weaknesses Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine surpasses all other remedies. Trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

The best on earth can only be said of Bragg's Cayenne Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will salve your piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. Sold by D. Gee. Fitzgerald.

It is hard work for the baby to cut teeth, and it should be assisted by the use of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup which will end the lollipop game.

English spavin liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeney, stifles, sprains, sore and swollen throat, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh, Mich.

Itch, mange, and scratches of every kind on human or animals cured in 30 minutes by Woodford's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh Mich.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites,

For Lung Troubles and wasting Diseases. Dr. A. L. SIMONARD, New Orleans, La., says: Scott's Emulsion is the finest preparation of the kind. In affections of the lungs and other wasting diseases, we may consider it our most reliable agent. In a perfectly elegant and agreeable form."

We and You Believe It?

That we are authorized by the proprietor of Kemp's Sarsaparilla to refund the money to any one who has taken three-fourths of a bottle without relief. We are positive that no other proprietor has the confidence in his medicine to do this. It is for enriching, cleansing and purifying the blood and toning up the system. Price $1,00 Call at our store. Baker & Hall.

Babies that are fretful, peevish, cross, or troubled with Windy Colic, Teething Pains, or Stomach Disorders, can be relieved at once by using Acker's Baby Soother. It contains no Opium or Morphine, hence is safe. Price 25 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co., Druggists.

Drunkeness or the Liquor Habit Positively Cured by Administering Dr Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of coffee or tea without the knowledge of the person taking it; is absolutely harmless and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been made temperate men who have taken Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking on their own free will. It NEVER FAILS. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. For full particulars, address GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race st., Cincinnati, O.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Manistee wants an extension of the Chi-got more "tin" than any other town of her size in the state, is in a position to obtain new lines of railway or almost anything else she may desire.

John Akens, a well-known citizen of Cassopolis, Mich., disappeared last Friday. A piece of gun was found near the lake shore, and suspicions are entertained that he was murdered and his body sunk in the water.

Nine daughters, eight of whom are living, 59 grandchildren, 140 great-grandchildren, and 11 of a still younger generation, gathered around the hearthstone of Mrs. Dora Wise, of Chester, Eaton county, at a recent family reunion. Mrs. W. is now 93 years old, and still in the enjoyment of excellent health.

It takes 1,500 cords of wood to feed the Sigler charcoal kilns a single month, but they turn out 62,000 bushels of charcoal. It takes $2,000 every thirty days to "run the machine."

Galien is a healthy town, none of her 300 people having died the past year.

Saturday at Marshall, Mich., Andrew Armstrong and Joel Case, both of whom have seen three score years, were sentenced to thirty days each for illegal cohabitation with two young women. Case took his punishment so hard that he died in prison Sunday night, first bequeathing an unincumbered farm to his paramour, regarding whom he said she was "the only woman he had ever loved."

Kalamazoo rather wants a $100,000 public building at Uncle Sam's expense, and Congressman Burrows will introduce a bill therefor at the present session of congress, which will greatly please his constituents.

Last September, at Port Huron, Mich., John S. Flummerfelt and his wife celebrated their golden wedding. Tuesday Mrs. Flummerfelt began suit for divorce alleging gross cruelty at divers times on the part of her spouse, who, she states, beat her in a brutal manner after the guests had departed on the night of their golden wedding anniversary.

Several new boats are in process of construction, designed to ply between western Michigan ports and Chicago another season.

Lansing has a Presbyterian church that has successfully weathered the tempests, and church choir squabbles, of forty winters.

Kalamazoo is said to have secured the removal of a Minneapolis washboard factory. The Kalamazoos evidently desire to keep clean.

Peck & Cutler, a Shelby broom handle firm, have a two years' contract for all the handles they can turn out. The broom is a great civilizer.

Steve Dorsey, of star route fame, ex-Senator Windom and Jesse Grant have gathered together their coppers and bought a slice of the Gogebic iron mines. The price paid approximates $2,500,000.

Mr. Hazenine, a Whitehall citizen, was held up the other night by a couple of footpads and robbed of an even $100, but he gave such an unearthly yell in consequence that they dropped the tin and skedaddled from the wrath to come.

Major W. W. Van Antwerp, postmaster at Jackson, Michigan, died at his residence in that city Wednesday morning.

Among the forfeited railroad lands that will soon be open to entry under the general laws, are many valuable tracts of the Grand Rapids & Indiana, Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw, and the Chicago & Northwestern, in central and northern Michigan.

A St. Louis man loaded up with the firewater of that town, and then went over to the neighboring village of Alma, to paint town red. Before the job was completed, however, he was "gathered in," and allowed to cool off in the local calaboose. Next morning he was arraigned and fined $4 and trimmings, which he promptly paid from a little wad of $10,000. And now the St. Louis people are wondering how in the world they ever allowed him to depart with so much loose change in his pocket.

The town of Grand Rapids' city hall is to be ornamented with a $1,000 clock. "On time" would be an appropriate motto for her city council.

There are 138 Michigan towns now equipped with new fire signals, and yet the people of these towns are just as uncertain about "coming events" as they were before the first flag was unfurled.

Not long since, Eugene Converse was Calhoun county's prosecuting attorney. Now he's serving the state for five years in the Jackson prison. How are the mighty fallen.

Something must be wrong with Lenawee county ruralists. If reports be true, they have not only been destroying cattle not their own, but have actually been engaged in burning each other's buildings. Such examples of brotherly love are not exactly conducive to prosperity and happiness.

Nearly 1,500 Bay City children attend the private schools of that town. Rather particular people, those Bay City folks.

A Saginaw church, whose pastor is the Rev. Broadax, with a lady member named Crobar, is marching on to victory.

"Father Benson," a well-known citizen of the Grand Traverse region, died at Kingsley on Wednesday at the age of 89. He had been a member of the Masonic fraternity for the past sixty-five years and was beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Lansing folks have their eyes and ears turned in the direction of Ionia, in the hope that the D., L. & N. railway shops of the latter place will take a trip Lansingward.

A $20,000 buggy company is among Battle Creek's recent acquisitions. It will make the Sherman road cart a specialty.

Hon. J. C. Burrows, of the Fourth district, will orate at the Boston merchants' annual dinner, on Dec. 25.

Ada Lee, a capable lady lawyer of Port Huron, will migrate to California, where there's greener legal pastures.

We notice that a state exchange complains of the poor penmanship of a Saginaw lawyer. Have we any right to expect the Saginaw lawyer to be totally unlike all other members of the legal profession?

'Tis claimed that St. Joseph county peppermint oil is so badly adulterated when it reaches the English market as to contain little trace of the original oil, and that it has "the smell of decayed fish." No wonder that colic among English babies is on the increase.

At a special election held on Monday, Allegan decided to go in for $9,500 worth of engine house, council room, and other public improvements. But the breezes continue to blow through her ancient court-house with an air of old-time freedom.

Barraga's $5,000 hotel was burned Monday morning, John Bennick perishing in the flames.

A Manistee parson preached Sunday evening on "Hell! Where Is It? How to Get there." Times have changed in these latter days. The main question used to be "How to keep out."

The number of people throughout the state who have sustained fatal injuries by falling, has been unusually large the present month. David McNabb, a Barry county farmer, is one of the latest, and although he fell but three feet, his neck was broken and death followed a half hour later.

BOOKS, THREE CENTS EACH!

The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, printed from good readable type on good paper, and many of them handsomely illustrated. They are without exception the cheapest books ever published in any land or language, and furnish to the masses of the people an opportunity to secure the best literature of the day at the most trifling expense. In any other series these great works would cost many times the price at which they are here offered. Each one is complete in itself.

Wonders of the World. Natural and Other. Containing descriptions and illustrations of the most wonderful works of nature and of man. Very interesting and instructive.

Wonders of the Sea. A description of the many wonderful and beautiful things found at the bottom of the ocean. With profuse illustrations.

"A Pleasure Excursion," and Other Sketches. By Josiah Allen's Wife. A collection of irresistibly funny sketches by the most popular humorous writer of the day.

The Aunt Keziah Papers. By Clara Augusta, author of "The Knez Domination." A most ridiculously funny book! Answer not to folly lest thyself be like unto him.

Christmas Stories. By Charles Dickens. Contains a number of the most charming Christmas stories ever written by the greatest writer who ever lived. Each one is complete.

Round the Evening Lamp. A book of stories, pictures, puzzles and games, for the little folks at home.

Popular Recitations and Dialogues, humorous, dramatic and pathetic, including all the latest, best and most popular.

The Self-made Men of Modern Times. Contains portraits and biographies of famous self-made Americans, from the time of Franklin to the present.

Familiar Quotations. Containing the origin and authorship of many phrases frequently met in reading and conversation. A valuable work of reference.

Low Life in New York. A series of vivid word pictures showing the dark side of life in the great city. Illustrated.

The Road to Wealth. Not an advertising circular, but a thoroughly practical work, pointing out a way by which all may make money, easily, rapidly and honestly.

One Hundred Popular Songs, sentimental, pathetic and comic, including most of the favorites, new and old.

Sir Noel's Heir. A Novel. By Miss May Agnes Fleming.

The TIMES!

PHILADELPHIA.

Cheapest. Brightest Freshest and Best

THE MOST COMPLETE NEWSPAPER Published in Philadelphia.

The Times is the most widely read newspaper published in Pennsylvania. Its readers are among the more intelligent, progressive and thrifty people of every faith. It is emphatically an independent newspaper—Independent in everything; neutral in nothing.

The News of the World—The Times has all the facilities of advanced journalism for each day news from all quarters of the Globe, in addition to that of the Associated Press, now covering the whole world in its scope, making it the perfection of a newspaper, with everything carefully edited to occupy the smallest space.

The Coming Year will be one of universal public interest in the United States. Party organs will perform their duties as party interests shall demand, but the rapidly growing intelligence and independence of the age calls for the independent newspaper when great political conflicts are to be met.

The Times is a one-cent paper only in price. It aims to have the largest circulation by deserving it, and claims that it is unsurpassed in all the essentials of a great Metropolitan newspaper.

Specimen Copies of any edition will be sent free to anyone sending their address.

Sunday Edition—56 pages—Handsomely illustrated $2 a year. Weekly $1.

Terms—Daily, $3 per annum; $1 for 4 months; 25c. per month delivered by carriers for 6 cts. per week. Sunday edition, an immense quadruple sheet of 128 columns, elegantly illustrated, $2 per annum; 5c. per copy. Daily and Sunday, $5 per annum; 50c. per month. Weekly edition $1 per annum.

Harper's Weekly.

ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Weekly has a well established place as the leading illustrated newspaper in America. Its fairness in its editorial comments on current politics has earned for it the respect and confidence of all impartial readers, and the variety and excellence of its literary contents, which include serial and short stories by the best living English and American writers, make it a favorite for the perusal of people of the widest range of tastes and pursuits. Supplements are frequently provided and no expense is spared to bring the highest order of artistic ability to bear upon the illustrations of the changeful phases of home and foreign history. In all its features Harper's Weekly is admirably adapted to be a welcome guest in every household.

The annual Sunday school election for the ensuing year was held Sunday Jan. 1, '88, resulting in the following:

Supt.—G. P. Waring.
1st. Ast. Supt.—Mrs. H. J. Williams.
2d. " " —Mrs. M. A. Wilson.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—Mary Osgood.
Cholster—Rev. W. H. Benton.
Organist—Belle Barlow.

The Library entertainment given at the library Saturday evening, was not as largely attended as would have been had the night been more pleasant. The regular advertised program was somewhat broken up by several who were to take part, that were not present. The exercises were opened however by an instrumental duet by Misses Belle Barlow and Anna Osborn, followed by devotional exercises by Rev. Rev. W. H. Benton, after which Miss Barlow, by request, favored the audience with one of her choice instrumental selections. Prof. E. A. Wilson then made a short address, presenting the advantage of such an institution as the Hall Library. John VanVleet then favored the friends with a violin solo, with an organ accompaniment by Gerard VanVleet. R. T. Bush then read a humorous selection from Harriet Beecher Stowe, followed by a piano solo by Wendell Bush. Mrs. Warren Jones then read a selection entitled, "sewing on a button," which was somewhat amusing. Hattie Russell gave a recitation, "auction extraordinary," after which the Crescent quartette rendered one of their fine selections, with sleigh bell echo in the distance. One has to hear the Crescents to appreciate their ability and talent. Mr. Bush then read another selection and made a short address in preference of country life to that of the city. The exercises then closed by a request that the Crescent quartette favor the audience with a selection, which they did to the entire satisfaction and pleasure of all present.

Married by Rev. W. H. Benton, at the residence of the bride's parents, Ridgeway, Mich., on the evening of the 26th, Dec. 1887, Miss May Smith to Mr. Eddie Harrison. We extend hearty congratulations and wish the wedded ones a highly prosperous voyage through life.

Thursday evening, in answer to a very kind invitation from H. J. Williams and wife, we spent the evening at their pleasant home with their Sabbath school classes, which are constituted of gentlemen only, but knowing how unpleasant the evening would be for them without the presence of the ladies, gave each the privilege of bringing a lady friend. The company when all gathered [illegible] of 70 [illegible] ments were served by the host and hostess, consisting of oysters, cold meats, pickles, celery, cakes, etc., in the neatest style possible. During the evening the friends joined in a social and pleasant converse; after supper was over the entire company assembled in the parlor, when Geo. D. Arner, in a quiet way, commanded Mr. Williams attention and in the following remarks in behalf of the members of his class, presented him with a Bible and the Dore Bible Gallery, by Gustave Dore. Mr. Williams: You have gathered around you this evening the members of your Sunday school class for the purpose of feeding the temporal body, and to please the human eye and taste, and as our teacher in our Sunday school you have long tried to feed our immortal souls, and to implant in our minds the way of life. As our teacher, both by word and examples you have sought to lead our minds up to the higher and nobler life of which this book, that the class through me now present to you, their teacher, and as we present you this, upon the inside of which you will find the names of the class, and allow us to hope that for years to come we may find you in your corner as teacher, and that the friendship which now exists, may become stronger until broken by that which breaks all earthly ties. After a few broken sentences by Mr. Williams in response, Willis Helm in a few words presented Mrs. Williams with a fine plush album as a gift from her class: "Mrs. Williams, you have gathered around you your class for the purpose of giving them an evening of pleasure and enjoyment and as we present you this, we hope that in the future as you look over the faces of relatives and friends that it may contain, you will think of us." The gifts were a genuine surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Williams; not until a late hour did the pleasant party bid good night and return to their several homes feeling well pleased with the evening visit.

[We are obliged to defer the Florance wedding until next week.—ED. HERALD.]

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

School in Dist. No. 4, closed on account of scarlet fever.

Miss Josie, daughter of H. Hand, has the scarlet fever, but is doing well.

Miss Maud Easlick is better.

Fred Hoagland is sorely afflicted.

E. R. Olds has a sick horse.

Ed. Miller and Johnnie Bachman are out from Sanford.

Henry Karcher of Howard city came home for a New Year's dinner, returning Monday.

John Southwick "fiddled" at Wellsville Friday night.

The residence of L. V. Miller is looped on to the local telegraph line, which adds another instrument and four or five operators.

Seventy couple turned out to the New Year's party at Ed. Densmore's, Friday night.

Democrats welcome the issue which they have desired for years.

The recent heavy falls of snow in the northern part of the state make lumbermen look happy.

Cheboygan is talking of dry dock and prohibition at the same time. They ought to go well together.

The Canadian government has resolved to reorganize its military; but it would conduce a good deal more to its peace and safety to reorganize its fishery laws.

the Democratic party [illegible] chalk lined, and the chips fall on the [illegible] dly ground. Fellows who don't like it can climb over the fence into some other clearing.

Congress has lost three members already by death, one of whom was Congressman Moffatt of this state; by his demise, Michigan loses one of her most brilliant and influential members.

It will be Cleveland vs. Blaine next year. That is as certain as any future political event can be. And Blaine will be so badly beaten next time that he will never have any notion of trying it again.

The adjournment of the Senate without acting on a number of Presidential appointments left Don Dickinson's Christmas stocking waving empty and dry in the Potomac bazaards, but he knows it is all wool and warranted not to shrink.—Lansing Republican.

All right. Mr. Blaine has shown his colors—the red, white and blue for the monopolists, and the black flag for the wage earners, on that platform he will be snowed under so deep next November he won't be melted out until we celebrate the discovery of America by Columbus in 1892, and then, perhaps he will have more sense.—New York Herald.

Since the President's message was sent to Congress its proper spirit in the treatment of the taxation condition of the country has touched sympathetically a responsive part of the country. For the time being a great many forget that there is such a thing as a difference in politics. The bold words of the President are admired and approved wherever there is patriotism to appreciate them and where the needs of the poor are such as to move people to hail the welcome advent of relief.—Rome Sentinel.

The hostility shown by some Republicans, against Mr. Lamar's confirmation as judge of the Supreme Court, is as unreasonable as the waving of the bloody shirt. No objection should be made to a man capable in every respect for the position to which he has been nominated merely because he took part in the rebellion. The rebellion is past and buried and this is a united country now. When will cranks in and out of Congress realize this simple fact?

DON MANUEL DICKINSON has no end of luck. He is a steady gaited, level headed statesman himself and can make as fast a race as any of them when celerity becomes an important factor in the case. Now he has a team that are built exactly that way. High authority pronounces them the finest matched team ever mated in the country, and their trainer declares he has never been able to drive them to a break. It's just so with Don. He can get there at top speed, but never leaves his feet nor loses his head.—Evening News.

It is a fortunate thing for the people that President Cleveland put one such man as ex-Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, on the Pacific railroad commission. He belongs to the class of robust reformers about whom there is no guile, and he has had the courage to tell the unvarnished truth about the gigantic bankrupt corporations which have grabbed tracts of public lands equal to whole states, made their projectors and contractors millionaires, and can't even pay the interest on their indebtedness to the government. If congress were not a band of cowards, and if the Pacific railroad lobby were not so powerful and "persuasive," some good results might be expected from these revelations. As it is, probably nothing whatever will be done to bring these companies to time.—Evening News.

PENNSYLVANIA FARMERS AND THE TARIFF.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, in session at Harrisburg, has had a sensation in the shape of a very powerful report from the State Overseer, Mr. T. S. McSparrow of Lancaster county, sustaining roundly and effectively the President's plan of revenue reform. There is no reason that we know of why this deliverance of Overseer McSparrow should have caused a sensation, except that it occurred in Pennsylvania, and in a body whose platform, on similar occasions, has generally been occupied by certain very loud and obtrusive advocates of a Chinese tariff. That these latter do not represent the views of the plain, dered farmers of Pennsylvania any more than they do those of any other section of the country, is apparent from the reception accorded Mr. McSparrow's sensible and courageous report. The Overseer did not, like so many other farmers, haggle and protest at the wool monopoly, while anxiously seeking relief from other oppressive taxes. A reliable report of his speech says:

He appealed to the farmers not to be misled on the raw material, and gave figures to show that to protect a wool industry amounting to $45,000,000 the people pay as consumers an excess of $146,000,000. Then he quoted from figures showing the assessed valuation of farms in Pennsylvania, how freight, manufactures, [illegible] taxations, and high tariff are crowding the agricultural resources. From 1850 to 1860, under low tariff, farms increased 100 per cent in valuation; from 1860 to 1870, under high tariff, 41 per cent, and from 1870 to 1880 also under high tariff, only 9 per cent. He opposed the repeal of the internal revenue tax, and favored tariff reform, but not indiscriminate free trade.

The Overseer is supported in his course by the exceptionally able and thoroughly informed State Lecturer and State Senator, Gerard C. Brown, from York.

It was intended by the tariff mongers to induce the State Grange of Pennsylvania to pass a resolution condemning the President's message, and declaring that the farmers were extremely anxious to continue the contribution of all the surplus earnings of their industry toward the maintenance of tariff monopoly. But the plot does not seem to have prospered; those who had it in charge had not counted upon an encounter with farmers enlightened upon their own interests, and led by such men as Brown and McSparrow.

Those gentlemen have done a good day's work for their order. The Grange is capable of an infinite amount of good, but it can accomplish none unless it opens its eyes to the light of the new day which has dawned upon the naturally productive industries of the country.—New York Star.

CLEVELAND AND BLAINE.

Mr. Blaine's prompt, explicit and elaborate criticism of President Cleveland's message cabled to his chief organ in New York, can have only one logical interpretation—that Blaine has accepted Cleveland's challenge on tariff revision and revenue reduction and will make the personal issue of 1884 with his successful competitor next year.

That Mr. Blaine is the choice of three-fourths of the Republicans of the country for President, does not admit of doubt. Among those ardently desiring his election to the Presidency are many who are in doubt as to his availability, but Mr. Blaine's bugle call comes from beyond the seas accepting Cleveland's challenge to the country as a challenge to himself, and he slues his castor in the ring and summons his followers to the combat.

Mr. Blaine assumes that President Cleveland has made a distinct issue in favor of free trade, and he rushes into the field apparently without seriously inquiring what he is to fight. When he soberly reads the Presidents tariff views and then reads the pointed commendation of the Chicago Tribune, hitherto his ablest personal organ, he may discover that the issue he has squared himself to meet is the creation of his wish rather than the creation of fact.

But it matters not how far Mr. Blaine understands or misunderstands the issue so clearly presented to the country by President Cleveland, the one thing now apparently settled is that Mr. Blaine will be the Republican candidate. He can be the nominee by an overwhelming vote if he demands it, and his column and a half of cabled interview in his New York organ, when boiled down to bed rock, simply says that Mr. Blaine commands that he shall be the Republican leader in the great battle of 1884.—Philadelphia Times.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely for the last fifteen years, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, 69 Valley St., Rendrill, Perry Co., Ohio.

A Large Estate.

A broad land is this in which we live, dotted so thickly with thrifty cities, owns and villages. Amid them all, with ever increasing popularity and helpfulness, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, giving hope [illegible] despair. Wherever there is humanity there is suffering; wherever there is suffering there is the best field for this greatest American Remedy. Consumption (which is lung scrofula), yields to it, if employed in the early stages of the disease; Chronic Nasal Catarrh, yields to it; Kidney and liver diseases, yield to it. If you want the best known remedy for all diseases of the blood, ask for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and take no other.

FREE TRADE AND PROTECTION.

In the midst of a magnificent thirty minute oration James G. Blaine rules with only three commas and one full stop, Mr. Evarts informed the Young Republican convention "that we do not want people in authority who doubt the supremacy in arms of General Grant." (Loud and tumultuous applause.)

Bravo! Senator. As the pretty little village maid said to Adonis, "That's the best thing you ever got off." But why do not some of you old or young Republicans build a monument to General Grant's supremacy in arms? Or help build one? Or show some leader's memory than to use his name only to point a period or bring down the gallery?

Perhaps the greatest humbug in your party of humbugs is the free trade you make of Lincoln and Grant's names, and the protection you exercise over your own pockets when any suggestion is made to perpetuate their fame in something more substantial than wind.—The Star.

Smyptoms of Heart Disease

Diseased hearts are as common as diseased lungs kidneys or stomach, but far less understood. The symptoms are shortness of breath, when sweeping, etc., oppression in the chest, faint, weak or hungry spells, dreaming, pain or tenderness in the side, swelling feet, dropsy, etc. The unnatural circulation of the blood in the lungs, stomach, kidneys, liver and brain causes other symptoms. The only reliable remedy for the heart yet discovered is Dr. Miles' New Cure. Try it and be convinced. Sold by Baker & Hall.

ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY.
Letter from the Assistant Foreman of the Delivery Department—Subject in which Thousands are deeply Concerned.
About five years ago I suffered from painful alienation and great pain and weakness in the lower part of my back, pain in the limbs, bad taste in the mouth, disgust at food, and great mental and bodily depression.
I lived at 241 York st., Jersey City, and on arriving home one night I found a copy of the Shaker Almanac that had been left during the day. I read the article "What is the Disease that is coming Upon Us?" It described my symptoms and feelings better than I could if I had written a whole book. My trouble was indeed "like a thief in the night," for it had been stealing upon me unawares for years. I sent for a bottle of Shaker Extract of Roots or Siegel's Syrup, and before I had taken one-half of it I felt the welcome relief. In a few weeks I was like my old self. I enjoyed and digested my food. My kidneys soon recovered tone and strength, and the urinary troubles vanished. I was well.
Millions of people need some medicine simply to act on the bowels. To them I commend Shaker Extract in the strongest possible terms. It is the gentlest, pleasantest, safest and surest purgative in this world. The most delicate women and children may take it. One point more. I care all the more confidence in this medicine because it is prepared by the Shakers. They claim to be a religious man myself and I admire the Shakers for their zeal, consistency and strict business integrity. What they make they can be trusted by the public. W. H. HALL.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Gov. Luce is something of a farmer as well as a shrewd politician. He recently shipped a car load of fat cattle, of his own raising, to Buffalo, that were pronounced the finest beeves offered on that market During the holidays. They were durhams, averaging [illegible] cwt.

A St. Joseph lady, who was to have been married, recently, was the victim of a mortifying disappointment. The expectant groom skipped out the day before for Kansas, leaving the would-be bride and her invited guests in the lurch. Such capers aren't a bit cute in anybody.

Grand Rapids newsboys and bootblacks were feasted by some of her generous-hearted souls on Christmas, and each of them presented with a jackknife and necktie, to protect them from the biting blasts of winter.

The part taken by the Chapin family in the late fatal skirmish in Osceola county seems to have been not wholly unjustifiable on their part. The elder Chapin was supervisor of his township and a respected citizen, and was doubtless actuated solely by a desire to defend his own property against the encroachments of a railway corporation.

The laboratory of the Hancock Chemical company, which was blown skyward Nov. 16 by a dynamite explosion, has already been rebuilt.

While temporarily absent from home on Wednesday the home of Mrs. Andrew Hoover, of Summerville, Cass county, was burned, and with it her 11-months-old baby.

Detroit has a murder mystery. A married woman was found in her house alone and shot through the head. Her husband, who claims to know nothing about the matter, has been arrested.

keeper for the ensuing year at $740. This sum is to pay for the services of himself and wife, a hired man, and other necessary help, besides furnishing a team of horses, wagons, and the usual farm implements. And yet Lenawee county folks have wondered why it was that their poor-house and farm has been so poorly managed in the past.

Michigan railroads earned over $500,000 more during October, 1887, than for the same period of 1886, while the excess of earnings for 1887 over the previous year exceeds $8,000,000. Notwithstanding poor crops and the inter-state commerce law, the railway corporations manage to "get there" just the same.

Ex-Governor Alger is a gentleman of large wealth and larger heart, his annual charities footing up to a respectable figure. Among other Christmas gifts for '87 was a barrel of flour and a ton of coal to each of 1,000 poor families of Detroit, and a suit of clothes for all the newsboys and bootblacks of that city.

Marine City imagines that she occupies a perch directly above a huge reservoir of natural gas, and is making preparations to tap the stuff.

A couple of chaps named Kelley and Farrell raided the Allen store at Hartford, blowing the safe to ballihack. They expected to make a haul of $1,500 supposed to have been deposited by the township treasurer, who had been collecting taxes; but fortunately the tax money was in the local bank, and the burglars got $1.47 for their pains. Both have been arrested and jailed at Paw Paw.

Daniel Metler, an early Flat Rock settler, died at that place, aged 90 years. He was well and widely known in southeastern Michigan as an upright, public-spirited citizen.

Ingham county will speak her mind on the local option question Feb. 24.

Au Sable has a $10,000 suit on her hands. Laura Shippey wants that sum for encountering a defective sidewalk.

Calumet is such a thriving, busy town that they've had no time to provide a cemetery. But, as people die there occasionally, they're agitating the idea of a suitable site for a "city of the dead."

Grand Rapids folks are great guessers. A $30 plush set for the chap who could come the nearest to the actual number of the contents of a bean bag, induced nearly 14,000 of them to try their hand at it. The fellow who won hit the exact number.

Michigan Prohibitionists will deliberate in convention assembled at Grand Rapids May 20.

Rev. J. L. Patton has occupied the pulpit of the Greenville Congregational church for the past twenty-two years and has kept both pew and choir in good humor during all this time. Either that's an exceptional congregation or else the reverend gentleman is an unusually good manager.

Negaunee folks are a decisive lot. A crowd of hoodlums who were making night hideous by their calls in front of a woman's residence in that town, were promptly fired at by the occupant, one of whom was seriously wounded. The gang disbanded and the woman went to jail.

A new form of marriage license, which will be adopted throughout the state, has been devised by a Detroit artist. It is of artistic design and handsomely engraved, and will be a souvenir worthy of preservation by those to whom they are issued.

The recent meeting of the State Teachers' association at Lansing was more largely attended than any similar gathering ever held in the state.

The Muskegon curtain-roller factory has been sold to Stewart & Hartshorn, of Newark, N. J., for $35,000. Mr. Hartshorn is the inventor of the famous self-acting shade roller.

The Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad company has the fun of paying Aaron Hufford, a drummer, the sum of $25 for ejecting him from a passenger train when he was armed with a sure-enough ticket. And there's a fine bill of costs to pay also, the case having just been tried for the third time.

A large quantity of excellent coal has been discovered on the farm of Ceen Clapp, in Springdale township, Manistee county.

The Three Oaks featherbone factory turned out nearly 250,000 whips during '87, $20,000 worth of corsets, and a large quantity of other goods. Featherbone is winging its way to the front with great celerity.

A Caro merchant has been arrested for abducting his own son. This may seem strange, but then he had separated from the boy's mother and wanted the boy back again, which explains the mystery.

Rev. J. H. Pitezel, a 72-year-old divine of Three Rivers, was married the other day to Mrs. A. E. Breckenridge, a Norwich, Ohio, maiden of 72 sweet summers. Rather youthful pair to sail the raging matrimonial main.

A recently organized Vassar company, armed with proper machinery, will inaugurate a coal mining expedition at that place. The present price of that fuel seems to be an incentive to forming its acquaintance in many new localities.

A Sand Beach taxpayer feels slighted because his name was omitted from the tax roll. Presume he could change places with almost any man who is on the list and secure several free Havanas to bind the bargain.

Greenville Methodists will soon begin the erection of their $20,000 church. The only surprising thing about this item is the fact that every penny of the building fund has already been raised.

CALENDAR FOR 1888.

DR. MARY WALKER.

She Is a Candidate for Special Examiner in the Pension Bureau.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 2.—Dr. Mary Walker, having got Senator Evarts to introduce the bill granting her a pension, has become a candidate for the position of special examiner in the pension bureau. The salary and per diem allowance amount to about these positions are within the classified civil service and can be reached only through the civil service commissioners. Of course no information is imparted in regard to candidates, but Dr. Mary has not confined her operations to the office of the civil service commission. The pension office has been full of her for several weeks past. She claims to have more influential supporters of a political kind than any other candidate who has sought office under the present administration. Dr. Mary, if she receives the appointment she seeks, will be the first lady admitted to that branch of the service. Her medical, and surgical, and military experience, she thinks, must be useful to her in investigating wounds alleged to have been received in the line of duty.

DR. MARY WALKER.

A New Use for Dynamite.

YORK, Pa., Jan. 3.—About midnight Saturday night a dynamite cartridge was exploded on the pavement on King street side of the Odd Fellows hall, shaking that building to its center, breaking nearly all the glass in the windows and killing one of the animals in the dime museum on the third floor. The concussion shook the houses for over a square in the neighborhood. Four persons have been arrested, and the police are after others who belong to the gang that committed the offense. It is not believed that it was done with malicious intent, but to conform to the custom of shooting off the old year.

Died at His Wife's Deathbed.

WICHITA, Kas., Jan. 3.—Saturday forenoon Dr. H. O. Burleigh dropped dead at the bedside of his dying wife. He was standing by her bed, intently watching her, when suddenly he raised his hand to his head and exclaimed: "My God! My poor wife is dying!" The next instant he fell dead upon the floor. A coroner's inquest was held, and the death was reported to have been caused from apoplexy. Dr. Burleigh was one of the wealthiest men in the city. His fortune is is estimated at $1,500,000. He was a very odd character, and was noted in this section for his many eccentricities.

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—During his address at the meeting of the anti-Poverty society in the Academy of Music Sunday night Dr. McGlynn read the following telegram received from London: "Cardinal Manning, in a speech to-day, said: 'Every man has a right to life, and the food necessary to sustain life. So strict is this right that it prevails over all rights of property. Necessity knows no law. A starving man may steal his neighbor's bread.'"

Rome in Its Glory.

ROME, Dec. 31.—The jubilee festivities are now at their height. These, combined with celebrations and ceremonies of Christmas and New Year's, have filled the city to overflowing with visitors from every part of the world. The clergy are a conspicuous feature. Thursday 300 archbishops, bishops, patriarchs, and other prelates of high rank attended a reception given by Pope Leo.

A Christmas Failure.

PEORIA, Ills., Dec. 27.—The firm of Messerau Bros. & Davis, of this city, made an assignment Monday morning. Their liabilities are $95,000; assets, not enumerated, but considerably above this amount.

Abbott Will Preach at Plymouth.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 27.—The Rev. Lyman Abbott has been engaged as the pastor of Plymouth church for an indefinite period, probably a year at least.

The will of Mrs. John Jacob Astor was filed with the surrogate in New York Wednesday. It contains large bequests (aggregating over $100,000) to numerous benevolent institutions, but gives the bulk of the estate to her husband.

Two Seventh Day Adventists are on trial at Halifax, N. S., for performing labor on Sunday. Their defense is that Saturday and not Sunday is "the Sabbath of the Lord."

THE RECORD OF CRIME.

Capt. Shea, of the Emmet Light Artillery of St. Paul, who recently absconded with $900, is also accused of swindling the management of the Chicago military encampment.

J. T. Laforge, a junk dealer of Rockford, Ills., has been bound over to the grand jury on the charge of employing boys to steal goods for him.

L. M. Field and N. A. Whitehead, a farmer and a car inspector, quarreled over whisky at Wilson, La., and shot each other, Field dying and Whitehead being badly wounded.

George Mills, aged 18, was fatally shot by John Sweeney, aged 17, at Louisville, Ky., Wednesday. Sweeney has disappeared.

Thieves blew open the postoffice safe at Charlestown, W. Va., Wednesday, and carried off $400 in money and $100 in stamps.

A Story of Intense Interest, and a Most Important Contribution to War History.

DARING AND SUFFERING!

The Story of the Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED!

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid into Georgia in 1862, embracing a full and accurate account of the Journey in Disguise to the Centre of the Confederacy, The Capture of a Railway Train, The Terrible Chase by the Enemy, with the Subsequent History of the Leader and His Party.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER, A Member of the Expedition.

The author has consulted every available source of information, has gone repeatedly over the ground, explored the Government archives at Washington and files of Confederate newspapers, and obtained the assistance of survivors on both sides of the struggle. He is thus able to present a vivid, impartial and perfectly authenticated picture of the most romantic event of the Civil War, the full story of which has never before been told.

CAPTURING A LOCOMOTIVE.

A Score of Soldiers have come in disguise from their commands, 200 miles away, to the very centre of the Confederacy, and have succeeded in the most daring enterprise of the Civil War—the capture of a crowded Railroad Train in the midst of a Confederate Camp.

THE FOLLOWING QUOTATIONS SHOW THE CHARACTER OF THE RAID:

"The expedition in the daring of its conception, had the wildness of a romance; while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it sought, and was likely to obtain, it was absolutely sublime."—Judge Advocate-General Holt's Official Report, from OFFICIAL WAR RECORDS, Series I., Vol. X., Part I., page 640.

"It was all the romance and sentiment and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined."—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY, Atlanta, Ga., April 15, 1862.

"Despite its tragic termination it shows what a handful of brave men could undertake in America."—Compte de Paris' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, Vol. II., page 145.

FRANKLIN AND CAMBRIDGE FARMERS CLUB.

Another meeting of this club was held on the 23d, at the residence of J. Q. Osborn. It was called to order by President Love. The roll was then called and a large number answered to their names. Report of last meeting read and approved.

Motion was then made and carried to dispense with the roll call. No further business being before the club, the literary part was called on by Chairman E. C. Cook. Song by Glee club. "The Sunshines" essay, by Miss Gertie Wheaton; bass solo, by M. D. Alexander, "A hundred fathoms deep;" recitation by Miss Bessie Pentecost, "Why cats and dogs go mad;" song by Mrs Cook, "My trundle bed;" solo by Lizzie Smith, "The renowned whistler," which received a hearty encore; select reading by Mrs. Wm. Pentecost, entitled "Young men;" song by glee club, "When should lovers tell their vows?" select reading by Mrs. German, "The farmers' club;" song by Miss Lulu Love, "Footsteps at the gate;" recitation by Miss Wil- [illegible] club, "The litt[illegible] [illegible]rm." Recess of ten minutes.

Meeting again called to order. The question, "Which pays best, to make butter or sell the cream?" The speakers were Mrs. Jas. Osborn, Mrs. German, Mrs. Crittenden and Mrs. J. Q. Osborn. This ended the debate. The chairman of the committee then announced the program for the next meeting, which will be held at Elmer Wilcox's. Song by glee club, "Who built de ark?" The next question for discussion: "Which pays best, to raise stock or grain at present prices?" Speakers, John Pentecost and Ransom Miller; song by Lizzie Smith, "Shady nook;" song by glee club. Motion was then made to introduce a stock exchange, which was laid on the table. A motion for a special meeting was carried. Adjourned for four weeks.

H. C. DANIELS.

EAST RAISIN FARMERS CLUB.

This club met according to adjournment, the President, A. Richard in the chair.

After the usual literary program the subject, "How to keep the boys at home," and though the meaning was not fully understood by all the talk was quite interesting.

J. Lain was appointed to open the subject by a paper and he handed in a paper by a paper about ten feet in length and containing matter well worthy of a publication of space would allow. In the first place he has good boys to keep at home, and then he keeps them there by staying at home himself, by teaching them that farming is honorable and that not every fool can be a farmer. He also teaches them that in this country 100cts. make a dollar and 16 oz make a pound, and that it is not necessary to use tobacco and whiskey in order to become a man. He supplies them with good papers and books and makes the home so attractive that it is not necessary to go to the neighboring towns for amusement.

Rev. L. M. Beiden: It is not always best to keep the boys on the farm. The most successful merchants, lawyers, physicians, etc., were country bred boys and yet it is a fact that should cause careful thought that the population of our cities is growing much more rapidly than that of the country. The farm is the best place to train boys and it is a safe guard of our country that most of our public and influential men are country boys. Life on the farm has been too narrow for intelligent boys it has been too much of a drudgery and not enough of a science. Don't sneer at theoretical farming. When a man learns that his work is a study he will love it. Put study and thought into farming and teach the boys that it is an honorable occupation and one that requires a man of intellect, and that a college education does not unfit one to become a farmer. The drudgery of farm life is nothing compared to clerking in a store. The farm boys work less hours than clerks, and have more time for reading. Supply good reading matter and make home and farm pleasant for the boys. If they tire of reading see that they have good games and don't scruple to play with them occasionally. Don't always try to keep them at home, but give them a holiday occasionally, and go with them and see that they are not in bad company. A little amusement will do them no harm if it does not lead them into bad associations. Boys will become discouraged if they have no money of their own. If they help in securing a crop, give them a share in the profits and in that way interest them in their work. And last of all make home the pleasantest place in the world for the boys and teach them that father and mother are their best friends.

A. Richard: The question of keeping our own boys at home is an important one. It is necessary to do so if we wish to keep up the standard of the workingmen as a class. If we wish to have good society, to keep up churches and so on, we need our own boys and not hired men. A great deal depends upon the kind of a boy we have, though the most boys are good boys if not spoiled in the bringing up. If we wish to keep our boys at home we must make confidants of them, and show them that they have an interest in what is going on. We must make home pleasant and have our house opened up, and nothing too good to use even if the boys do disarrange the furniture and soil the carpets. We must drive out long faces and not growl at the least noise or at an overturned chair. If we hold the reins too tight the boys will soon find an opportunity to break away from them. Boys can't read or write all the time, and we must supply them with good games at home, and thus avoid their playing behind the barn. They will not go away for sport if they have sport at home. If they intend to become professional men don't start them out too early in their profession. The best place to train them to be useful men, is at home.

W. E. Doty: It depends upon the parent whether the child stays at home or not. Few parents realize the influence they have over their children until he sees something wrong in the parent, and he seldom becomes totally depraved unless the parent sets him a poor example. It is impossible to make farmers of all boys. They will some time in their life show a liking for some occupation and should be allowed to make their own choice. If every boy could be made to use the manhood that is born in him he would make a man of the right stamp.

After short remarks by F. F. Rogers, J. Billmeyer and others, the discussion was closed. Reports of committees read and accepted, and the society adjourned for two weeks. Topic for discussion at the next meeting, "Raising and Fattening Cattle."

IN THE GOGEBIC RANGE.

We have received a copy of the Gogebic Iron Tribune, published at Hurley, Wisconsin, giving a lengthy description of the new Richard Block, erected by our former townsman, Hugh Richard, Esq. We clip from the article one or two paragraphs. Hugh is evidently thriving in his new location and his former acquaintances in this vicinity will be glad to hear of it.

"Of all the fine brick buildings speeded in Hurley during the present season the large double block just finished for Mr. Hugh Richard on the corner of Silver street and Second avenue is the most complete at least in point of usefulness and luxurious attachments. Indeed we doubt if any town in the State can show a better built or more convenient business building than this new structure, although, perhaps not so large as some erected at Ashland and other cities during the past season. This fine building covers a space of ground 50x120 feet and consists of a basement and two stories above. The basement walls are of stone and the main building walls of white brick and all are most substantially built and tastily decorated by the cut stone base and window cappings. While the outside work has been thus solidly and substantially done it is upon the interior that Mr. Richard has caused the really fine work done. From the basement to the roof everything is most conveniently arranged and finished for the purposes intended. The floors are all of hard maple and the other woodwork of white pine, oiled and polished in elegant shape throughout. A broad easy flight of stairs leads from an entrance on Second avenue to the top floor and land in a wide roomy hall running nearly the whole length of the building. On either side of this hall elegant office rooms, conveniently arranged in single rooms and in suites, and nearly all occupied by first-class tenants. At the north and facing on Second ave., Mr. Richard has fitted up a fine large hall for the use of the Odd Fellows lodge, and the remainder of the floor is arranged entirely for offices and private rooms, and right fine they are in every respect, light, comfortable, well ventilated, etc.

The new Richard brick block stands as a worthy index to Mr. Richard's enterprise and faith in Hurley and the Gogebic Range. Commenced as it was when everything looked dark for the town its erection has had a great influence in giving confidence to others and as a result we see facing Silver street a goodly number of fine brick structures, and general belief in the future of the place strong and confident. From the Tribune's way of thinking Mr. Richard is entitled to great credit for giving the town this elegant block at such an opportune season and we doubt not that such is the general opinion of all citizens interested in the prosperity of the community. Long may Mr. Richard live to enjoy the revenues from his handsome property and the hearty appreciation of those who enjoy such comfortable quarters as a results of his faith in Hurley backed by large investments of capital."

HOMES OF NORTHERN LENAWEE.

RESIDENCE OF JAMES B. COLVIN, RAISIN.

One of the most beautiful and productive farms in Lenawee county is the one owned by James B. Colvin, in the township of Raisin, and one of the finest farm houses in the county is his homestead, an engraving of which heads this article. The farm is located on section 9, and comprises the original Lovett homestead, with some additions purchased of other parties. The dwelling and horse barn are located on the west side of highway, and the large farm barn on the east side. The cut represents the house from a position in the highway east of the same, and showing one corner of the horse barn in the back ground at the right. Mr. Colvin has been a farmer all his life, having commenced life as a hired man on Judge Stacy's farm over thirty years ago. From the money saved out of his wages he bought for v acres of land in West Raisin, and about fifteen years ago he purchased his present farm. His family consists of a wife and two children, one son and one daughter, both of whom are at home. One daughter is married, the wife of Dr Chas. Waldron. Mr. Colvin is now enjoying the fruits of his toil, and his numerous friends in this section heartily wish that he may continue to enjoy them for many years yet.

OBITUARY.

DIED.—At his home in Raisin, Dec. 23d, 1887, Frederick W. Wickwire, aged 80 years, 8 months, and 16 days.

The deceased was born in the old town of Litchfield, Connecticut. He spent his youth and early manhood on the farm owned by his father and in the spring of 1832, with his wife and one child about one year old, he started for the territory of Michigan which was then almost an unbroken forest. He located 40 acres of land on Sec. 22 in Raisin township, built a log house, bought a yoke of oxen, and had left $2 in money to buy food for his family during their first winter in Michigan. For many years he endured all the hardships and struggles incident to pioneer life in a new country, laboring hard under adverse circumstances to gain a mere subsistence for himself and family.

Frederick W. Wickwire possessed a strong will and an iron constitution, and by the exercise of his powers of will and body in the right direction and for a definite object he was enabled to secure for himself and family a competency, and in after years reap a harvest from seed sown in the morning of life amid toil and care.

About eight years ago he was stricken with paralysis, which unfitted him for labor. About five years ago a second stroke entirely prostrated him and he was confined to his bed from that time until the day of his death. For five long years he lay without any perceptible change in his condition until about two weeks before he died, when it was noticed by his friends that he was rapidly failing. At last the old pioneer—the strong man—the kind husband and indulgent father passed away. The silver cord was loosed, the lamp of life which had burned so long with a feeble flame went out, and the dust returned to the earth as it was and the spirit to the God who gave it.

A Philadelphia company is now shipping to Michigan oysters locked in their shells by means of a wire fastening. It is claimed that this method excludes the air, which is poisonous to the oyster, retains the juice on which the oyster feeds, and that the bivalves may thus be kept alive and sweet for 60 days in ordinary temperature.

Tecumseh's skating rink has been rented to the gymnasticusses who have a large and flourishing organization, that is developing brawn, muscle and appetite to such an extent that Fred Herning thinks of enlarging his meat market, and heavy drafts are made on Canadian forests for Indian clubs and trapeze bars.—Adrian Press.

What are Suppositories?

A. G. Rose, from New London, Conn., writes: Send me two boxes of your Kemp's Pile Suppositories by mail. Our druggist is out. They are for a friend. I tried everything without help, but the Suppositories cured me.

The treatment is new and within reach of all, and would advise the afflicted to give them a trial. For sale in Tecumseh by Baker & Hall, at 50c per box.

UNDISPUTED MERIT.

The great success of the Royal Baking Powder is due to the extreme care to make it entirely pure, uniform, in quality, and of the highest leavening power. All the scientific knowledge, care and skill, attained by a twenty years experience are contributed toward this end, and no pharmaceutical preparation can be dispensed with a greater accuracy, precision and exactness. Every article used is absolutely pure. A number of chemists are employed to test the strength of each ingredient, so that its exact power and effect in combination with its co-ingredients is definitely known. Nothing is trusted to chance, and no person is employed in the preparation of the materials used of the manufacture of the powder, who is not an expert in his particular branch of the business. As a consequence, the Royal Baking Powder is of the highest grade of excellence, always pure, wholesome and uniform in quality. Each box is exactly like every other, and will retain its powers and produce the same and the highest leavening effect in any climate, at any time. The government Chemist after having analyzed all the principal brands in the market, in their reports placed the Royal Baking Powder at the head of the list for strength, purity, and wholesomeness, and thousands of tests all over the country have further demonstrated the fact that its qualities are, in every respect, unrivaled.

Please give a full attendance and come promptly at the hour.

All have heard the story of the frugal Dutchman. We repeat it below, with an addition: "What I can't sell, I feed to mine hogs, and what mine hogs will not eat, I eats myselluf, and what I can't eat myselluf I gives to the preacher." This is a good deal like the man with the wood. What he can't sell he uses himself, and what he can't use himself he brings to the printer for a year's subscription to the paper.

Woodward's toboggan slide opened to the public last evening, and a large crowd availed themselves of the opportunity to take part in the initial "slide." It is built very substantially with only a single chute, which does away with the necessity of steering the toboggan. All you do is to get started, and let 'er rip, and you will slide about a quarter of a mile. On account of the mild weather the slide was rather slow last evening, but with cold weather, it will have lightning speed.

Mrs. Lydia Smith of Adrian visited friends in town the first of the week.

The Lake Shore R'y will put into effect a new time card on Sunday, Jan. 8.

As a consequence he will lay off for a number of days.

A State Institute will be held at Tecumseh February 16th and 17th at the Opera house, beginning Thursday, Feb. 16th, at 7 P. M., and continuing Friday, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. There will be an able body of professors from the Agricultural College to conduct the institute, also a good program from local talent. A full program will appear next week. Let every one be interested in this Institute and we hope for a profitable and interesting meeting.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

The Scientific American, advertised in another column under the head of "Patents," certainly needs no one to "sing its praises," but, notwithstanding this fact, we feel it an absolute duty to the general public, at least that portion of it which has never seen or heard of the paper, to tell them that such a "one is published" at the low price of $3 a year, and that its true value cannot be overestimated. It stands at the head of all publications of its kind. A file of the paper may be seen at this office and subscriptions received.

Postmaster-General Dickinson's team of fine horses have arrived in Detroit from Adrian, consigned to Ira A. Metcalf, who chose them. The horses will not be sent to Washington until Mr. Dickinson's appointment is confirmed.

E. J. Southworth's gold watch slipped out of his pocket, Thursday night, and Orrin Hazard picked it up on Main street, where it fell. He returned it to Mr. Southworth the next morning and received a reward of $5.00. E. J. has his ticker attached to a chain now.—Hudson Gazette.

—Our hat is off to the young lady who, upon receiving her receipt for THE GAZETTE for 1888, informed us that she went without a new bonnet in order to secure the paper for an other year. Such a spirit of self-denial deserves a crown—and the very best bonnet in town.—Hudson Gazette.

The steel was joined on the main line of the C. J. & M. Tuesday forenoon. Engine No 9 and one passenger coach passed over the track from Addison to Van Wert, Ohio, Wednesday. General Manager Drake and Superintendent Bell were on board. Regular throught trains from Addison to Cincinnati were put on yesterday. The Michigan branch will probably undergo some changes in the passenger service.—Addison Courier.

—There is silence about the gas well. The engine is stilled, and the sound of the drill is not heard in the land. We understand the workmen have attached the tools for back pay, but it is said the difficulty will be fixed up. The large rope is said to be rotten, and a new one will replace it, after which the hole will be deepened, and the stockholders will again look for the day when the sound of escaping gas will be heard through the land, and when the country for miles around will be illuminated from the burning gas of the Hudson gusher.—Hudson Post.

Oh, pity the sorrows of the poor lovelorn Buckeye couples, to whom Michigan was once an elysium whither they might fly for an easy and sudden entrance into the matrimonial estate. One such pair came here last Sunday, longing and hoping most dearly to be embraced in the conjugal tie; but diligent inquiry and search failed to find a parson or justice who would venture to splice them without a license, notwithstanding the State attorney-general's opinion. Thus does the pesky new marriage law raise disappointment unspeakable—and also take desirable fees from the willing grasp of the legal marriers.—Morenci Observer.

—How much do I charge a dime. No cobbling does not pay, said the mender. "I am an old man now, at least too old to learn a new trade else I would quit it. Machines have supplanted the hand craftsman, and it is no longer the thing to have your shoes but one wears boots now made by hand," as it was 30, yes 20 years ago. In fact, about all the work a shoemaker has now adays is repairing or cobbling. How much do I make? Oh, perhaps a dollar or a dollar and a half a day. I own my little shop, which costs me a round penny to keep up, and by the time I have paid all my bills I rarely have above eight or nine dollars left, when it comes Saturday night. I don't know how the little boys and girls of to day will get their shoes patched when they are grown up. No one is learning the trade now adays, no object, you know, and I don't think there will be many shoemakers when we older ones die off."

The Adrian Times remarks:

Inasmuch as it is leap year, the unmarried employes of THE TIMES office are now prepared to receive proposals.

FARMERS UNION.

The Farmers Union met at Mr. Horace Eaton's Friday evening Dec. 30th. The evening was a pleasant one, and there was a large company present except the music by Mr. Lester, who was unable to be here. Mr. VanFleet was present, and favored the company with some very fine violin music, accompanied by the organ. Instead of the regular discussion, a question box was participated in by the members of the Union, which created a lively interest and much amusement. The meeting then adjourned to meet at Mr. Elias Brown's, Friday evening Jan. 13th when the following programe will be presented.

B. C. Knapp and wife have been up on the farm keeping house during the holidays for W. Witherel & wife. They have been out to Mt Pleasant visiting G. Knapp and other friends. B. C. says although it has been about five years since he has had any practice to speak of, he can swill the hogs, pump the cows, curry off the sheep drive the hens to roost etc. just the same as he used to was.

Twenty-six members of the executive committee of the Southeastern G. A. R. Association held a meeting in Adrian on Dec 30th. Only one bid for the next grand encampment was received, and that from Devil's Lake, which offered $250. The matter was finally left for decision in the hands of the associational officers. Steps were taken to organize a battalion to go to the next National Encampment at Columbus, O., under the command of Gen. Alger.

The many friends of Mrs. J. H. Emery will be pained to learn of her death Tuesday at 2 P. M. at her home in Adrian. For many months she has been a great sufferer from consumption and nervous prostration. In August she was carried to Lake City Minn where she seemed to gain in strength but coming back in Oct. the long journey together with the shock of finding her daughter Francis seriously ill proved to much for her strength. For weeks they have lain in adjoining rooms requiring the constant care of devoted friends. Mrs. Emery's many acts of loving kindness can never be forgotten by her friends here.

To Whom It May Concern.

TECUMSEH, MICH., Dec. 23, 1887.

It will undoubtedly be remembered by those interested that a number of the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity combined to resist the what they considered unlawful collection of their notes given to the M. and O. railroad Company. It will be remembered that there was some money raised and placed in my hands to defray any expense that might arise, and as I have not used but little of this money for said purpose, and there still remains in my hands a balance belonging to said company, therefore, I will set the 14th of January next, at one o'clock P. M., to meet as many of said company as can conveniently be present at the office of Webster Frazier in Tecumseh to settle with them.

Respectfully,
J. B. COLVIN.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most sceptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nettle, Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

throughout the United States, and our confidence is the greatest such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Twenty and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS.

The most contradictory reports are in circulation in regard to the working of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in Kansas. Indeed, so utterly at variance are the printed statements in regard to this matter, that it is impossible to form any opinion whatever from them. A recent trip through southern Kansas enabled me to make careful personal observations and investigations, the results of which both interested and surprised me. Particularly was I surprised at the unanimous testimony in favor of prohibition which my questions in regard to the matter elicited from those who openly proclaimed themselves as neither believers in nor practicers of total abstinence. This seeming inconsistency is explained thus: The doing away with saloons and all the evils which naturally and unavoidably cluster about them, has proven an unqualified good, and the claim is made that the evil was in the saloons with their infinitely radiating pernicious influences which permeated and vitiated every social interest.

The party with whom I made the trip had arranged to visit Parsons, [illegible] Springs, and the first place at which we stopped was Parsons, a town of pretty houses and churches of between eight and ten thousand inhabitants. This was the first town I had ever been in where there was not a saloon, and as it is the junction of the Missouri-Pacific and Kansas-Pacific railroads, and the large car-shops of both lines are located here, I looked about with keen interest, for I felt that here was some data which must assist in the solution of an important problem. I was up by times the next morning after our arrival and took a long walk about the town in the gray of the early morning and gathered my first bunch of Kansas sunflowers, which here are indigenous to the soil, and in their beauty and profusion do justice to Oscar Wilde's encomiums of them. Although I looked for the casks, cans, and jugs which correspondents have described as standing about in the early hours of the morning as empty evidences of the surreptitious trade in intoxicants in Kansas towns, I saw nothing of the kind, and I did see evidences of prosperous, happy homes and thrift, cleanliness and order. So far as I could see or learn, the law is enforced. I was told by Col. J. J. Frey, who is superintendent of the Missouri, Kansas, and Texas division of the Missouri-Pacific system, who has his headquarters at Parsons, that there is not a man in the town whose occupation is not known. I was also told by Col. Frey, who is not himself a total abstinence man, that the enactment of the prohibition law had simplified his duties at least one half, and that he considered it an inestimable good. State Senator Kimberl, who had been violently opposed to the law, assured me that since he had seen its results, he believed in it thoroughly. That he had feared financial disaster as a result of its adoption, but that nothing of the kind had occurred, but rather a renewed and constantly increasing prosperity.

We next visited Winfield, and here again, both from observation and conversation, I could but conclude that prohibition, from every point of view, has produced [illegible] This bright little city, with its streets [illegible] and parks, its buildings [illegible] loving, dream-covered magnificence, [illegible] one, and its thirty passenger trains arriving and departing each day, is a model of enterprise and prosperity. I was told by John E. Eaton, a prominent banker here, that there had not been a business failure in Winfield in ten years. State-Senator W. P. Hackney, who is the present mayor of Winfield, said to me in discussing prohibition that he has been opposed to the enforcement of the law, and had voted against it, but when it became a law he believed in enforcing it, and had deemed this the quickest way to make the people sick of it. Its excellent results had convinced him, assured it had thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of others, that it was a wise and beneficial measure. He stated that he believed in common with many others that whisky should be sold as sugar is sold, but no saloons and no treating. And he also stated that in his opinion no community could sustain a greater curse than are saloons. Senator Hackney also said that the law was continually growing in popular favor, that no candidate who was known to hold views opposed to prohibition stood the least chance of being elected, and that if the law was voted upon to-day it would be carried by 75,000 instead of 7500, which was the majority which made it a law.

Mr. J. J. Burns, the vice president of the Denver, Memphis, and Atlanta Railroad, who is one of the most successful railroad builders in the country, said in talking of the construction of railroads, that since the enactment of the prohibition law, it was an easy matter to build railroads in Kansas, but that as soon as they crossed the line into other states and came upon the saloons which were invariably erected in anticipation of their coming, the construction force was at once demoralized, and that it took twice the length of time to accomplish half the work that it did in the prohibition State. Mr. Burns is an enthusiast on the subject of prohibition, and hopes and believes that it will become a National law.

Baxter Springs, with its delicious health-giving waters, its romantic scenery, its gleaming spring fed river, rich as it is in pathetic and soul-stirring legends of the civil war, is one of the prettiest spots imaginable. Here, as elsewhere, the testimony was all in favor of prohibition. The Indian agent declared that he wished the whole Indian Territory was bounded by Kansas, so little trouble did they have along the Kansas line.

I was unprepared for the unanimous testimony which I heard at every point in favor of prohibition, or for the decided good results which I myself observed on every hand. I had never deemed it feasible, if indeed it was desirable, but "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," and certainly, so far as I was able to observe or learn, this pudding has given proof of its excellence.—A. V. H. W.

A RETURN TO FRACTIONAL CURRENCY.

The United States Postal Improvement Association is the name of an organization that has been formed to promote the re-issue of fractional currency, and also to secure a reduction in the postage on seeds and plants. Every planter now has to pay a tax of 16c per pound on seeds, bulbs and cions, as that is the postage on this class of mail matter. It is desired to have seeds and plants classed as third-class mail matter, and subject to a rate of postage of one cent for each two ounces or eight cents per pound. The rate in Canada is only four cents per pound. Any plan that will facilitate the dissemination of plants and seeds for the universal good of the nation, will be supported by ninety-nine hundredths of our population. Incidentally it is desired to abolish the present postal note system and substitute therefor money orders for $5 or less at a charge of three cents. The value and importance of this great facility to the mail business of the country will be generally recognized.

We heartily indorse this movement to increase our postal facilities. We urge all our readers to immediately write to their representatives in both branches of Congress to give this matter their earnest and cordial support. The value of these personal letters to Congressmen from their constituents cannot be over-estimated. If this is followed up by the general circulation of petitions in behalf of these measures, success will be assured. The national grange in session at Lansing, Mich., unanimously voted on Sunday to help this [illegible] for [illegible] improvement in every possible [illegible] practicable way. Success [illegible] every one [illegible] of [illegible] issue of fractional currency [illegible] es[illegible] ent a large majority [illegible] are hindered in making remittances in sums less than $1, very much to their discomfort and dissatisfaction. Either postage stamps or postal notes must be used. In most cases distance from the nearest money-order postoffice renders it difficult to secure the postal note, while postage stamps are not intended as a circulating medium, and are not negotiable. Moreover postal notes, being issued at only about 14 per cent of the postoffices in the country, are difficult to obtain. They are no safer than a fractional currency bill, while those who have experienced the delay necessary in our large towns and cities to secure one of these notes, as well as to collect the payment on it, will be in sympathy with the present movement to secure from Congress an early re-issue of fractional currency.

All who are interested in this matter are requested to apply at this office by mail or in person for circulars giving further information, blank petitions to Congress, etc. These may also be obtained free upon application to the secretary of the association, Herbert Myrick of Springfield, Mass.

The Population of Tecumseh,

Is about 2,800 and we would say at least one half are troubled with some a section of the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all not to neglect the opportunity to call on us and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free. Respectfully, Baker & Hall, Druggists.

LOCAL OPTION.

EDITOR HERALD: As petitions for local option are now being circulated in this county, the following questions may be of interest to those who are friendly and to those who are un-

How many petitions are necessary? At the last fall election there were in this county 11,620 votes for Governor. One-fifth (2,324) voters must sign the petition.

When must the County Clerk call an election? Within forty days of the receipt of the petition, but he cannot call it "in any month in which an election for state, county, city, village or township officers is held." City elections are held March; township in April; state and county in November.

If local option is carried, when will the law take effect? "From and after the first day of May following the special election." February 29th, 1888 is the latest day possible on which an election can take place and the law take effect on the first day of May, '88. From an election held later than this the law will not take effect until May 1889.

What is the latest date the petition can be acted upon by the county clerk, and the law take effect on the first of May next, 1888? If an election be called on Wednesday, Feb. 29th, the last day on which an election can be held, and the law become operative the first of May 1888, the County clerk must see to it that the notices of such an election are in the hands of the township, village and city clerks, on the 8th day of February. He should have at least eight days to distribute the notices. So that if a sufficient pefition is in the hands of the county clerk on the first day of February, he can if he will call a special election on the 29th, but the law provides that he shall call such an election "within forty days after the receipt of such petition. The law gives him 40 days. The only absolutely safe way to secure an election so that the law will take effect on the first day of May next, is to see that the petition is in the hands of the county clerk on or before the 19th day of January, 1888.

What is Tecumseh doing? At a citizen's meeting held December 24th, a committee was appointed to circulate petitions. The village was divided into four districts and two ladies appointed in each district, and the township outside of the village was divided into four districts, and one gentleman appointed for each. A correspondence committee was also appointed to rouse up the interest in the neighboring townships. H. G.

A Novel Business Calendar and Stand.

By far the most novel, convenient, and valuable business calendar for 1888 is the Columbia Bicycle Calendar and Stand, just issued by the Pope Manufacturing Company, of Boston, Mass. In this calendar a new departure has been made, decidedly unique and different from any previous attempt in calendar construction. The calendar proper is in the form of a pad, containing 366 leaves, one for each day in the year, to be torn off daily. The leaves are 5½ by 2¾ inches, and a portion of each leaf is left blank for memoranda, so arranged that the memorandum blank for any coming day can be turned to immediately at any time. The pad rests upon a portable stand, which takes up but little more room than the pad itself, and when placed upon the desk or writing-table the entire surface of the date leaf is brought directly, and left constantly, before the eye, furnishing date and memoranda, impossible to be overlooked. Besides the month, the day of the month, and the day of the week, the numbers of the days of the year passed and to come are specified, and upon each slip appears, as in the previous Columbia calendars, quotations pertaining to cycling from leading publications and prominent writers on both sides of the ocean. The notable events in cycling are mentioned, and concise opinions of medical authorities, words from prominent wheelmen, including those of clergymen and other professional gentlemen; rights of cyclers upon the roads; general cycling statistics; records; the benefits of tricycling to ladies; information about costumes, directions for road-making; and other matter interesting to the public in general and to the cycler in particular, appear from day to day. In fact it is an effective attractive, and fresh cycling encyclopedia, crowded into convenient measure. A matter worth stating is that all the paragraphs are entirely new from previous years' calenders, and although there seem to be but little when read from day to day, altogether the items would make a medium-sized pamphlet, and, added to the collections of other years, a large volume—a collection of quotations which shows how popular and universal cycling is getting to be all over the world.

Nervous Diseases.

There are more nervous than blood diseases. Thus, a weakness of the nerves of the brain causes headache, fits, dizziness, sleeplessness, etc.; a weakness of the nerves of the stomach causes dyspepsia, pain, wind, etc.; of the lungs, makes "weak lungs;" of the liver produces biliousness, constipation, etc.; of the womb induces irregularities, sterility, pains, etc.; of the sexual organs, impotency, etc. For all weaknesses Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine surpasses all other remedies. Trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store

Why should the farmer who has no sheep be forced by the government to pay tax to the farmer who happens to be able to own a flock and enough spare ground to graze them? Wouldn't it be more in accordance with the eternal fitness of things if the well-to-do sheep owner would have to pay tax to the poor farmer who has to cultivate every one of his few acres to get bread for his family?—Bucyrus Forum.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. He Got Away With Too Many.

A short old man in rather rusty attire, with a long gray beard yellow in streaks and an armful of Christmas handles, wandered through Fulton market on Thursday afternoon and stopped at a wager where baskets of grapes were displayed for sale.

"Here you are!" yelled the proprietor, pointing to open baskets of fruit. "The best Concords, Catawbas and Delawares in the market, for half the price you pay inside."

The chap in question stopped and shifting his burden so as to free his turkey arm he indifferently picked off a large grape from a bunch in a basket of Concords. Having devoured that, he tried a Delaware and then a Catawba, and began on the Concords again.

The fruit vendor, who had been engaged with a customer, now began to regard the short man's actions with suspicion.

"How much for grapes?" said the latter, incoherently eating a Delaware.

"Forty cents a basket."

"How much, said the short man, crowding away two more Concords.

"Are you a wholesaler?" inquired the vendor.

"No."

"Own a vineyard, perhaps, and make wine?"

"No."

"Where did you learn to eat grapes?"

"Over a dresser."

"Well, see here, old man, I reckon you've eat about a pound and you fork over nine cents, or I'll tie that beard of yourn into a bow knot, and then you caper back to Jersey, we don't want no grape insect ravagin' around here."—New York Tribune.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 8th.

THE MULTITUDE FED. MATT. XVI 13-21

either refer back to the first and second verses of the chapter, or more naturally to the preceding verse. According to Mark vi. 30, He withdrew, after what his disciples told him of their work, to give them a needed rest. This latter reason, and also the report of the death of John, probably influenced Jesus to cease from his labors and seek retirement beyond Herod's dominions.——"To a desert place apart."—According to Luke ix. 10, in the neighborhood of Bethsaida. They went to the northeast side of lake, and retired in the region of Gaulonitis in the tetrarchy of Philip. (See "Land and Book," Ch. xxv, vs. 372.)——"They followed him on foot (margin, by land."—The more vivid description is given in Mark vi. 32, 33. These crowds, seeing the direction the boat was going, or knowing his destination, headed him off—running from many of the Galilean towns in the immediate neighborhood.——"And he came forth."—As the multitude had anticipated his arrival, he could not have come forth from the retirement of the desert, but from the seclusion of the hill side of the desert, he was bound for the desert place while the crowds were struggling on the shore waiting for him to disembark.——"And healed their sick."—In spite of being worn out and needful of rest, his compassion for their maladies of body and soul prompted him to forego his own comfort till they were healed.—"And when even was come"—Some time between three and six in the afternoon. "It was getting late and time for the people to go to their suppers.——"Give ye them to eat."—A startling way of turning their attention to what he was about to do. "To sit down."—The Greek is recline. Mark and Luke emphasize the careful and orderly arrangement of the multitude as they reclined, in groups of fifty and one hundred.——"He blessed and brake and gave."—How it reminds us of the Lord's Supper! How many a healed sinner in the crowd doubtless was a most precious one.——"And the disciples to the multitude."—These disciples performed the offices of deacons. As feeders of and providers for the wants of the people they are types for all time of what deacons should be. The miraculous multiplication of the food took place either as Jesus handed it to his disciples or as they gave it to the multitude. At any rate, this particular miracle impressed them mightily, for we have a minute statement of it by all the four evangelists.—"Besides women and children." The men as they reclined apart from the women and children were alone counted, according to ancient custom.

INSTRUCTION.—The soul needs what the body craves to live, retirement. We sleep, eight hours a day. How much time do we rest the soul, our higher natures, in communing with God? We need spiritual as well as bodily motive power. This can only come from our Elder Brother. Christ knew this. Look up in the Bible how many times the evangelists state he went apart from the madding crowd for spiritual strength. It will inspire you to do the same.

Our Saviour was the friend of the poor. Other Jewish teachers neglected and spurned them. He healed and saved them. No wonder they flocked by thousands to feel his healing touch, to hear his quickening voice. His was not "mouth mercy," but hand and heart mercy, compassion that was transformed into kindly deeds. For every two times we say we are sorry, let us do one hopeful service this year. It will then be for others and yourselves a blessed year, not spent in vain.

Christ never sends the needy away even if they are wretched and night is coming on. If the preacher, or the deacon or teacher act "Go away, I am too tired to help you," it is not the Master's spirit, but that of a lazy, faithless shepherd.

A practical lesson to be learned is to avoid wicked waste. Thrift is a virtue. It is said enough is thrown away in an American family to feed a French family. In New England economy and having enabled poor men to educate their sons for places of responsibility and public trust. Such men gave stability to the nation. It is upon this following our Saviour's example and saving up the fragments that nothing be lost, of time and opportunities as well as of material food, that success in life depends.

Christ did all things in order. Neatness and orderliness as well as cleanliness are akin to godliness.

The disciples helped. Christ depends on all to minister with him. This is a blessed honor to aid the the Lord in his work.

In Harper's magazine for January, under the heading "The Tariff. [For Revenue only]" Henry Watterson sets forth the views of the Free-trade reformers in this country. It is a long and exhaustive presentation of the views of the school of political economy in which Mr. Watterson is a leading teacher.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Bert Kennedy made a trip to Detroit Monday, looking for work, but as the shops were not running this week he did not succeed very "Hugely."

Andy Gillis made a trip to Adrian Monday and secured a new watch. And she's a daisy. Whenever you get it into your head that you want to "swop" just bring along your pocket book and tackle Andy for a deal.

E. F. Rogers and wife returned to their home at Marlett Monday morning, after a pleasant visit at the residency of S. H. Rogers.

E. C. Lossing returned to school at Ypsilanti last Tuesday morning, after a pleasant visit with his parents near this village.

A dance and oyster supper combined was given at the residence of George Hayward Friday evening, Dec. 30th. A pleasant time is reported by all who attended.

Our blacksmith is at the present writing reaping a harvest of horse-shoeing, the roads being so smooth as to delay all work and travel unless the horses are sharp shod. We understand he set about 80 shoes Monday.

A raffling match that occurred at the store of H. H. Osgood last Saturday evening was quite a scene of excitement. But owing to bad weather there was a small crowd to partake of the fun. Another will be held on the evening of the 7th.

Dr. Begel concluded last Saturday morning it was about time he had a "layoff" therefore he packed his grip and started for Otisville to visit a brother. He did not go to stay, but returned Monday evening to find another brother from Hanover awaiting his return.

We understand that a Grover Cleveland, living not far from here, met with a very severe accident one day last week. We hope it was not the President. If we learn for sure that it was he will certainly lose our vote in the next election, if he runs.

If you would enjoy your dinner and are prevented by Dyspepsia, use Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are a positive cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency and Constipation. We guarantee them. 25 and 50 cents.

RIDGEWAY, Mich., Nov. 18, '87.
I found Crescent Cough Cure just as recommended and am well pleased with it.
MRS. GEO. ALLISON.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 15, '87.
I have had dyspepsia for ten years, with all the disagreeable feelings that go with it. Nothing I ate seemed to agree with me. I suffered everything, bodily and mentally. I tried the best physicians in numerous cities, but found no relief until last spring when I commenced to take Crescent Liver Pills. They relieved me at once. I can now eat almost anything; have gained ten pounds and feel like another man.
J. F. JOHNSON.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Dec. 19, '87.
We have used the Cresent Cough Cure and Liver Pills as our family medicine for coughs, colds and the irregularities of the liver, and gladly add our testimony in favor of both. The Crescent is not only pleasant to take, but is one of the very best medicines for a cough or cold we have ever used. We would hardly know how to keep house without it now.
G. S. SPAFFORD & FAMILY.

MACON, Dec. 1, '87.
I have been troubled with a severe cough for several years and have used ALL kinds of cough remedies, and must say Crescent Cough Cure has given me the most relief of anything I ever used. I cheerfully recommend it to everybody.
THOMAS LANGTHORN.

SALINE, Mich., Nov. 3, '87.
Have used Crescent Cough Cure with very satisfactory results. Am much pleased with it.
MRS. GEO. OSBORN.

MILAN, Mich., Nov. 20, '87.
I have used Crescent Cough Cure with very good results. Think it the best I have ever used for all throat and lung troubles. Would not be without it. MRS. ASIA GREENFIELD.

SALINE, Mich., Nov. 11, 1887.
I have used Crescent Cough Cure with very satisfactory results, and am well pleased with it.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Chas. Burroughs has been trading horses again. He has a fine colt and thinks it will suit him.

Three more baptisms at the Baptist church last Sunday night.

Our community was shocked last Saturday when they learned of the death of Mrs. Fayette DePuy which occurred the night before very suddenly. See had been out coasting in the early evening and was in usual health apparently, and while engaged n general conversation her friends noticed she was quiet and looked strangely. Going to her they found her dead. The funeral occurred Sunday. The friends have our sympathy in their trial.

Ben. C. Ellis took a run over to Detroit the last of the week.

Eva Shimmen has returned from her visit to Petersburg.

Mary Keyes returned from her trip to Sa inaw valley last Friday.

The employees of the Woolen Mills all carried happy faces Monday—it was pay day.

Will Hamilton came over from Detroit Saturday and returned Monday.

Marrion Eatinger, a young man from Paw Paw, Mich., is with Frank McClure. He expects to learn the harnessmakers trade and has already commenced work.

Quite a number of our society people expect to attend the party at Manchester, Friday evening.

While Mrs. Frank McClure was visiting friends at Paw Paw last week she was taken ill, and after a few days she felt able to travel and came home last Friday. The journey was too much for her and she has been quite sick, but it is thought she will gain rapidly now.

Fred Field and family spent Sunday at J. S Kies.'

Ed. Rose left Monday for one of his long trips.

Mrs. Spears, who has been visiting Rodman Taylor and family, west of town, returned to her home in Eaton Rapids Monday of this week.

Mrs. Dell Ordiway has so far recovered from her long illness that she and husband went to Norvell Monday for a visit with friends there, hoping the change might be beneficial.

Joseph Wastell of Detroit, visited his father here over Sunday.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

It was our pleasure to be present at the celebration of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Florance's thirty-fifth marriage anniversary, which took place at their pleasant home south of the village two miles. The day was a beautiful one, and a large company responded to the call, each one leaving a small token to remind them in after years of their friends. The company were called to order at 1 P. M., and a song, "Ring the Bells of Heaven" was sung by the friends, after which Justus Lowe in behalf of the friends present, presented the presents, when they were invited to the dining rooms and supplied the inner man with an endless variety of the fat of the land in a very acceptable and pleasing manner. Below we give a list of presents:

Set gold band china—Jas. McIntyre and wife, C. L. Lowe and wife, Justice Lowe and wife, Loger Lowe and wife, A. Linn and wife, Chester Linn and wife, Charlie Dibble and wife, Wm. Montgomery and wife, Chas. Culbertson, Jr., and wife, F. G. Florence and wife, Burton Nichols and wife.

A friend of this paper hands us the following extract of a letter from Jas. Pocklington, who went to California last fall to enjoy that "wonderful climate" and work all winter for "big wages"

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 29.'87.

Dear Friend:—I have come to the conclusion that men here talk for their own interest and not for their brothers'. If Mr. ——— had been a laboring man instead of a real estate dealer he would not have written of the 100-pound watermelons, etc., etc. When he wrote you he did not mention the cold nights and the dust. It is so dusty to-day that we have to stay in the house, and here inside the hotel the dust is as thick as a case knife on the window sill. From 10 a. m. till 4 p. m. it is as hot as in Michigan in the month of June, and at night sometimes cool enough to freeze ice as thick as a 50 cent piece. The most that can be raised here is the price of real estate. There are 400 real estate offices here and I would not believe one of the inmates under oath. There are 5,000 lots in this place for sale, and one real estate dealer buys from another, so as to keep the boom up. The town is located in a sandy desert, with the Pacific ocean on one side and the mountains on the other. There is one thing that would pay here and that is a hearse. There is business nearly every day, as there is lots of fever and some small pox. I have a bad cold and sore throat, but well otherwise. Frank calls this place some hard names and thinks it a poor place for him We have had eleven days work since we came here at $5.50 per day. We pay $6 a week for board, and don't get much to eat either. Charley Gripton has had work all the time at $3 per day. Will Barrett has worked four days since he came. You may think I am homesick, but am not. I have only stated facts and but part of them at that. Will not take the time to tell you about the fleas and gnats and the thousand other creeping things, but will close before I make you sick. Remember me to all inquiring friends.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Earl Lenardson is in attendance at the Tecumseh high school.

Mr. Smith, of Dundee, representing the O'Donnell Stave Co., was in town last Friday looking after the interests of the firm.

Sid Howe and M. L. Gillen "camped a little while in the wilderness" this week. In other words, they have taken to the woods.

Will Randall moved his household goods Tuesday to the farm owned by Mrs. Elizabeth Gould, four miles northeast, and will work the same during the coming year.

School reopened on Monday after a two weeks' vacation, with a good attendance and in first-class shape,—both teachers and pupils settling down to the work of the winter term with renewed vigor. The new rules and regulations, course of studies, gradation, etc., adopted by the board, went into effect, and are being issued in neatly printed form from the EAGLE office.

Some of our lovers of the dance have arranged to give a grand Washington's birthday party, with supper at the Exelby house. It is their intention to have the affair first-class in every respect, and all who delight in tripping the light fantastic can depend on enjoying a large, gay time. Elaborate invitations will soon be issued, and we hope a large majority of the recipients will acknowledge it by their presence at Exelby's hall on the evening of February 22d.

Prof. W. E. Stedman, of Gobleville, Mich., has written Eaton Post in regard to putting on his military drama, "The Confederate Spy," under its auspices. The drama is highly commended by both press and people wherever it has been, and we have no doubt would undergo a successful presentation here by our amateurs. The professor furnishes all the paraphernalia and takes a leading part in the play, requiring the Post to furnish seven gentlemen and three ladies for the remainder of the cast. A good opportunity for the development of home talent.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Meeting at the M. E. church every night this week.

Prof. E. G. Walker called on the Springville school last Monday and took lodging with our teacher, M. F. Turrell.

The temperance meeting at the church last Monday eve. was quite well attended and the collection amounted to $2.

The Lake Mills were a little out of whack last week, but are in apple-pie order again at present writing.

The dance last Friday night at C. E. Jessups' was exceedingly well attended, considering the inclemency of the weather.

Miss Belle Kinney of Jackson, made her father and others a short visit last week.

Frank Stephenson of Muskegon, also, made short calls on friends here recently.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Etta Spaulding was home Sunday.

Mrs. Spears left for her home in Eaton Rapids, Monday.

Clark Payne's little boy has been having scarlet fever.

Garrett Derby's little daughter, who was so ill with scarlet fever some time ago, is reported to be suffering from dropsy.

Fred Davenport and wife celebrated their entrance upon housekeeping by a dancing party at their home, last Thursday evening.

Cyrus Wells of Minneapolis, Minn., was calling on old neighbors last week.

This community was greatly shocked by the sudden death of Mrs. Carrie, wife of Fayette DePuy, which occurred on Thursday evening. She had been very lively all day, making things pleasant for two young neices, and was sitting by the stove, when she spoke of a pain in her heart. Soon after, as the children supposed, she fell asleep. The little girls were in and out, playing and wondering what Auntie was dreaming about, until Mr. DePuy came in from milking, and found her to be in the sleep that knows no waking. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, and the crowded house testified to the esteem in which she was held. Few women could boast so many warm friends. As a Sunday school teacher she could hardly be excelled. The members of her class officiated as pall bearers.

Among the relatives from abroad we noticed Rev. Wellington DePuy of Grand Ledge and Frank Fuller of Mt. Pleasant.

MACON MUSIC.

The week of prayer was not observed here.

School has closed for the second time this winter, on account of scarlet fever.

Minnie Harmon has gone to Bedford to attend the wedding of her friend, Edna Tuttle.

Mrs. Lancan and Ivy Salone are on the sick list this week.

Charlie Slaight of Chicago, who has been spending holidays with friends here, returned last Tuesday.

Ed. Morgan and wife of Mason, are visiting relatives here.

Gib. Burgess and John Gay returned to their homes at St. Louis last Tuesday.

Isaac Pennington gives $500 to the students Christian association of the University.

There was a New Year's party at Isaac Mills last Friday night, and the dancers tripped to the merry music till the morning hours arrived.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Miss Nettie Kelley of Ridgeway, is at present writing visiting at Chatham's.

E. E. Lyon and Myra Robbins returned from Ypsilanti to the residence of their uncle, W. J. Holdridge, Saturday evening.

While C. C. Clark was at the residence of Jerome Pulman, last Sunday, the robe blew off his horse scaring her in such a manner as to cause her to break his cutter, although it will probably cost less than $100 to repair the same.

G. T. Hascall and wife of Ludington, made W. E. Doty's family a visit the latter part of last week.

Seymour Barrett is now confined to the house by rheumatism. Oh! how sorry we are for you Sem., but we can't cry.

Mrs. F. Earll is visiting at A. M. Sleeper's.

Quite a lively time at the raffling match last Saturday evening. We understand that one young man lost his position by attending. Guess it must have been because he had such good luck.

M. H. Bowen received a new hay-press the fore part of this week from Quincy, Ill. It is of the Champion stamp and is a fine machine.

The time is not far distant when we will have meetings in our midst. The new church is near completion and will be dedicated in the near future.

A FAMILY REUNION.

One of the most enjoyable events in this year's history of the family and descendants of "Uncle" Robert Smith of "little England" in the township of Franklin, took place at the residence of his son, John F. Smith, Dec. 26th, 1887.

There were fifty members of the family present, the eldest—uncle Robert, being nearly 88 years of age, and the youngest not quite one year old. It being a Christmas anniversary the guests began to assemble early in the day, and almost every one brought a mysterious box or bundle which was smuggled into the parlor where a Christmas tree was fairly groaning under its burden of presents. When all had been arranged, at about 12 o'clock, the doors were thrown open, and many were the exclamations of delight from both young and old as they beheld the beauties of the tree and its fruit. After a short literary and musical program, the presents—many of which were elegant and costly—were distributed, after which a sumptuous dinner was served and all were prepared to do it justice. A good social, merry time was then enjoyed by every one present, until the time for their departure. Among those present from a distance, were DeWitt C. Smith of Cheshire, Allegan Co., J. F. Learnard and family of Rome, Geo. Kay, wife and son of Manchester, Herbert C. Belding and wife of Otsego. And among those invited who could not come, were Hiram Learnard and wife of Arkansas City, Kan., and H. A. Goodier wife, and son, of Kan. A letter of regret was received from the former, too late to be read to the company. The occasion was one of universal pleasure, and long to be remembered by all present. H.

Died of Heart Disease.

Many eminent men among them Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Hendricks, Gen. McClellan and Josh Billings died of heart disease last year. Authorities state that one person in four has it, though few know it. The symptoms are shortness of breath, pain or tenderness in side, palpitation, choked or smothered feeling in the chest, tendency to faint, swelling of feet, ankles, etc. If you have any of these symptoms do not fail to try Dr. Miles New Cure for the Heart. SURPLUS REVENUE ACCUMULATING AT THE TREASURY.

The Public Debt Reduced $51,000,000 During the Past Six Months—Gold and Silver Certificates—Lamar, Vilas and Dickinson Confident of Being Confirmed—Discussing the President's Message.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 4.—The treasury statements for the end of December or 6 of January indicate a surplus revenue accumulating at the rate of over $[illegible],000,000 a year. The revenues were greater than the expenditures for the half year just closed by the sum of $57,933,611. The expenditures were almost exactly the same in aggregate as the expenses for the corresponding portion of the previous year, though the distribution of the expenses shows considerable change. For example, the ordinary expenditures of the government show a falling off of nearly $12,000,000, while the pension disbursements increased about $115,000,000, and there was a little increase in the payments of interest, including for the past half year the premiums on purchased bonds. The revenues show gains in all directions. The customs duties yielded for the six months $5,000,000 more than in the same part of the previous year, the internal revenue receipts show an increase of about $[illegible], making the whole revenue for six months $[illegible] more than for the same six months the year before. The excess of receipts over expenditures for the first half of the fiscal year was $[illegible]000, and for the first half of the current fiscal year it is $59,000,000.

The reduction of the debt for last month is put down at a trifle more than $5,500,000. As no bonds have been redeemed, of course this reduction has been effected merely by accumulating so much more money in the treasury. This is very nearly the amount that the treasurer's balance, or surplus, in the treasury increased during December. There has been no reduction in the principal of the interest-bearing debt since October. The debt statement of reports a reduction of the net debt for the last six months of very nearly $54,000,000. This is made up of $44,554,120 actual reduction in the principal of the interest-bearing debt, some $6,000,000 increase in cash in the treasury, making allowance for some changes in the form of statement and some changes in the amounts of various liabilities that enter into the sum of the total debt. The surplus in the treasury has increased, according to the statements, about $15,000,000 during the last month. The increase since July has been $28,000,000, as shown by the treasury shipments. Really it has been much less, because July 1 nearly $20,000,000 of called but not matured bonds were figured in the government's liabilities twice—once as a part of the bonded and once as a part of the current liabilities. Now there are no such bonds to be counted twice. If the surplus were calculated as it was prior to 1885 it would be now $204,565,561, against $[illegible],828,877 July 1, but the present forms of statement indicate a surplus now of only $60,000,000, against something over $[illegible],000,000 six months ago.

The government now owns $[illegible],000,000 of gold and only a little more than $45,000,000 of silver. For the last six months the stock of gold in the treasury has increased nearly $22,000,000, and the stock of silver has decreased more than $8,000,000.

The amount of silver certificates in circulation has increased nearly $[illegible] in the last months, more than $[illegible] in six months, and $[illegible],000,000 in twelve months. The silver dollars in circulation have fallen off a little in the last month, but are still $[illegible] above what they were six months ago. Against this increase of currency is to be reckoned a decrease of $[illegible] in national bank circulation within the last twelve months.

SHERMAN OPENS THE FIGHT.

He Attacks the Message and Voorhees Defends—No House Committees Yet—Bills.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 5.—The senate got to work at noon on time Wednesday, and Hale presented several petitions favorable to the rights of Americans in Canadian waters. Voorhees set up a petition against the lumber and timber bill, and a handful of petitions for postal telegraph, against gambling in futures, against free whisky and tobacco, and in favor of free salt, lumber and sugar, all from various granges. Brown offered a resolution which he had laid over for him to make a speech upon favoring tariff for revenue and the repeal of the internal revenue laws. Then Sherman spoke on the subject of the president's message. He criticised the president for confining that document to the tariff exclusively, and declared he had made a mountain of a molehill in raising an alarm about the surplus. The president had vetoed bills that were necessary and desirable and that would have reduced the surplus very materially. Sherman favored free tobacco and beer. Voorhees replied, declaring that the criticism of Sherman was insincere, unfair, and misleading, and that no one wanted to adopt free trade or anything like it. The message he declared to be fearless, sound and statesmanlike. Teller said there had frequently been more surplus in the treasury than at present, and that the alarmist views of the president were not sincere. Sherman moved to refer the message to the finance committee, but the motion was not acted upon, and the senate held a short executive session and adjourned.

In the house the speaker did not, as was expected, announce the committees, and by unanimous consent members were permitted to introduce bills. Thereupon bills, covering almost the entire field of legislation, were sent in to the clerk for reference. Among the number were bills to reduce the revenues, to put sugar, salt, lumber and other products on the free list, to abolish the civil service law, to establish postal telegraph, to pay soldiers of the Union the difference between the value of greenbacks and gold, to compel railroads to pay wages every sixty days or more, to take the taxes off tobacco and liquors, to prohibit Chinese immigration, to protect forests at river head waters, for $50 a month pension for total deafness, to investigate trusts, to make palace car and express companies amenable to the interstate law, to organize the territories of Oklahoma, to expel dangerous aliens, to elect senators and president and vice president by popular vote, to allow the president to veto items in appropriation bills, to establish "flat" money, to reduce letter postage to 1 cent an ounce, to give the suffrage to women, to prevent the employment of convict labor on public buildings, to admit Southern Dakota, to enable national bank stockholders to make national bank stock a part of their assets for bonds of banks for a graduated income tax. Sixty-four bills were introduced for the erection of public buildings. The call was completed at 4:50 p. m., and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 6.—A number of petitions in favor of Prohibition in the District were received in the senate Thursday through Platt. A bill providing for the Washington City world's fair on the centennial of the constitution was referred. Dolph and Mitchell made strong arguments in favor of a naval station on the Pacific coast. The educational bill was read and Reagan spoke in opposition to it, declaring that it was part of a policy of centralization. Plumb offered an amendment providing that the distribution of the appropriation shall be in proportion to population. The senate then [illegible].

Very little was done in the house other than the announcement of committees. A bill was introduced providing that national banks may loan money on real estate in no greater sums than half the assessed value of the same. Bills were also introduced to reduce postage on fourth-class matter, and for popular selections of postmasters. Cox was announced as a member of the Smithsonian Institute regency, and the house, to give the committees time to organize, adjourned until Monday.

CONFIDENT OF CONFIRMATION.

Lamar, Vilas and Dickinson Not Worried Over the Subject.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 4.—Whatever uncertainty may be entertained by the public in regard to the confirmation by the senate of Messrs. Lamar, Vilas, and Dickinson, it is quite certain that the gentlemen most interested, have but little if any doubt on the subject. Mr. Dickinson is so confident of remaining in Washington that he has leased a house for a term of years at an annual rental of $15,000. In addition to this, he is a daily visitor at the postoffice department, where he passes the time familiarizing himself with the routine of department work. He sits with Postmaster General Vilas, and receives from him hints and ideas about the work, and watches him as he dispatches it. Mr. Vilas apparently entertains no doubt of confirmation. There are many indications that he expects soon to vacate the department.

Equally confident is Secretary Lamar, who, for some time past had the clerks in his office preparing for his signature final statements of the various Indian trust funds, of which the secretary of the interior is by reason of his office the trustee. In both departments the officials are preparing for a change, and though it may be delayed, it is claimed that sufficient pledges have been received from Republican senators to make the three confirmations certain.

The House Committees Announced.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 6.—Speaker Carlisle has at last made up his list of standing committees of the house of representatives, and they were announced Thursday. Mills, of Texas, is chairman of the ways and means, the leading committee of the house, in charge of all revenue bills. Randall, of Pennsylvania, is chairman of the committee on appropriations. The next most important committee, the judiciary—possibly equal in importance to either of the others—has also a Texas chairman, a Mr. Culbertson. The south has twenty-eight other highly important chairmanships. Of the forty-seven committees, northern Democrats get only sixteen chairmanships, the majority of which are of inferior importance. Illinois gets three chairmanships—Townsend, on military affairs; Springer, on territories, and Landes for the minor committee on ventilation and acoustics of the capitol building.

New Public Buildings Wanted.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 5.—The people who desire public buildings erected in their midst were strongly represented in the house Wednesday. These places in west which have an ambition that way, and for the satisfaction of which bills were introduced were as follows: Pueblo, Col.; Evansville, Indianapolis, (for the enlargment of building), Madison, Ind.; Fort Dodge, Sioux City, Ia.; Winfield, Kans.; Kalamazoo, Muskegon, Manistee, Bay City, Lansing, Mich.; Duluth, Minn.; Sedalia, Kansas City, Springfield, Mo.; Tremont, Grand Island, Omaha, Plattsburg, Beatrice, Neb.; Portsmouth, Gallipolis, Zanesville, Hamilton, Defiance, O.; Portland, Salem, Ore.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Helena, Montana; Albuquerque, New Mexico.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A sharp advance in the price of petroleum created a panic among the short sellers in New York and Pittsburg Tuesday. Oil has steadily advanced from 72 cents until Tuesday it touched 95 cents per barrel in Pittsburg, this being the highest price quoted for two years past. The Standard Oil company is believed to have had a controlling hand in manipulating the advance.

The pig iron market in the south is reported booming. The furnaces are running to their fullest extent, and all product is speedily disposed of.

Fitch Bros., gentlemen's furnishers, of Madison, Wis., assigned to F. E. Proudfit Tuesday. Assets, $4,000; liabilities, $12,000, mostly in small claims and 50 per cent. of them falling due at the same time, caused the trouble. The firm will resume business.

For eleven months ended Nov. 30 last, the net earnings of the Union Pacific road show an increase of $2,328,902.

The Washington Fire and Marine Insurance company, of Boston, is preparing to go out of business, and has reinsured its marine risks in California companies, and a greater portion of its fire risks in the Niagara, of New York, and National, of Hartford.

The freight rates on iron and steel from Pittsburg to western points have been reduced from 21 to 17½ and 15 cents.

The mills of Lowell, Mass., use nearly $90,000,000 worth of cotton annually, and send out more than $100,000,000 worth of cotton goods.

The schedules of the insolvent commission firm of D. De Castro & Co., of New York, show liabilities of $1,231,304, and actual assets of $1,096,758.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of biliousness are unhappily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A Bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids. The bowels are costive. The tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events. The digestive system is wholly out of order and Diarrhea or Consumption may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often Hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache, and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower; it costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.

People ask what is good for a cough or a cold, the mistake many make is in letting it run too long. Dr. Bigelow's Cough Cure, contains the good qualities of all the best cough remedies without the defects of any of them. A safe and speedy remedy for coughs, colds and all throat and lung troubles. Sold by Dr. Geo. Furguson at 50 cents and $1. bottles. Healing to the lungs. Safe and pleasant for children.

The Latest Tornado

The surprising manner in which the country is being swept by the great discovery of Dr. Miles for curing the many diseases that originate in the nerves is astonishing all who know the facts. The Restorative Nervine, a brain and nerve food, sold by Baker, [illegible] of appetite, exhaustion, debility from overwork, care, worry and dissipation. It takes the place of stimulates, opiates, chloral, etc., and cures all nervous troubles. It contains no morphine, opium or dangerous drugs.

The Strongest Man In Ohio

is said to be George C. Arnold of Cleveland, O., who less than one year ago, owing to chronic liver trouble and Bright's disease of the kidneys, weighed less than ninety-five pounds, but by using Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic has gained in strength and weight until now he is admitted to be the giant of Ohio.

NEURALGIA can be cured by Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, if taken a sufficient length of time to thoroughly purify the blood, giving strength to the whole nervous system.

P. H. KILMARTIN, postmaster and general merchant at Orange, Mich., says Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is wonderful in the cure of sciatic rheumatism.

THERE never was in the history of this country a medicine so highly endorsed by its home people as is Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters.

I CURE FITS!

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen: I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of catarrhal trouble it would not cure if they would take according to directions.

Yours truly,

L. L. GORSLINE, M. D.

Office, 215 Summit st.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that we cannot cure with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

DON'T USE THE KNIFE.

A DESPERATE CASE.—Doctors gave him up as incurable and her jaw bone must be removed, but it saved by the use of Steketee's Neuralgia Drops. This is a remarkable cure Steketee's Neuralgia Drops done in curing the undersigned of neuralgia. I had been troubled with pain in my jaw for a long time. I employed a skillful physician in this city. He decided that my case was incurable unless my jaw bone was removed. I called on Mr. Steketee for advise. He advised after having examined my case to use his Neuralgia Drops. The result of using one half bottle of said Neuralgia Drops entirely cured me, and without the use of a knife or violence.

RICHLY

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Read at the County Meeting of the W. C. T. U., held at Tecumseh December 6th-7th.

[illegible] that I wish to bring before [illegible] the present time. The year [illegible] has passed has been a busy one, [illegible] witnessed victory and defeat. [illegible] cannot call it all defeat when the [illegible] seek is not attained. Sometimes the victory is in our own added [illegible]gence and wisdom, which better [illegible] for the end to come by and by. [illegible] we not been growing in grace [illegible] we have suffered individual [illegible]. Other states besides our own [illegible] also had their disappointments, [illegible] we all have hope and believe God still, and that "He doeth all things well."

As I look over our county and see how few, comparatively, the women are who are really interested and laboring in the Temperance cause, I see we all, who have taken hold of the work, must continue to either hold or drive if we would have the work thrive. (Yet when I see this large audience here to-day I am very much encouraged, for it shows an interest in the work throughout our county.) I feel that very much ought to be done [illegible] other women to enlist, at least as private soldiers in our ranks. Promotion may come after a while to those need the rank and file of the vast army of White Ribboners. Besides, I would have us all remember that much of the real work which our women—our busy women—are doing to-day, will be remembered in the next generation. Mothers too busy, and too closely tied at home to attend to public work, are planting seeds of Gospel temperance in the hearts of their little ones which, though some may fall by the wayside, some on stony soil, and some among thorns, will some of it fall on good ground and bring forth fruit, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. We cannot spend all our energies in temperance work. We have other church work besides this. Mission work, both home and foreign, must not be neglected. Therefore we must have no spirit of censure if some of our sisters do not take hold with all the interest we do. If they are doing more in some other department of work than we are, that may be their calling. But let us ask them to throw their influence with us, and not against us, and educate them if possible in the work we are doing as an aggregate body, and not let them judge alone by what they see our individual unions doing. We need to scatter our literature to do this, so please patronize the W. T. P. A.

We are a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Let us do woman's work in this enterprise. But every person in our land does not see just what woman's work is. As fast as we have an opportunity to do, let us do, and show that we can do, work that counts. I would have not women do work that is unwomanly. But do you think it unwomanly to guard the interests on our homes by guarding our schools and all places, when we have an opportunity to speak by voice or otherwise? Sisters, we ask you to avail yourselves of the privilege given you of the school-ballot. We ought not to be cowards in this matter. Read the school laws and act.

The second word, in our text, is Christian. Let us be real Christians, not in name only, but in truth. The apostle said "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

I desire so much that in all we seek to do we may manifest a Christian spirit, tender of each others feelings and reputation, but ourselves not too tender, so as easily to become offended. We shall never see eye to eye in all things. Let us be subject one to another in love. Oh how it mars our work if we have many discords! Let lookers on be able to say, "See how these christians love one another."

Then we are a Union. "In union there is strength." "United we stand, divided we fall." The body is not one member but many. The eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. We each have some gift entrusted to us, let us occupy that to the glory of God. I beseech of you, my sisters, and include myself among the hearers, let no jealousies or envy or distrust have any place amongst us as christian workers.

In regard to the different departments of our work I would urge each union to use discretion, and those which are most needed in the various localities we are living in, and which we can carry on to the best advantage, are those we ought to push. Will you kindly help your President the coming year to extend our organization? Both increase in membership in unions already existing, and increase in the number of our organizations is necessary, but I would hope that every union which is brought into existence would have vitality enough to grow, and thrive and work. I can truly say that what has seemed in my power to do in that direction, the past year I have sought to do, but the work is so meager that I blush while I say it. Our corresponding secretary also has been faithful to do all and more than I have asked her to do. Sometimes we get tired and it seems as if we walked in a tread-mill, and after all didn't accomplish anything. I must let you know that I must decline a renomination to the office I now hold the coming year, even if it he offered me, but I am sure there is plenty of talent in Lenawee county to fill the place better than I have done. Some one has said, "Do the duty that lies nearest to you," and sometimes we know what those duties are better than our friends do.

THE SUCCESS OF LOCAL OPTION.

The following articles taken from the Cleveland Leader show the result of Local Option in the city of Alliance Ohio.

"Alliance is the largest and most important city in Ohio that has enacted and enforced the prohibitory ordiance under the Dow Law. Alliance has a large number of manufacturing establishments, railroad shops, and, in fact, the town is made up largely of railroad employes and laborers.

"Eighteen months ago there were in Alliance nearly half a hundred saloons and places where intoxicating liquors were sold as a beverage. As a stranger got off at the station he found himself surrounded by a score of the worst dram shops to be found in Ohio. Such carousing, gambling and licentiousness as were witnessed day and night upon the streets and at home, were a disgrace to any people. Finally they became aroused to the sad state of affairs, and temperence meetings were held, eminent orators addressed the people, and a thorough organization of all the temperance forces was effected. It was a complete non-partisan union of all the temperance people. Upon the other hand the saloonists organized and endeavored to frighten the business men by threats of boycotts and predictions that prohibition would ruin their trade, and cause the grass to grow on their streets before a year. The ordinance as provided by the Dow law was submitted to a vote of the people, and there was a majority for prohibition of 335. The mayor and council did not enforce the law to the satisfaction of the people, so there was a law and order league organized. Detectives were employed, and every violation of law carefully watched until more than fifty times have some of them appeared in court. At the present time there are only five of the forty three who have not completely abandoned the traffic, and these five sell very slyly, having a chosen circle of customers pledged not to betray them. Since the enactment of this ordinance two or three summer saloons have sprung up outside the corporation, but they have a very limited patronage, and cold weather is sure to kill them.

Let it be clearly understood that no one claims total prohibition for Alliance as yet, but the law against the liquor traffic is as complete in its working as that against counterfeiting or any other gross crime, and it has convinced every temperance man (and even some that were not such) that a faithful and rigorous enforcement would result in total prohibition. It has demonstrated to the satisfaction of all the possibility of complete non-partisan prohibition under the Dow law. Temperance men of all parties have united and labored earnestly for the ordiance. It has led them to a better understanding of the nature and the difficulties of the work. Old prejudices have been laid aside and old differences buried. It has begotten a better feeling among the Protestant churches. The Sabbath is better observed by all business men. It has greatly improved the general order of the city. It has decreased the drunkeness at least seventy-five per cent. It has lessened moderate drinking. Men who used to take a glass now and then prefer to stay away from saloons rather than to be called as witnesses.

There used to be three beer-bottling establishments that carried on a prosperous trade, running their wagons all over town all of the time. Now there is only one, and many of its patrons are in such mortal dread of public sentiment that they will not suffer a delivery at their house in daylight, and they are seen slinking about with their wagons at the midnight hour, bearing dark lanterns.

The custom of treating is almost destroyed, and many a poor man finds himself relieved of the embarrassments and temptations which he had not the courage to resist. It is utterly impossible for a stranger to get anything to drink. It has removed temptations from youths and boys, so that there are fewer minors that are learning the drink habit. It has greatly improved the moral condition of the town. There is not so much gambling, billiard and pool playing; there is more sobriety and virtue. Home has became a place of attraction to many a man who formerly squandered his time and wages in licentiousness. The money that went to illegitimate uses is now expended for the necessaries of life, furniture for the house, clothing for the family, etc. As a result the children are better cared for, are more bright and cheerful. Wives and mothers have less drudgery and disgrace, and more sunshine and joy. The public schools and Sabbath schools have a larger attendance. It has lessened the pauperism of the city, as well as crimes and accidents of every description.

"It was predicted that prohibition would depress business and ruin the town. But Alliance has scarcely seen such prosperity in all of her years. Her real estate business has revived. It is estimated that nearly a hundred dwellings have been built within the last fourteen months, probably a larger number than in the entire three years before. Dry goods merchants, grocers, furniture, boot and shoe, stove, hardware, lumber, coal and milk dealers, tailors, milliners, carpenters, and contractors, say their business was never better. The naked fact of such prosperity forever brands the saloonist as a false prophet, who promised us nothing but ruin, and he now walks the street demanding twenty-five per cent. more for his property than he ever thought of asking a year ago, while he writhes under the weight of prohibition more complete than he ever dreamed of. We should like to have him or his friends to tell us why this threatened ruin never came. It will be in order for him to point out the cause of such prosperity if the ordinance had nothing to do with it. There has been no change in wages or the cost of living that will account for it. Every business man knows that the amount of wages squandered in saloons formerly turned into the legitimate channels of trade, must produce some effect. May the good times at Alliance continue, and may many other towns profit by this example, and rid themselves of the evils of intemperance."

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Cady Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and now able to do all my own housework am owe my thanks to Electric Bitters. I having renewed my youth, and for moved completely all disease are pain."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A homœopathic doctor can get a job at Mosherville. There's a good many other towns, too, that would welcome such a personage, as they're not so numerous as some people suppose.

Among the holiday gifts presented to the Hillsdale Methodist church was a brand new fanning-mill. That society should now be able to separate the sheep from the goats with unerring certainty.

The sum of $5,000 has been subscribed by Manistique people to aid in rebuilding the oval wood dish factory, recently burned, and the probabilities are that "twill be a go."

Deputy United States Marshal Jacks, who is said to have played a lone hand with the government funds in his possession, doesn't quite like the air of the Muskegon jail. The timely discovery, however, of well laid plans prevented an escape.

The Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway depot at Otsego was destroyed by fire on the last day of the old year.

Bronson Baptists recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their organization by chipping the sum of $800 which pays up their indebtedness.

Kent county celebrated some 400 marriages during 1887, which outnumbered by a "small majority" the divorces granted for the same period. But the latter are steadily on the increase, and may some day win the race.

Harrisville people have chipped in $3,000 to a cash fund as an inducement for some fellow to start a flouring mill at that point. It ought to make something blossom, surely.

Lawton's fruit shipments for '87 reached nearly $200,000, and the growers want a bank established in which to house their spare cash.

Judge Pealer celebrated his exit from the Sheriff's county jail by sentencing Benjamin Garten, the fellow convicted of burning the buildings of a Constantine widow, a thirteen years' contract at the Jackson prison. But the insurance part of the problem remains unsettled.

Michigan school teachers are canvassing the project of establishing a summer resort on the island of St. Helena, near the lower end of Lake Michigan. A summer resort is an excellent place in which to while away one's loose change that this accumulated during the balance of the year.

Up to the hour of going to press a column of nonpareil would contain the names of the aspirants for the Jackson postoffice, but the list is daily growing larger. It is fair to presume, however, that somebody will be disappointed.

G. T. Cottrell, a prominent Morencia man, and former postmaster of the town, recently died at his home in that village.

The fellow who trades with Wesley & Sons, Adrian clothiers, on Saturday, is treated to doughnuts and hot coffee. The fact that that sort o' treatment is appreciated, is shown by the increase of the number of customers.

St. Valentine's day will be celebrated in the Eleventh Michigan district by the election of a congressman. The fellow fortunate enough to capture the prize will naturally be a valentine himself.

Lawton fruitists want a cold storage concern in which to keep their products when the city markets are glutted. Have the growers there ever tried giving the "small boy" the freedom of the orchard at such times. We opine that they'd find his preserving qualities equal to an emergency.

A half dozen structures in the business section of Vandalia, Mich., were burned early Thursday morning. The loss is $5,000 and the insurance $3,000.

The story of a Cincinnati paper, that Gen. Alger, of Michigan, had entered into a combination with the Blaine forces and was to be given second place on the national ticket, is unequivocally denied by Gen. Alger.

At Paw Paw, Mich., Thursday, Ida Weatherwax, aged 17, shot herself, owing to despondency over a love affair.

Notwithstanding that Bronson's gas well was "no go," so far as gas was concerned, her merchants report the past year a prosperous one, none of them having failed or taken Canadian vacation during '87.

Five years ago the owner of a certain tract of timbered land in Ottawa county tried to give it away, but failed to find the person willing to pay taxes thereon. The other day $5,625 worth of shingles were sold from this same piece of land.

While trying to rescue a lady who was in imminent danger of being run over by a coasting sleigh, Thomas Maher, a Grand Rapids policeman, had both ankles broken by the selfsame coaster, but the lady was rescued.

Upon his retirement from the Jackson circuit, Judge Gridley was "called to time," and presented with a $75 check. Thus merited recognition of the services of a faithful and upright judge.

One person in every four of Tekonsha's 600 people reads a daily newspaper.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Tuesday evening, Jan. 3rd, the Farmers' Social Club met at John Schreder's. The program was carried out in full and the charade, champagne, acted by the little people proved a hard nut to crack.

As the season approaches for sowing clover seed the average farmer seems quite puzzled over the "modus operandi," and the question has its annual airing.

Mr. Horton opened the discussion by saying: I hardly know what to say as this is a vexed question and has so proved to the farmers for some time. In the first place I believe all farmers have got in the habit of not loosening the soil deep enough, but harrow too shallow, and it does not let the roots penetrate deep enough. I at one time traced a clover root 4 foot and 5 inches in length, proving that the roots would penetrate deep if they had a chance. I think we are not in the habit of plowing deep enough for any of our crops. I find I get the best crops of corn, wheat or clover when I plow deep. I think if we plowed deeper the ground we intend to seed so the roots could penetrate in loose soil we would get a good catch of clover. Our professors of agriculture tell us that clover is worth from seven to eight dollars per ton for fertilizing the soil. If this is the case, we should try to raise good clover for this effect. I believe we are making fools of ourselves in saving our teams and not plowing deep. Our farms are degenerating because we like to have our horses look fat and sleek. Nearly all farmers are in the habit of feeding the stock on the young clover. This is all wrong. You should let it grow and give it care instead of using it all up when young, and then complain that you do not get any clover.

R. Gillespie: I have made failures as well as others, but I have found that if I sowed late I was sure to make a failure. I have no trouble to get a good catch, but the weather later is the trouble, as the young clover is killed by the dry weather and hot sun later in the season. I have tried all ways for getting a good stand of clover, yet I fail and am still in the dark.

Mr. Fisher: This is getting to be a serious question with farmers, for if we cannot get a stand of clover we might as well give up farming. If the seasons continue as the last ones we will have to try some other plan besides seeding on wheat. In regard to making money, shall we cut it for hay or seed? I have cut it for hay and then for seed, and it produced well, but it had been plowed deep and highly cultivated and manured. I think the growing crop on the field takes the moisture and injures the crop, and we will have to pursue some other plan.

Mr. Griswold: In looking back over the seasons, I have come to the conclusion that until we have a change in the seasons we will continue to have failures. The past three seasons have been too dry and there is no moisture left in the soil. In New York they are having the same trouble as we, and the papers tell us about the soil being clover sick. I do not know about this, but I am sure the excessive heat with the dry weather was the cause of the failure the past season. In regard to making money from this crop, I think the best way is to use it up on the farm.

Mr. Farley: The best catch I ever had I sowed in May. I think like Mr. Coddington, that to make a success it needs to be seeded every year—I mean, seed the clover.

I. H. Screeder: I never lost a seeding entirely, but I sow in April. I like the frost all out of the ground and I find top-dressing beneficial for a good catch of clover. I have scattered the straw over my fields and then burned it, and found my crops much better when the straw was burned, and next spring I anticipate a better stand of clover where the straw was burned last spring.

F. Rector: Gentlemen, you who have clay farms know nothing about sand. I have tried all kinds of experiments, but with the dry seasons we have had of late, I lose my clover. In regard to making money from the crop, I believe if we could get a good stand, it would pay best to plow it under.

Club adjourned to meet Tuesday evening, Jan. 17th, at R. B. Gillespie's with the following program:

NORTHERN LENAWEE FARMERS' CLUB

The club met at the residence of Mrs. Almira McCollum, on the evening of Jan. 4th, 1888, with a good attendance. Your reporter not being present cannot give a very extensive account of the proceedings. After the literary part of the program the discussion of the question, "Which is the most profitable way to raise hogs, buying millfeed or raising corn to feed them," which brought forth a lively display of eloquence on the question, and the prevailing sentiment was that millfeed was good to start pigs on but when it came to fattening, that corn was the best.

G. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, was present, and when called upon to express himself, said: When we come to a car load of lean and thin, small and large, black and white hogs, we say these are Michigan hogs, but when we come to a car of straight fine ones, these are western hogs, fed on corn exclusively all their lives.

Club adjourned to meet Wednesday Jan. 18th at W. B. Keyser's "Maple Hill Farm." This being the annual meeting, the program will be

Question—"To what extent is the credit system a benefit to the farmer and laboring man?"

TOBACCO FOR SCHOOLBOYS.

We wonder if the mothers of our land realize the vast number of school children who have already acquired the habit of smoking cigarettes? I know that at least nine-tenths of the boys in our schools occasionally smoke. Whenever I speak to my boys about the evil effects of this habit, the reply is "all the boys smoke," and I find that it is true. It seems to me that our boys are in nearly as much danger from tobacco as alcohol. My reasons are these: The use of tobacco creates a morbid desire for something more; hence it often leads to intemperance. I have never known an intemperate man who was not a slave to tobacco. Its use makes it more difficult for young men to lead virtuous lives, because it enervates the nervous system, thereby weakening the will-power. It dulls the sensibilities, thus rendering the conscience less active.

In view of the danger to our boys, we "dare be so bold" as to propose and present to the legislature of every state a bill to the effect that no person addicted to the use of tobacco or alcohol shall be granted a certificate to teach in the public schools. Will not a large majority of the mothers agree with us? Cannot we have a response from the readers of the Union Signal, which will prove that the time has come for such work?—L. T. D.

DUN ON THE OPENING YEAR.

A Fair Business at All Points, with Fewer Failures Than Expected.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The past broken week has not been one of great activity, and the year opens with some reaction in most of the markets. The Reading strike has become more serious than was expected; the miners' committee claims that 24,000 miners and 18,000 railroad men are out, and though the statement is plainly exaggerated as to the railway hands, the suspension of mining appears to be nearly complete in the Reading, as in the Lehigh regions. In spite of December's large output, stocks at tide-water are low, and stoppage of supplies of coal threatens to close some manufacturing works. The iron market is already distinctly stiffer because of possible closing of furnaces, and the Thomas company has not yet announced its prices.

All the speculative markets have experienced some reaction, except for tin, which is firm at ¼ a cent advance, and lead, which is quoted slightly lower. Stocks have not advanced as those hoped who supposed that $70,000,000 distributed in dividends and in interest, January 1st, would lift prices; an increased demand for good bonds appears.

The first week of the year opens with fewer failures than were anticipated, and with fair business for the season at all points reporting. Money is rather closer at Kansas City and some less important points, and the strike, with its uncertainties, explains slightly higher rates at Philadelphia, while at Boston the smallness of transactions is unusual. But the money markets are generally easier, and complaint of collections is less frequent. Dividends declared by banks and other financial institutions were generally up to expectations, but much of the money appears to have been anticipated in previous investments.

Next to the iron industry, which hesitates, the woolen manufacturers seems to have most uncertainty. The raw material has declined about 1 cent in December and 2 to 3 cents since July, though coarse wool yields least and the largest decline has been in fine fleece.

The business failures during the week are: 256 for the United States, and 23 for Canada, against 271 for the United States, and 28 for Canada the same week last year.

The Homebest Man in Tecumseh

As well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on Baker & Hall, and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed to cure and relieve all Chronic and Acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.

E. R. SMITH'S NEW STORE AT CLINTON.

One of the finest business structures that has been erected in this section of the County for many years is the new store just finished by E. R. Smith at Clinton. The new building stands on the site of the old store and is by all odds the most attractive looking business block in Clinton. The above engraving is a faithful representation of the front view of the store.

The late John Smith began mercantile business in Clinton in the year 1835, and continued therein, either by himself, or in partnership with others, until his death in June, 1886. In 1855 the old brick store was erected which was the home of the leading drygoods house of Clinton for over thirty years. In the spring of 1864 E. R. Smith entered the firm and from that time forward he had the business control of the establishment.

Last summer he conceived the idea of tearing down the old antiquated store and erecting in its place a modern structure with all the modern improvements. The resolve was acted upon and the result is now an accomplished fact. The building is 88 feet deep and 26 feet front on Chicago street. It has heavy stone foundation walls with a roomy basement, well lighted. On the east side of the store in the rear is an addition, 12x36 feet in size, used for the staircases, water closet and elevator. At the north end of this hall, with a door opening into the main room, is a brick fire-proof vault, fitted with double iron doors and a combination lock furnished by the Detroit Safe Co. In front of the vault is a platform six inches above the floor, surrounded by a railing, within which will be placed the business desks. An open fireplace and grate are fitted in the wall near the vault entrance. There is a large skylight in the roof and an opening beneath through the second floor.

The store has an elegant plate glass front and three square windows in the rear about eight feet above the floor. The tower contains a Mitchell elevator, which runs from the bottom of the basement to the second story. A large cistern, 15 feet square, is constructed in the rear. From this will be filled a tank, located in the top of the tower. This tank will furnish a reservoir to operate the water closet and to keep water stored for protection against fire. Two hundred feet of hose will be attached to this tank. The inside woodwork is a beautiful carmine, finished in hard oil. The contract for the store was let to Henry Mensing, who provided all the materials and did all the work. A large furnace in the basement heats the building.

Mr. Smith will have an office desk in the store and make it his headquarters, but he has leased it to the firm of McAdam and Mensing, who are now selling off the old stock, preparatory to filling up with a mammoth stock of new goods at an early day.

The store itself is a landmark among the modern improvements of the County and Mr. Smith deserves much credit for his enterprise in building it.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely for the last fifteen years, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. K. Grimes, 69 Valley St., Rendrill, Perry Co., Ohio.

THE TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

You can get a get a good idea of Woodard's new toboggan slide by inspecting this picture, either with or without your spectacles.

The entire slide, from start to finish, is 600 feet long, and the start is forty feet above the lower level. The platform is about twenty feet above the upper level of the ground and the chute descends at an angle of about 45 degrees for 150 feet when it strikes the lower level. The entire chute is made of lumber, with railing on both sides to keep the toboggan on the track. It is almost impossible to meet with an accident with the chute built as it is. Sliding down it is rare sport, and it is twice as easy as rolling off a log. Fifty toboggans are now in use and there is room for more. A charge of 25c per evening is levied upon those who own toboggans, and Mr. Woodard keeps a lot on hand for rent at the same price per ticket. Season tickets are placed at $3. The slide has been in fine condition since last Monday and has been well patronized. It will be open regularly every afternoon and evening as long as the weather permits.

Mr. Woodward will keep his toboggan slide open all day Saturdays. On that day school children under fifteen can slide half a day for ten cents.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 12, 1888.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

East Lynne, Friday evening.

Mrs. Partington, Saturday evening.

M. P. Wemple, of Onsted was in town last Saturday on business.

The paddy's sidewalk is very popular during this slippery weather.

B. L. Baxter of Battle Creek is spending this week at Tecumseh and Deerfield.

Toledo parties are erecting a mammoth ice house at Devil's Lake 40x60 feet in size.

Frank Potter and Bert Hause returned to their duties at Ann Arbor last Monday.

Mrs. N. M. Sutton was at home a part of last week, but returned to Detroit on Monday.

Mr. Woodard has added six new toboggans to his stock, which he will keep for rent.

A new time card went into force on the Lake Shore last Sunday. The changes on the branch are very slight.

F. D. Avery of Onsted has taken a position in C. A. Wright's store. We believe he will prove himself to be an excellent man for the place.

Farmers and others having logs for pickets and other lumber can have them sawed at the Newberg sawmill by August Cupp, an experienced sawyer.

Mr. J. L. Brown has bought out Floyd Bostwick and is now sole proprietor of the favorite barber rooms next the Novelty. Vint Chapman takes a chair in them.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold its regular monthly meeting Jan. 18th. Business meeting at 4 P. M. Supper served by Mrs. Smeltzer's committee. All will be welcomed.

The biggest auction sale that has been held in this section in five years will be held on D. H. Silvers' farm four miles north of Tecumseh, next Thursday, Jan 19th. See a list of the property elsewhere.

John and Julia Brown will please accept our thanks for a pretty cabinet photo, representing them on a toboggan. Fat men, who dare not try Woodard's slide, can be accommodated at M. P. Brown's gallery.

At the close of the morning service last Sabbath at the Universalist church Rev. J. M. Getchell received six members into the church by the right hand of fellowship. A communion service followed.

The chicken pie supper at the Baptist church on Tuesday afternoon and evening was well attended and the renting of the slips on the new plan of weekly payments was finely started. The new plan is likely to work well.

The Detroit Free Press in its new dress looks too handsome for anything. Its typographical appearance is simply perfect and the reading matter is fully up to its usual standard of excellence. The old Free Press leads them all.

Frank Tucker's Metropolitans are billed for the opera house Friday and Saturday evenings, Jan. 13 and 14. East Lynne will be played the first and Mrs. Partington the last. The Metropolitans were here two years ago and gave general satisfaction, and will undoubtedly have good houses this season.

The Universalist Sunday School has elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Supt.—H. Bickford.
Ass't—F. McNeil.
Sec'y—Emma Brown.
Treas.—Lydia McNeil.
Organist—Louise Brown.
Librarian—Maud Hodges.
Ass't—Wm. Stevenson.

Why should not Tecumseh put in a bid for the next encampment of the Southeastern G. A. R. Association? No place has been selected as yet. Devil's Lake has offered $250 but the sum is insufficient to meet the necessary expenses. Our business men should move in this matter at once.

Up to last Monday petitions from eight towns in the county have been filed with the county clerk, asking him to call a local option election. The towns and petitioners are as follows: Rollin, 331; Cambridge, 193; Woodstock, 86; Dover, 62; Hudson, 257; Blissfield, 18; Raisin, 42; Rome, 175. This makes a total of 1,164 signatures. It will be necessary to secure 2,332 before an election can be called.

The following named persons have been installed as officers for the ensuing term of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 14, I. O. O. F.

N. G.—J. W. Wooden.
V. G.—Wm. Gray.
Treas.—C. E. Williamson.
Rec. Sec.—J. M. Getchell.
Per. Sec.—Thos. Cummins.
R. S. N. G.—S. C. Stacy.
L. S. N. G.—Robert Plank.
R. S. V. G.—Alonzo Chapman.
L. S. V. G.—G. W. Smith.
W.—E. Hodges.
Con.—J. P. Keyser.
I. G.—E. Herning.
O. G.—J. Houley.
R. and L. S. S.—R. Holdway and John Hibbard.
Rep. Grand Lodge.—Rev. J. M. Getchell.

East Lynne, Friday evening.

Mrs. Partington, Saturday evening.

Geo. Kies of Elkhart, Ind., was in town this week.

Mrs. Don Palmer of Clinton was in town last Saturday.

An effort is being made to close the barber shops in Adrian on Sunday.

Our friend Frank Baxter is making a live paper of the Battle Creek Call.

A. W. Slayton is in northern Michigan looking after his lumber interests.

Geo. Gorton of Cheboygan was visiting friends in Tecumseh the first of the week.

Pay for your HERALD promptly this month and receive the benefit of our reduced rates.

Mr. and Mrs. Andy Ross of Wichita, Kan. are in Tecumseh, and will remain several days.

Read our prospectus on the eighth page. It contains three new offers this week, all big ones.

The initial chapters of our new serial story appear this week. Now is time for new subscribers to begin.

Go to the opera house on Saturday evening and hear Mrs. Partington. The old lady will be there personally.

Henry Gregg from Iowa, who has been visiting friends here during the holidays, will return home to-morrow.

Our illustrated department is getting finely started, and will add much to the interest and value of our columns this year.

Burt Conkling's dancing school was postponed one week, no arrangements having been made for the use of Armory hall.

Woodard's toboggan slide will be open every afternoon and evening, Sundays excepted, when the weather will permit.

Tecumseh sends in a petition for Local Option of 350 names. Wait till you hear from the other towns in the "Northeast Corner."

Dolph Heesen will start out on the road next Monday for the firm of Heesen Bros. and Co., to work up the sale of their hog rings.

Pay for your HERALD this year in January. Try this plan once and see how you like it. You need not be afraid of offending the HERALD.

We are indebted to Stacy and Bement for a copy of the Pictorial Year Book issued by the Buffalo Express. It is one of the neatest annuals we have seen this season.

Floyd Bostwick went to Jackson last week, and is now working in the same barber shop that Vint Chapman formerly worked in. Vint can now be found at Floyd's old stand.

M. P. Brown has shown us a late copy of the San Diego Daily Bee, sent to him by his brother. If a paper is any index to the prosperity of a town, San Diego is on the boom.

When Mail Agt. M. L. Root returns home next week, he will probably handle a piece of male with great satisfaction. It arrived last Tuesday evening and the mother and boy are doing well.

The late election in the Presbyterian Sunday School resulted as follows:

Supt.—C. A. Slayton.
Ass't—P. S. McKinnon.
Lady Ass't—Miss A. G. Hall.
Sec'y and Treas.—S. J. Helm.
Lib.—Walter Burridge.
Chorister—J. S. Strong.

The Grand High Priest of the State Grand Lodge, R. A. M., was in town Tuesday and held a conference with several members of the old Tecumseh Chapter, which will probably lead to a revival of the same. A committee will be sent to the Grand Chapter for that purpose.

A call has issued for a convention to promote the local option work and aid in securing names to petitions, to be held at Dean's opera house, Adrian, on Wednesday of next week, Jan. 18th. We received this notice from Hudson by telephone, just before going to press.

Such conflicting reports are heard from various sources that it is a relief to read a reliable statement of the actual situation of the farmers, stockmen and business men of the West, such as is contained in a pamphlet just issued under the above title. The statistics given are the latest official figures. Parties desiring this pamphlet can secure a copy free by addressing C. H. Warren, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

The M. E Sunday school loaded itself into several sleighs last Tuesday afternoon, and took a trip out to the farm of B. Hurry's, where they took the host and hostess by surprise. They came prepared to stay, and a table was loaded down with good things which the school soon disposed of, and the evening was spent in games songs etc.

The Baptist Sunday school has elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Supt.—Dr. L. G. North.
Assistant—O. B. Finch.
Secy.—Carrie Osborn.
Treas.—Wm. Fisher.
Librarian—J. H. Heck.
1st. Ass't—Lida Burton.
2d. " —Roy DeWolf.
Organist—Ella Jackson.
Custodians of singing books—Frank Bauer, Bert Baker.

THE G. A. R. INSTALLATION.

Beers Post G. A. R. had their hall well filled last Friday evening to witness the public installation of the newly elected officers. Extra chairs were provided and notwithstanding the rainy night, the room was crowded.

The company was called to order about half past seven by the past Commander, Chas. Davis, and the installation ceremony was proceeded with, past Commander S. P. Hosmer acting as installing officer. The ceremony itself is a very fine one, and Mr. Hosmer recited it very impressively. The newly elected officers then assumed their respective chairs, a list of whom has been previously given in these columns. A literary and musical program was then presented, which seemed to give excellent satisfaction to both the members of the Post and their invited guests.

"Our Glorious Chief," in memory of John A. Logan—Franklin Glee Club.
Address—A. P. Coddington.
Inst. music—Will and Eda Ingersol.
Rec.—Lizzie Thompson.
Duet—"Hail! Comrade Dear"—Misses Libbie and Etta Coddington.
Rec.—Miss Daniels.
Song, "Who Saved the Left?"—Willard Crittenden.
Select Reading—Naval Battle of Memphis—Mrs. A. P. Coddington.
Song—"Star Spangled Banner"—Mrs. L. I. Bidwell.
Duet—"We will rest in the shade of the Trees,"—Franklin Glee Club.
Remarks—S. C. Stacy.
Duet—"Tell my Mother I Die Happy"—Franklin Glee Club.
Song, by request—"Picket Guard"—Mr. Elmer Wilson.
"Marching Through Georgia"—Beers Post, assisted by T. D. Strong and Mrs. A. W. Mills.

The company retired at a late hour, well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

KIND WORDS FROM AN OLD FRIEND.

We have received a very warm personal letter from Hugh Richards, Esq. acknowledging our mention of his building at Hurley, Wis., and take the liberty of publishing a few extracts therefrom which we think will be of public interest: "It is my candid belief, and not only mine but the experts who have examined the property, that we have the largest and best quality of Bessemer steel ore ever discovered in the United States. It is not common iron ore, but a fine Bessemer quality, and the great demand for steel at present is what makes it valuable. When the railroad companies determined to use steel rails it was a great question where they could procure suitable ore. That problem has been solved by the discovery of the Gogebic and other mines. We can now manufacture our own steel rails cheaper than they can be imported. Permit me to say a word about the all absorbing topic of the day—the Tariff. The iron manufactures are making large fortunes every year, and if they take the tariff off ore they must take it off iron also, and I will be perfectly satisfied. I believe we can compete with all foreign manufacturers of iron, for it is a very heavy article to transport, but I have no idea they will take it all off. I am a firm believer in President Cleveland's message, that there ought to be a reduction on many articles. Excuse me for taking so much of your time, but Tecumseh seems like home to me and always will. My desire is that it shall be my final home, and that my body may be laid among the beautiful evergreens of your village cemetery."

It will be of interest to lovers of guitar and mandoline music to know that Mrs. K. L. Corey teaches a condensed method of learning to perform on these instruments, by means of which difficult pieces can be learned very quickly. Twelve lessons will so perfect a scholar as to enable him to play in any key an accompaniment to any ballad. Mrs. Corey will remain long enough to enable those who desire it to acquire much useful knowledge on these sweetest of all stringed instruments. Spanish Fandango can be learned in 30 minutes. For further information apply at the residence of Mrs. M. E. Corey or address box 394 immediately. All scholars should make immediate application if they would secure hours satisfactory to them.

Life Insurance at Actual Cost

Persons desirous of obtaining life insurance at actual cost, should write for circulars to the SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY, No. 233 Broadway, New York.

This Society claims that since its organization the cost to a member of middle age has been less than twelve dollars a year for each thousand dollars of insurance.

S. C. Stacy has sold the Addison Courier to A. J. Kempton, who is now a full-fledged editor and proprietor. We believe that Mr. Kempton will be an honor to the craft, and we heartily extend to him the right hand of fellowship.

OUR DAILY BREAD.

Heavy and sour bread or biscuit has a vast influence through the digestive organs upon the measure of health we enjoy. How important to our present happiness and future usefulness the blessing of good health and a sound constitution are, we can only realize when we have lost them, and when it is too late to repair the damage. Notwithstanding these facts, thousands of persons daily jeopardize not only their health, but their lives, and the healths and lives of others, by using articles in the preparation of their food the purity and healthfulness of which they know nothing. Perhaps a few cents may have been saved, or it may have been more convenient to obtain the articles used, and the housekeeper takes the responsibility and possibly will never know the mischief that has been wrought. Paterfamilias may have spells of headache, the children may have lost their appetites, or look pale; if so, the true cause is rarely suspected. The weather, the lack of out-door air, or some other cause, is given, and the unwholesome, poisonous system of adulterated food goes on. Next to the flour, which should be made of good, sound wheat and not ground too fine, the yeast or baking powder, which furnishes the rising properties, is of the greatest importance, and of the two we prefer baking powder, and always use the Royal, as we thereby retain the original properties of the wheat, no fermentation taking place. The action of the Royal Baking Powder upon the dough is simply to swell it and form little cells through every part. These cells are filled with carbonic acid gas, which passes off during the process of baking.

The Royal is made from pure grape acid, and it is the action of this acid upon highly carbonized bicarbonate of soda that generates the gas alluded to; and these ingredients are so perfectly titted, tested and adjusted to each other, that the action is mild and permanent, and is continued during the whole time of baking, and no residue of poisonous ingredients remains to undermine the health, no heavy biscuits, no sour bread, but if directions are followed, every article will be found sweet and wholesome.

To Whom It May Concern.

TECUMSEH, MICH., Dec. 23, 1887.

It will undoubtedly be news to regret by those interested that a number of the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity combined to resist the what they considered unlawful collection of their notes given to the M. and O. railroad Company. It will be remembered that there was some money raised and placed in my hands to defray any expense that might arise, and as I have not used but little of this money for said purpose, and there still remains in my hands a balance belonging to said company, therefore, I will set the 14th of January next, at one o'clock P. M., to meet as many of said company as can conveniently be present at the office of Webster Frazier in Tecumseh to settle with them.

Respectfully,
J. B. COLVIN.

DEATH OF MRS. FAY W. DePUY.

The sudden death of Mrs. Fay DePuy will cause a pang of regret wherever her name was known and cherished as a beloved and loving friend. Never rugged, yet full of resolution to live and be strong, she tried with a brave heart to ward off the hand of disease that at last overpowered her.

On Thursday afternoon, Jan. 5th, her little nieces came to visit her. The day was bright, the coasting fine, and to please them, she joined for a little while in their out-door sports. After supper Mr. DePuy went to the barn to care for his horses. Soon after Mrs. DePuy went into the sitting-room, drew an easy chair before the fire and sat down. She complained of a pain in her shoulder, and told one of the little girls to bring her the camphor bottle. The request was obeyed. Again she said, "I have such a pain in my heart." When asked if they could do anything, she said, "no," and the little ones went back to the dining room to their innocent play. In a few minutes they looked in and said, "Auntie is asleep, we must not wake her."

Half an hour later Mr. DePuy came in and little Clara Fuller said, "Uncle, you must not wake Auntie, she is sleeping so nice." Poor little heart! "Auntie" was indeed sleeping that last long sleep that knows no waking.

Mr. DePuy went up to his wife's side and touched her hand! It was cold in death!

Gone without a moment's warning! Gone without one look or sign of a last farewell. It was indeed hard! But when the first great shock was over, there came the soothing consolation that no final bed of suffering had been hers to bear. No long weary days of pain and anguish. But the sweet solace that for her,

"To die was landing on some peaceful shore,
Where billows never break nor tempests roar:
Ere well she felt the kindly stroke, 'twas o'er."

The funeral was held at the residence on Sunday afternoon, and was attended by a vast concourse of relatives and friends. Mrs. DePuy was a member of the M. E. church of Clinton, and her pastor, Rev. A. M. Stalker delivered a beautiful discourse, which will ever be cherished by those who loved her as a touching and loving tribute to her memory.

The bearers were composed of the members of the Sunday school class which she assumed a few years ago. Then they were restless, active boys, requiring all the patience and kindly influence she could bring to bear, to keep them interested and attentive. Now they had grown to be young men, and it was a fitting manifestation, this last act of respect which they were enabled to pay to her memory.

Mrs. Depuy possessed many endearing qualities of heart and mind which only those who knew her best were permitted to share. Affectionate, tender, resolute, she was ever ready to do whatever the vicissitudes of life incurred without faltering. And with a tenderness that never waned, did she entwine her affections around the hearts of those to whom by the marriage tie, she became sister and daughter. Through all the changing years to come they will not forget "Carrie." Treasured will be her name, and unnumbered will be the tears shed in silent communion with associations that are now forever past.

If I had known, O loyal heart,
When hand to hand we said farewell,
How for all time our paths would part,
What shadow o'er our friendship fell,
I should have clasped your hand so close
In the warm pressure of my own,
That memory still would keep its grasp
If I had known.

If I had known how, from the strife
Of fears, hopes, passions, here below,
Into a purer, higher life
That you were called, O friend, to go,
I should have stayed my foolish tears,
And hushed each idle sigh of moan
To bid you a last long farewell
If I had known.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

The following narrative is no "war romance" or "story founded on fact," but a genuine history, authenticated in every part, of real events far stranger and more thrilling than any fiction. The facts were investigated at the time by order of Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, and as a result the official war records, now being published by government, contain full proof of every material allegation. In the first series of that work, tenth volume, part first, and beginning on page 630, will be found the official reports of Judge Advocate General Holt, Maj. Gen. Buell and Col. Lee, of Atlanta, together with statements by surviving members of the expedition and by Confederate Gens. E. Kirby Smith, Braxton Bragg, the Confederate secretary of war, Gen. Randolph, and the president, Jefferson Davis, with many others. I have used also my own recollections and phonographic notes and dates, jotted at the very time of the events, and am thus able to make a more life-like picture than would otherwise be possible.

I have only taken the liberty of passing more hastily over those events and explanations which, while necessary for a full understanding of the whole, are more in the ordinary line of military experience, in order that more space be given to those elements of tragedy and thrilling adventure in which this raid stands separate and unrivaled among all the many heroic deeds of the fearless struggle for maintaining the American Union. Not a single fictitious element or embellishment of fancy has been introduced. Wherever conjectures as to unknown motives or incidents have been hazarded, they are clearly distinguished as such.

CHAPTER I.

THE ANDREWS RAID—ENTERING THE HEART OF THE CONFEDERACY.

At Nashville, in March, 1862, while Gen. D. C. Buell was at the head of the Army of the Ohio, I was in his employ, J. J. Andrews, proposed to him to take eight men and destroy a number of the principal bridges far to the south on one of more important Confederate railway lines. Buell consented and gave the men; but though the detachment succeeded in reaching Atlanta, Ga., the enterprise failed from the absence of a Confederate regiment of cavalry whose help had been promised. The men, with Andrews, succeeded in escaping the Union lines and reaching the Chattanooga, at Murfreesboro, and finally Eleven people were then, under the command of Gen. O. M. Mitchel, the celebrated astronomer, who had been detached with 10,000 men from the army of Buell for the purpose of invading Nashville on that side, and of inflicting any injury in his power upon the enemy. The report of Andrews, who brought full information of the enemy's movements, probably confirmed the daring schemes he was already entertaining, and between them they arranged for the boldest push of the war. What they meant to do may best be inferred from what they actually did. Mitchel moved his whole division to Shelbyville, Tenn., and prepared to move rapidly and secretly upon the line of the enemy's communications direct southward. Andrews was to have authority to take from twenty-four to forty volunteers—probably a train from each company of the 21, 23 and 33d Ohio regiments. The twenty-three of them who reported were dressed in ordinary citizens' dress, without uniforms, supplied with pistols and bowie-knives only, and with a small sum of Confederate money, and met at a leader in a lonely wooded spot at night. Meanwhile Union picket line [illegible] directed their break into small [illegible] and getting the rough and [illegible] country in Cumberland [illegible] mountains, by unfrequented roads across the [illegible] tains to different points on railroads within the Confederate lines, [illegible] guards were posted [illegible] where trains as yet [illegible] exposed by [illegible] or for dangerous emergencies. Then it was [illegible] any part of the south. If questioned while on the way they were to state that they were from Fleming county, Ky., on their way south to escape "Yankee" tyranny and to join the Southern army.

Fleming county was the home of Andrews, and there is a romantic and pitiful romance connected with his name which the writer learned on the spot from parties concerned. Many years after, Andrews loved, wooed and won a Kentucky lady of that county—Miss Elizabeth J. Layton—who, like himself, was an ardent Unionist. She was described to me by neighbors as not strikingly beautiful, but attractive and estimable. Before their marriage the war broke out, and he entered soon afterward on his perilous business as a spy for the Federal army. To the southerners he represented himself as their friend, and carried over the line from the Union side articles such as quinine—of great value to them—thus driving a very profitable trade and furnishing them plausible excuse for his frequent passages from one side of the military lines. He gained the entire confidence of the southern officers, and was able to travel at his will through their territory. To the Union officers he reported all his observations and brought them information of priceless value. It was this acquaintance with the south which alone rendered feasible the daring project.

But the dangerous business in which he was engaged was a great source of grief and apprehension to his promised wife, and through her persuasions he was induced to pledge her that when he succeeded in one more enterprise he would retire from the deadly danger which are the daily companions of a spy, and with that understanding their wedding day had been fixed for some date near the middle of June, 1862. The expedition which was to be his last was then laid upon which he was now engaged.

The writer and the men with him, as well as the other squads, directed their courses first eastward till north of the mountains, and then southward, travelling with few obstacles except almost ceaseless rain, mud everywhere, and swollen streams, till Chattanooga and other stations west of that point on the railroad were reached, when passage was taken on different trains to Marietta, the second place of rendezvous agreed on by us. Our story of being oppressed Kentuckians gained us ready hospitality. Two of our number, however, were suspected, and as the readiest way out of their dilemma, joined the Confederate army—which we had all been expressly authorized to do in case of need, and which was the easier now, as the conscription was being relentlessly enforced, and it was assumed that all travelers who could not give a good account of themselves were fleeing from it. At Marietta we spent the night, intending to capture our train in the morning in a camp of the enemy's and making our way northward, burn the bridges, which constituted the object that had brought us more than 200 miles away from the nearest Union forces. But everything had worked well so far, and we were very hopeful.

J. J. ANDREWS.

CHAPTER II.

GEN. MITCHEL MARCHES WAR WITH ASTRONOMICAL PRECISION.

The promptness and celerity of the movement by which Gen. Mitchel surprised the enemy in his front and cleared the way for still greater enterprises was hardly, if at all, equaled by anything on the Union side during the whole contest. Pouring rain, flooded creeks and bridges swept away did not delay him a moment beyond his conjectures, though they added enormously to the discomforts of the army under his command. Probably his scientific training was to some extent responsible for his appreciation of the value of minutes. Astronomers are accustomed to deal with the thousandth part of a second, and Mitchel, in his backwoods observatory, had invented instruments which made stellar records with more precision than any astronomer who had gone before him, and thus won world wide fame in this department. He carried the same qualities into the army. Leaving Shelbyville for a forced march the morning after the Andrews raid had started on its perilous way, and in exact time to secure the largest results from its co-operation—for its work was also to be done at a fixed period—he reached the vicinity of Huntsville before the enemy had the slightest intimation of his approach, then rousing his men at midnight by the light of the setting moon, he flushed his march in the darkness, and came upon the sleeping town in the morning twilight, capturing everything—stores, engines, locomotives, trains and all the supplies of the railroad.

This was a glorious triumph, but it was only the first of the three parts of which Mitchel's plan consisted, and he at once entered on the second. Friday, April 11—the very day on which we had reached Marietta—he arranged all affairs connected with the railroad management on a new basis, and started two trains loaded with troops right into the midst of the enemy's territory. The first went westward to possess all the road in that direction and to open a communication with the armies of Buell and Grant, then at Pittsburg Landing, which was successfully and promptly accomplished. The other commanded by Mitchel in person, started eastward. How far he should go depended partly on the resistance met, but still more on the news that might be received from the Andrews raiders. The little division of Mitchel presented on that clouded Saturday morning a fine picture and imposing spectacle to an eye capable of embracing it all. Three different railroad expeditions were rushing forward in rebel territory—the ours was the launched, and the other two, east and west, were in [illegible] enforcement [illegible] regiments which had been our [illegible] the central position [illegible] Huntsville. With Mitchel halted at a great distance [illegible] Bridgeport, [illegible] only about [illegible] miles from Chattanooga. We knew that the greater part of our work was still undone. The whole north was alarmed by his [illegible] he was made leader general and congratulated by the president, and [illegible] to report the city to Washington [illegible] he knew that the key of the enemy's position, the central strategical position of the war, at least in the west, was in our hands. And he also knew that with this he could take and hold it, depended upon the degree of success with which we met that day in destroying the Georgia State and East Tennessee railroads. Could he capture Chattanooga at this early date, that town, which with its southern connections afterward cost scores of thousands of lives and around which struggled Rosecrans, Thomas, Grant, Sherman, Bragg, Buckner, Johnston, Hood and their brave armies for two years of deadly conflict? Mitchel saw the value of this point, and before breaking camp at Shelbyville had sent out party to destroy the bridges on this road and the Chickamauga bridge on the East Tennessee road, thus with his own forces cut the west entirely off all possible succor, and leaving Chattanooga, now denuded of troops, at his mercy. He had now halted until he could hear what he had done.

But one mistake already had been made. We were to strike the bridges on Friday, the very day that Mitchel struck Huntsville. It was now Friday evening and we had done nothing, while Mitchel was within two hours' run of Chattanooga, with the road open before him, abundance of rolling stock, and the enemy in panic in his front. The chance of that day was lost, that Andrews, reasoning in a way that would have been justified in the case of any other Federal general, was assured that Mitchel would inevitably be delayed more than one day by such torrents of rain as had fallen since we left camp; and that [illegible] would impair the value of our work, and might even call the enemy's attention to Mitchel's own advance; so he had sent word to our different squads that the grand attempt would be Saturday, the 12th of April, instead of Friday. That would yet be in full time for Mitchel's enterprise, but it increased our own difficulties and dangers in a way that will soon be made plain. On our morrow's work, therefore, depended the possession of Chattanooga, and as we saw the whole after course of the war in the west. This is an inference only. But it rests upon a mass of evidence of which the reader who has not attentively studied the subject can scarcely form an idea.

CHAPTER III.

WE CAPTURE THE TRAIN.

The Andrews party were greatly crowded in the large hotel at Marietta on Friday night, having to sleep three or four to a bed, but soldiers are not fastidious, and the greater number slept soundly. We had unbounded confidence in our leader, whose part it was to provide for all contingencies.

The names of the men who reached Marietta to take part in the railroad raid were as follows:

James J. Andrews, leader of the expedition and a citizen of Kentucky.

Six from Ohio regiment equipment: [illegible] D. Wilson, sergeant; B. William Pittenger, Company G; Perry G. Shadrack, Company K.

From the Twenty-first Ohio regiment were detailed:

Mark Wood, Company C; J. A. Wilson, Company C; J. K. Porter, Company C; William Knight, Company E; Wilson F. Brown, Company F; Wilson Bensinger, Company G; Robert Buffum, Company H; E. H. Mason, Company K; John Scott, Company K.

The Thirty-third Ohio supplied:

Martin J. Hawkins, Company A; William Reddich, Company B; John Wollam, Company C; Samuel Robinson, Company G; D. A. Dorsey, Company H; Jacob Parrott, Company K; Samuel Slavens.

William Campbell, also a member of the expedition, was a citizen of Ohio on a visit to the camp, and managed to enlist among the raiders.

Andrews scarcely slept at all that night. He first went to the hotel and saw that those who had hired them had made arrangements for being called on time in the morning. Porter and Hawkins, who had come down the evening before, and had gone to bed much earlier, were not seen, and as they had not paid the waiter any fee for rousing them early, they were left behind: a diminution of our force much regretted, as they were both brave men and Hawkins was an experienced engineer. This left us but nineteen men in addition to the leader.

We were all roused promptly at the railroad hotel a little before daybreak. Andrews, who came back to us, now went from room to room while we were dressing, seeing every man, giving him exact orders as to his part in the work of the morning. There was suppressed fire in his low, almost whispered words, a calm confidence in his tones that was contagious. There seemed to be no doubt, hesitation or shrinking on his part, but, on the contrary, an eagerness and joy that the time was so near at hand.

BEDROOM CONSULTATION AT MARIETTA.

When we were ready, as it still lacked a little of train time, we gather into Andrews' room for an informal council of war. Some were seated on the edge of the bed, one or two on chairs, and the remainder stood around as best they could. We did not speak very loud, as we wished no lookers-in on our plans. Andrews gave his orders briefly, only, we did our work perfectly, there would be no chance for interference. Capturing the train in the camp would be risky, if not impossible, and there would therefore be no guard.

Andrews could always find a reason for everything, but these plausible arguments were not perfectly convincing. Several others, among whom was J. A. Wilson, joined in a respectful protest against proceeding. Then Andrews, speaking even lower, as was his wont when strongly moved, said:

"Boys, I tried this once before and failed; now I will succeed or leave my bones in Dixie."

The words and manner thrilled every hearer, and we assured him that we would stand by him, and, if need be, die with him. He grasped our hands and we hurried to the platform, for the train was now almost due. I had said nothing in the discussion, for I felt that we were [illegible] should simply obey, leaving the responsibility to rest on him. I am not sure that, on a later critical occasion, we did not carry this principle a little too far.

Although we only needed tickets to Big Shanty, we purchased them to various points along the line that attention might not be attracted by such a number bound to one place. As the train came up we noticed three closed box cars attached. Every passenger train, as I have since been informed by Conductor Fuller, was at this time required to carry empty cars northward, which were brought back filled with bacon and other provisions, vast quantities of which were then in the slaughter pens of Tennessee and [illegible] in Atlanta. We all took our places together in one car, that we might be ready to help each other if in case of need. Knight sat near the front door and says that on looking back he saw that most of our men were pale, yet resolute. The passengers had that listless and weary air always seen in the early morning on board a train.

The conductor, whose name we afterward learned was William A. Fuller, entered and began to take the tickets. He looked narrowly at us, for it was an uncommon thing for so many persons to enter in a body as did at Marietta; besides, he had been warned very recently to watch that no conscripts used his train for the purpose of escaping, and ordered, in such case, [illegible] at once. No doubt we looked soldierly enough, but he afterward told me that he did not suspect us of being conscripts. We also scrutinized him carefully, for it was possible that he might, if his suspicions were in the least aroused, endeavor to prevent us from taking his train.

A Young Girl's Grief

at seeing her charms of face and form departing, and her health impaired by functional irregularities, at her critical period of life, was turned to joy and gratitude after a brief self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It purified and enriched her blood, gave a healthy activity to the kidneys, stomach, bowels, and other organs, and her return to robust health speedily followed. It is the only medicine for a women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

And He Saw It with a Vengeance.

LIMA, O., Jan. 9.—Samuel Bowman touched a match to a can containing oil which was being heated Sunday. An explosion followed, setting fire to his clothing and burning him to a crisp. His wife, in attempting to put out the flames, was also fatally burned. Bowman, previous to lighting the match, said he wanted to see the gas burn.

ITEMS OF GENERAL INTEREST.

The secretary of the treasury has appointed Thomas J. Healey storekeeper for the First Illinois district, at Chicago.

It is given out that Governor Seay will probably enter the race for the United States senatorship in Alabama, to succeed Mr. Morgan.

The revenue receipts from Rock Island were reported to Peoria, Tuesday. They make the Fifth internal revenue district (Illinois) receipts for December $2,145,741.25.

George W. Snyder, a pioneer physician, expired at his residence in Burlington, Iowa, Wednesday, aged 84 years.

I give honor to whom it is due. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me of Bright's disease and Gravel. Four of the best physicians had failed to relieve me. I have recommended it to scores of people with like success, and know it will cure all who try it.—Mrs. E. P. Mizner, Burg Hill, O. Send 2c. stamp to Dr. Kennedy, Roundout, N. CATARRH, scrofula and all humors are diseases of the blood, and always yield to the curative properties of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, the great blood remedy.

REV. J. ROBERTS, pastor of the M. E. Church, Fremont, Mich., says Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is a great remedy, and worthy the confidence and confidence.

Most everything in this world is full of deceptions. Few things are what they seem, but the results obtained for Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic far exceed all claims. It restores lost nerve force, cures dyspepsia and all stomach, liver, kidneys and bladder troubles. It is a perfect blood purifier, blood purifier, a sure cure for ague and malarial diseases. Price 50 cents. at Dr. Fox's Ferguson.

BUT SO

That we are daily guaranteeing Kennedy's Sarsaparilla to be the best for having blood purifiers, we are without doubt, we are prepared to prove it. It is the greatest blood remedy in the market for cleansing the blood and strengthening the system. A well known druggist purchased 1 dozen bottles for his family use, and two bottles of it is Sarsaparilla. Price 1.00. For sale by Baker & Hall.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Frank Wallinger of Tecumseh made his people a flying visit Tuesday.

John Farrell of Manchester was in town Monday.

Miss Nellie Gardner of Jackson, has been visiting Mrs. John Kimball, the past week.

C. D. Keyes lost a fine White Dorking cock last week.

J. J. White's fine young Minorca cockrell had his comb and wattles severely frozen Monday night, notwithstanding the flannel cap Mr. White had made for it.

As soon as the weather moderates a little, Ed. Semark is to fix the upper story of his brick block into a first class Photograph gallery, which will be occupied by Geo. Gibson.

Ed. Semark gives a dancing party at Town Hall, Friday evening of this week. Bill, including supper, $1.00.

Tuesday evening a large number of people west of town, made Horace Fisk's people an unexpected visit. It was none the less enjoyable on that account however.

The supper and donation Friday evening for Williams and McDonald at the Baptist church, was well attended by about 100. It proved quite pleasant and netted them about $27.

J. L. Kishpaugh and C. D. Keyes paid Chas. Waldron, south of Tecumseh, a call the first of the week.

Ben. C. Ellis and his sister, Mrs. Lottie Tyler, went to Hillsdale Saturday.

Geo. Runyan spent Sunday with Doc. A. W. Alvord in Battle Creek, on his way to attend the Grand Council and Grand Chapter which was held at Grand Rapids, Monday eve., and Tuesday of this week. D. Woodward left Monday morning for the same place and purpose.

J. S. Kies returned from his western trip Saturday last.

John A. Teabolt who is railroading in the southwest arrived in town Monday for a visit with his family.

Frank Parker was taken by surprise Saturday eve when his class-mates in the Sunday-school with their teacher Mrs. Will Wood, walked in upon him. He quickly recovered himself however and the evening was pleasantly passed in a social manner.

A large number of our young people attended the party last Friday evening at J. S. Kress's pleasant home in Bridgewater. The evening was spent pleasantly with music and dancing. Many words of praise were spoken for the charming young hostesses, Minnie Martin and Frankie Kress, in whose honor the party was given.

Mrs. Cynthia Larzelere, mother of Mrs. Dwight Kies has been quite ill for several days. Her disease is of a dropsical nature, and being in the region of her heart makes it difficult to breathe. At her advanced age it appears more serious but it is hoped she will recover.

Mrs. M. M. Powers of Chicago, is visiting Mrs. John Smith, of this village.

C. S. Burroughs and wife gave a progressive euchre party Saturday eve. in honor of Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Miller, who were visiting them.

The apron social at A. P. Halliday's Wednesday, was largely attended and was a very pleasant one.

Mrs. Powers of Dakota, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. John Smith, leaves this week for her western home.

Miss Etta Carpenter has returned to her home in Holloway.

Jas. McAdam of Cadillac, was in town over Sunday. He reports 4 feet snow up there and the weather yer cold. Henry Mensing drove him over to Ann Arbor Monday morning. They left at 3 A. M.

The leap year party given by the ladies last Thursday evening was the event of the season. The elements seemingly were against it, for it was a fearful night, not so cold but a regular blizzard. The ladies were not to be overcome by trifles and when the grand march began forty couples were present, besides a goodly number of spectators. Hunt's orchestra was in the best of form and played in a very spirited manner. Many fine toilettes were displayed by the ladies. All seemed to partake of the spirit of the hour. The supper furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Semark proved them caterers of a high order. It was a complete success and the gentlemen will find it difficult to excel it.

Mrs. Matt Lancaster had a narrow escape from a runaway Saturday.—She had a lady and child with her in a cutter drawn by their bay horse, Billy Todd. Coming by the woolen mill something started him; being close to the cutter he struck the runners, which made him unmanageable. He ran up Chicago street, but took the walk in front of Mrs. McMaster's and was stopped in front of Chris. Smith's. Fortunately no damage was done whatever.

Geo. W. Freese, Vic. E. Haywood and C. D. Keyes, with their ladies, attended the party at Goodyear's Hall, Manchester, Friday evening. They report a fine company and an elegant time.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

D. Harrison & Son have their ice house filled with a fine quality of ice for their use next season in the butcher business.

John P. Witt, township treasurer, was in the village collecting taxes Monday.

W. F. Clack has on hand a large stock of groceries etc. that he purchased of the H. McClure firm at Britton, a few days since at a bargain, and he now gives his customers the advantage of reduced prices.

The little folks made little Hattie Russell a surprise one evening last week and enjoyed a pleasant evening.

Rev. Mr. Wiley of Tuscola county, Mich., occupied the pulpit Sunday morning by request of Rev. W. H. Benton.

Rev. W. J. Clack and wife of Blissfield were in the village Monday.

Alfred Mosher of Addison called on old friends here from Saturday until the middle of this week.

The attendance at the lectures given by Rev. E. B. Sutton of Adrian and Rev. Mr. Wiley of Tuscola Co., Mich., on Temperance at Cottage Hall, on Saturday evening, was not as large as should have been.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their regular two weeks afternoon meeting at the home of Mrs. F. E. Pocklington, next week Tuesday.

Lou Arner spent the forepart of the week with Ella Jackson at Tecumseh.

Two ladies, living on North street, have the right pluck, at least we thot so last week when it was reported that they stopped a runaway team. It is leap year, you know, and every effort will be put forth by the female sex that will be of any means to secure the prize at the end of the race.

Ed. Harrington and wife, who have been spending their honey moon at Grand Ledge with relatives, returned Monday.

W. P. Cadmus has purchased the stock of boots & shoes of Waring & Potter, and respectfully invites his old customers to give him a call before purchasing elsewhere.

Remember the entertainment at Cottage Hall this week Friday evening, given by the L. C. S. Admission 10cts. Doors open 6:30, exercises begin at 7. A good attendance is desired by the members of the society, as the money is to be used in paying a portion of the furnace expense.

Keep it fresh in your memory that the annual Donation will be held in the lecture room of the church next Wednesday evening. The necessary commitees are appointed and everything will be done to make it an enjoyable occasion. We are informed that the old debts have been cleared away and that the donation will be applied on the present expenses.

Our letter to the HERALD last week was quite badly mixed up, left out, and made to mean what we didn't intend to say. Many places in the several items slight mistakes were made, and Geo. Davidson's name appears on the program for a declamation, when it should be George Sanford, and in the list of presents given at M. M. Florence's 35th anniversary, Chauncey Dibble, wife and daughter Nettie, who presented a beautiful Amberine water set, was left out. We are sure that all of the mistakes were our fault, and hope in the future to be more correct.

Yes, Leap Year is surely here; at least we were reminded of the fact one evening last week when "Old Pat" called at the office for us, and we were snugly wrapped in robes, with Minnie on one side, oysters in front and crackers behind and we were on our way to the home of M. M. Florance. We were in advance of the load of twenty or more, and witnessed their arrival. The belle of the evening was, "She, who is to be;" well we won't give it away for she carried out her intentions with success and credit, and considerable amusement for all. The ladies put their best foot forward and furnished a splendid oyster supper with a variety of other goodies. The evening was passed away in a quiet, social hop. The ladies deserve much credit for the manner in which they conducted the affair.

Belle Barlow went to Detroit Wednesday morning to attend the conservatory of music for a few months. A sleigh load of her most intimate friends spent an hour at her home Tuesday evening, extending her wishes for her success and a good bye.

Died at her home in the village of Ridgeway, Jan. 14th, 1888, Mrs. Clarinda Allen, wife of Loren Allen, aged 69 years, 9 months, 23 days.

The deceased was born in Toronto, Canada, March 19th 1818. She was of English and French descent. She with her husband and three children came to Ridgeway, 39 years ago, and fully realized the life of a pioneer. She was the mother of 5 children, 3 of whom are still living. Daniel, who lives at Ridgeway, Jos. [illegible] San Diego, Cal., and Ed. [illegible] She was a kind wife, mother, and obliging [illegible] life was spent in [illegible] family until two years [illegible] pletely broken with [illegible] Since her failing [illegible] ter-in-law, Mrs. D[illegible] and many kind neighbors [illegible] after her needs as [illegible] She passed away with [illegible] or a groan, at 2 o'clock [illegible] ing. She shared the [illegible] neighbors and friends [illegible] ness and death. The funeral services were held at her late [illegible] Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock [illegible] Peter Sharp officiating assisted by Rev. W. H. Benton. The remains were consigned to their last resting place in the village cemetery.

Card of Thanks

Words fail to express our sincere and heartfelt appreciation to the friends of the village for their willingness to care for our sister and mother during her long sickness, also for their assistance at her death and funeral. Loren Allen, Daniel Allen and wife, Ed Allen and wife, John Allen and wife and grand children.

MR. EDITOR.—We wish to say to our friends and the friends of our friend in California, that the letter published in your last weekly issue from San Diego, Cal., was not absolutely true. The portion we have reference to, is that wherein it says, "Will Barrett has worked four days since he came." Mr. Barrett informs us often, that he is still in a large Lumber Office, drawing $600 per month, steady work, boards at a private house, with lots to eat at reasonable prices, while in the "homesick" man's letter he says, they "don't get much to eat, either." Now, why don't it stand to reason that a city like San Diego, can feed its guests as well as the eastern cities, if they wish to pay their way in the world? Of course, in our own abundant cities, if we frequent "free lunch counters," we sometimes lack for a sufficient amount to eat. He writes of the "raging fever and small pox," that may be so, for any city is liable to such things, but, if so, should our board of health allow him to come back here soon, as he has been talking of doing? He also tries to break the climate record that California has had for scores of years, just because he wants to get back to Ridgeway. In closing we wish to say, we care nothing of those things, but why should he try to misrepresent a young man, who is there earning an honest and upright living? If he is homesick, let him stay till he is free from small-pox, etc., (!) and then come home and relate. COM.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Mrs. Geo. Allen has been very low again.

Perry Allen was very sick last week and it seemed doubtful if he could rally from the attack, but we are glad to hear that he is better.

They have a fine new boy baby at Wesley Pawson's.

On Monday of last week, Rodman Taylor came near being a victim to the rage of a bull belonging to Ben Lankin. The animal caught him on one horn, threw him up nine or ten feet into the air, over a pair of bars and landed him sixteen feet from the starting point. Strange as it may appear no bones were broken. At this writing, one week after the accident, Mr. Taylor is confined to his bed, but under the efficient care of Dr. Blatchford, with his little pills to equalize the circulation, is improving rapidly.

We judge they have been having some cold weather in Kansas from an account Will Spaulding sends of a storm that kept him and his scholars shut up in the schoolhouse all one night. They had no light except what came from the stove, and he dared not allow them to sleep. We presume the Kansas schoolhouse is not built with reference to the Minnesota blizzard—so sung, told stories, spoke pieces, anything to divert tearful little ones, till morning brought relief. We have no doubt it looked upon one tired young man. Will was a plucky boy of old, and that he proved equal to the occasion, is no surprise to his Michigan friends.

Good winter weather.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Splendid sleighing and plenty of chances to improve it by attending one of the following:

1st. Revival meeting at the church every evening.

2d. Singing School at C. E. Jessup's Hall on Tuesday eve.

3d. Club Dance at the same place on Friday eve.

4th. K. of L. meeting Saturday eve.

By virtue of an execution a top carriage, two cutters and some other traps, the property of T. H. Mosher, was levied on by Deputy Bowen and placed in the barn of John Kerr, and the same was to be sold on Tuesday last, but owing to some irregularities the sale did not take place and the property was returned.

As A. J. Monagan was returning from a business trip in Ill., he went by the way of Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and called on his old friend, W. A. Whitney, and reports him in possession of a splendid wife and home, a thriving business, and above all a beautiful boy baby. They had a splendid visit no doubt, and we are not quite sure but what we would enjoy being with them.

On Wednesday last while sawing pickets at Grogers' mill, by some means or other Wm. Shultis had the misfortune to loose a thumb and finger. He lost a nail the day before, which it would seem was on purpose to warn him to be careful. Sorry Will, and hope it is not as bad as reported to us.

MACON MUSIC.

Mart Hendershot's youngest girl has been having scarlet fever.

Mrs. Eugene Burdette has returned rom her visit to Chicago.

Mr. Mosher was unable to deliver his temperance lecture last Thursday night on account of the inclemency of the weather.

The ladies aid society held at the residence of Mark Pennington last Wednesday afternoon was well attended.

Ed. Morgan and wife returned to their home in Macon last Friday.

Rev. Charles Dennis of Hillsdale, who has been pastor of the Baptist church here for nearly three years, has resigned his pastoral labors on account of his studies.

There will be a donation for the benefit of C. W. Dennis, at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Morgan, Tuesday evening, Jan. 24th.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

The farmers in this vicinity are filling their icehouses at present with a quality that will make good lemonade next summer, when the mercury reaches about 100 degrees on the north side of the wood shed.

We, with numerous other good looking people, are indebted to N. Spencer for a new calendar, issued by the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Co.

Willis Chatfield and "Bummy" Gordon made a trip to Adrian Monday. A fine time is reported.

C. B. Mize has come to the conclusion that the Hanover telegraph office will support two operators, and has taken unto himself a wife. They made a short tour to the residence of his parents north of this village, and were the recipients of a "complete surprise" Saturday evening of last week. The only change we see in Burt is that he wears a "nice little mustache" Allow us to tender our congratulations.

We introduced a short time ago to the public a thing wearing a pair of black glasses and a "butterfly cap." It was Will Gordon. Now, that folks may still be acquainted with him, we will say he has discarded the black glasses and is now wearing a pair of a lighter complexion.

Mart Cannon made his appearance in town Monday noon. He has been working in the northern part of the state, and for anything we can see, is looking finely.

A. M. Sleeper and Abe Whitbeck slaughtered some nice hogs Monday. Now Abe sees where his trade is of some use to him.

Wan Holdridge is serving his time with A. M. Sleeper. That's right, Wan, get the trade down fine and then go into business for yourself.

M. H. Bowen started his new hay press on the farm owned by A. L. Hoxsie last Saturday, and is more than pleased with the way it works.

The first meeting in the new church was held last Sunday, and considering the weather, a good sized congregation attended.

Mrs. Elizabeth Clark returned last Monday from a three weeks' visit with relatives in Toledo.

John and Helen Schwab returned on Monday from a pleasant visit at Monroe.

CHAPTER I.

THE ENTERPRISE—ITS ORIGIN AND ORGANIZATION.

[illegible] N. Y., [illegible] conductor, being [illegible] only 26, [illegible] years in [illegible] service, [illegible] married, but [illegible] no ties, [illegible] a [illegible]

It was a tedious moment when the conductor [illegible] twenty minutes [illegible] the whole party of Confederate troops and even the engine [illegible] their beats. Big Shanty (now Kennesaw) had been selected [illegible] because it was a [illegible] station and because it had no "telegraph office." When Andrews had been here on the previous expedition, few troops were seen, but the number was now greatly increased. It is difficult to tell just how many were actually here, for they were constantly coming and going, but there seems to have been three or four regiments, numbering not far from 1,000 men each. They were encamped almost entirely on the west side of the road, but their outpost included the railroad depot. As soon as the train stopped, the conductor, engineer, fireman, and most of the passengers hurried for breakfast into the long low shed on the east side of the road, which gave the place its name. No guard whatever was left—a fortunate circumstance for us, but not at all unusual on southern roads even when not so well guarded by soldiers as this train was. Now was our opportunity! yet for a moment we were compelled to keep our seats and wait the appointed signal by our leader. It required a strong effort of will to keep from rushing forward. We had no desire for eating as we saw the passengers leaving their seats around us and pouring in to breakfast. The moments seemed hours; for we knew that when the signal was given, we must do our work in less than half a minute or be slaughtered on the spot; we also knew that any one of us who failed to get on board with the rest would be lost; but we did not know how long during the twenty minutes Andrews would wait. If anything could be gained by waiting five or ten minutes we were sure that he, with his marvelous coolness, would wait and expect us to do the same. It seemed already a considerable interval, for the last passenger who wanted breakfast had left the train and disappeared within the room.

But Andrews did not mean delay. He had been absent from the car for a time as we came up the road and had only just returned, and taken his seat close to the door. Now he quietly rose, and without turning his head toward us, stepped to the door with the crowd that was pouring out. Engineer Knight, whether from natural impulsiveness, or at a signal from Andrews, rose also and went out with him. These two got off on the side next to the camp, and opposite the depot. They walked forward at an ordinary pace until abreast of the locomotive, which they saw at a glance to be vacant—engineer and fireman had gone to breakfast. That was very good! Andrews walked a few steps further forward with Knight still at his side, until he could see ahead of the engine that the track was clear as far as a curve a little way up the road which closed the [illegible] until just in advance of the first baggage car and behind the three empty freight cars, when Andrews said with a nod, "Uncouple here and wait for me." Knight drew out the pin and carefully laid it on the draw bar. Andrews came back to the door of our car and opening it said in his ordinary tone, not a shade louder or more hurried than usual, "Come on, boys; it is time to go now." Our hearts have a great bound at the word, but we rose quietly and followed him. Nothing in this was likely to attract the attention of the few passengers who still remained in the car; but it matured little, for the time of concealment was now past. Andrews glided forward very swiftly, and Knight, seeing him coming, hurried on before and jumped on the engine, where he at once cut the bell rope and, seizing the throttle bar, stood leaning forward with tense muscles, and eye fixed on the face of his leader.

Andrews did not follow, but stood a step back from the locomotive with one hand on the rail, looking at his men as they ran forward. Brown and Wilson the other engineer and fireman, darted forward to the top of their speed and took their post beside Knight on the engine. As soon as the rest of us reached the hindmost box car we saw that its door was wide open. Whether this was a mere heavy accident, or whether, as is more likely, Andrews had gone forward before we reached the station and opened it, with his usual foresight, I do not know. But he motioned with his hand to us saying, "Off on! Get on!" We needed no urging. The floor was breast high, but the hindmost slowed and lifted the foremost and were themselves pulled up in turn. I helped to throw Shadrack up and had my arm almost pulled off as I was dragged in by him a second after. All this time a sentry was standing not a dozen feet from the engine quietly watching as if this was the most ordinary proceeding, and a number of other soldiers were idling but a short distance away. All this work was of seconds only, and as the last man was being pulled in, Andrews stepped on board and nodded to Knight, who had never taken his eyes from his face. Quick as a flash the valve was thrown open and the iron giant unchained—but for an instant which seemed terribly long the locomotive seemed to stand still. Knight had thrown the full power on too suddenly, and the wheels slipped on the track, whirling with swift revolutions and the hiss of escaping steam, before the inertia of the ponderous machine could be overcome. But this was an instant only; none of the soldiers had time to raise their muskets, give an alarm, or indeed to recover from their stupor before the wheels "bited," and the train shot away as if freed from a cannon!

We were now flying on our perilous journey. The door of the box car was pulled half to guard against any shot that might be fired, and while partially opened allowed to give us some view of what was passing, it was always closed again whenever we neared a station.

THE START.

This capture was a wonderful triumph. To seize a train of cars in an enemy's camp, surrounded by thousands of soldiers, and carry it off without a shot fired or an angry gesture, was a marvelous achievement. There are times when whole years of intense enjoyment seem condensed into a single moment. It was so with us then.

CHAPTER IV.

THE FIRST STAGE OF THE RUN NORTHWARD.

Various manifestations of triumph were made as soon as we were off. Dorsey sprang to his feet, crying: "Boys! we are done playing reb. now! We are out and out Yankees from this time on." But George D. Wilson, who was older than the rest of us, cautioned him, saying: "Don't be too fast, Dorsey; we're not out of the woods yet."

And indeed it soon seemed as if we were to have serious trouble at the outset. The engine ran slower and slower, until it finally came to a full stop. We were not yet far from camp. There had been just one burst of speed, and then this sickening and alarming failure of power. We asked eagerly of those forward what it meant, and the answer was far from reassuring—"The steam has gone down." In a few moments we learned the reason. The dampers were closed on the engine fires when the stop for Big Shanty was made, and they were not opened by our boys in the hurry of the start; consequently, the fire was almost out. A little oil and some fresh wood promptly mended matters. No time was lost while stopping here in this enforced manner, for we had started ahead of time and had leisure to obstruct the track. The telegraph wire was also cut. This was necessary, for though there was no office at Big Shanty, a portable battery might be found, or a swift messenger be sent back to Marietta, and a single lightning flash ahead would blight our fondest hopes. Breaking a wire is not as easy as it seems; but we adopted a plan which worked all day, and took up no time that was not also utilized for other purposes. John Scott, who was agile as a cat, ran up the pole, and knocking off the insulating box at the top, swung down on it. A small saw found on the engine easily cut the tightly stretched wire close to the box. This did not take more than one or two minutes.

At this first stop Andrews, who had not shared our uneasiness about the fire in the engine, came back and clasped our hands in ecstasy, manifesting more excitement than I ever saw in him before; exclaiming that we had the enemy now at such disadvantage that he could not harm us or save himself. "When we have passed one more train," he declared, "we'll have no hindrance, and then we'll put the engine at full speed, burn the bridges after us, dash through Chattanooga and on to Mitchel at Huntsville. We have the upper hand of the rebels for once!"

By saying that we had only one more train to pass before doing this, Andrews did not mean that there was but one train coming toward us. There were three, which had already left Chattanooga; but only the first of these, a local freight, which might be met at any point between this and Kingston, was a real obstacle. Andrews knew the time schedule of the other two, and could plan to meet them at any given station, even if we were far ahead of our own time. Had there been none but these three trains his triumphing would have been well warranted.

The following is the basis upon which Andrews made his calculations: He believed that no engine could be had for pursuit nearer to Big Shanty than Kingston on the north, or Atlanta on the south, each about thirty miles distant. If the rebels pursued, toward Kingston the best they could do was to follow us on fleet horses, and the time, allowing for delay in starting and the state of the roads, could not well be short of three or four hours, by which time we ought to be out of reach, with all our work done. If they rode or sent back to Marietta (where we had lodged for the night, which would seem to be their best plan, that would take at least an hour; then a telegram to Atlanta could very soon start a train after us, but it would be forty or fifty miles behind, and long before it could come up bridges would be burned, the track and telegraph cut and the road completely demoralized. We expected to run on our regular time to Kingston, which would thus take about two hours, but to destroy the track at several places on the way, so with the local freight safely passed, hurry on to Oostenaula (or Resaca bridge, twenty-four miles further in just an hour more, burn that, and sweep on over the eleven bridges of the Chickamauga, and leaving them in flames also the one of the East-Tennessee road, over the same stream, pass by Chattanooga on the "Y" running over to the Memphis and Charleston road and press as rapidly as possible westward to Bridgeport, and on to Mitchel, wherever he might be. It will be seen that leaving out of account any accident to our train, and any difficulty in passing the trains we were to meet, our calculations were almost dead certainties. With two experienced engineers, and caution in running, accidents were not likely to occur; and Andrews trusted to his own marvelous address [illegible] as the result showed, to guard against any slow time in the matter of receiving orders from any trains met. On Friday, so far as human vision can now penetrate, these calculations would have worked out with the precision of a machine, and all the results indicated have followed. To-day there were new elements which were to task our powers to the utmost, but of these we as yet knew nothing.

THE WESTERN ATLANTIC OR GEORGIA STATE LINE RAILROAD.

All careful and prudent preparations were now made for a long run. A red flag placed on the last car showed that another train was behind, and served as a kind of silent excuse for being on the time of the morning mail. The engine was also carefully inspected by Knight, whose mechanical knowledge was most useful, and found to be in excellent working condition. It was thoroughly oiled. Then we moved leisurely onward until we came near Moon's station, where some workmen were engaged on the track, and the opportunity of getting necessary tools was too good to be lost. Brown sprang down and asked a man for a wedge pointed iron bar with which he was prying. The man gave it at once and Brown stepped back with his booty, but a little disappointed, for one of the bent, clawfooted bars for pulling out spikes would have been worth much more, but they had none. The bar taken was the only one of their tools that seemed likely to be of value, or more would have been borrowed—by force, if not otherwise.

As we went on Andrews cautioned his engineers not to run too fast, which they inclined to do; all of us would have relished more speed in this first part of the journey. But running on all southern roads in war times was slow; our train was not scheduled at over sixteen miles an hour. The road itself was exceedingly crooked, with abundance of short curves, and, having but light iron rails, was unfitted for high speed. We were anxious to get past the local freight that we might test the road's capabilities. Those on the engine were very much amused, as we ran by station after station, to see the passengers come up with their sachels in their hands, and then shrink back in dismay as we sped past without a sign of halting. But when by we would stop and cut the telegraph wire, so that no suspicions or inquiries could be sent ahead.

Thus we passed through Ackworth and Allatoona, and then stopping again to cut the wire, also endeavored to lift a rail. While we were sure that no train from Big Shanty could follow us, we wished also to make it difficult for one from Atlanta, if any should be sent from there, to run rapidly; and what was of equal importance, we did not wish the local freight to proceed southward after we met it to be turned back by any pursuers. A loosed rail is almost sure to throw an unsuspecting train from the track; and we put such an obstruction before each train that we met on this journey. Yet the process of taking up a rail, though we made much of it, was far from easy with the imperfect tools we possessed. A single tool—a bar constructed expressly for drawing out spikes—would have enabled us to baffle all pursuit. But this we did not have, and more than five minutes were consumed for each rail taken up, in battering out some spikes with our iron bar and afterward prying the remainder loose with handspikes and with the rail itself. This delay was of no great importance now, for we had a superfluity of time, but in the quick and terrible struggle further up the road, when seconds were decisive, it was far otherwise. The rails when lifted were carried away with us, and the break thus left was for a time a barrier to a train not supplied with track laying tools as absolute as a burnt bridge. The feeling of security after such obstruction was very delightful and not unwarranted. In no case did a pursuing train pass a place where we had torn up a rail in time to do us any damage.

There was an exultant sense of superiority while running along in the midst of our enemies in this manner, such as a man in a balloon might feel while drifting over hostile camps, or over the raging waves of the ocean. As long as all is well with his balloon the man need not care what takes place in the world below; and as long as our engine retained its power and the track was clear before us, we were in a similar state of security. But a knife blade thrust in the silk globe overhead, or the slightest tear in the delicate fabric will in a second take away the security of the man in the clouds. So the loosening of a bolt, or the breaking of a wheel would leave us powerless in the midst of our deadly enemies. It was such possibilities, always so near, that imparted thrilling interest to our passage through towns and fields, and woods in the heart of the enemy's country.

FIRES AND OTHER ACCIDENTS.

Two grain elevators, containing over 50,000 bushels of wheat, were destroyed by fire at Rock Rockford, D. T.

A Wabash passenger train ran into a freight near West Lebanon, Ind., Monday morning. Two persons were hurt, Mrs. L. M. Pettit, of Fort Wayne, and Mail Agent R. Helm.

Two stock trains arrived at St. Joseph, Mo., Friday evening with every animal frozen to death.

An itinerant ventriloquist and sleight-of-hand man calling himself Professor Henry, slipped on an icy sidewalk in Connellsville, Pa., and broke his neck.

An engine on the Union Pacific, drawing a train of ore down the mountain toward St. Ermo, Colo., Wednesday afternoon, became unmanageable, the air brakes were useless, and the train dashed down the slope for six miles at a sixty mile rate, jumping from the track at St. Elmo, instantly killing Engineer James Conner and Fireman M. Whaley, and wrecking locomotive and cars.

A falling building at Cadillac, Mich., killed James Converse and injured J. W. Boder perhaps fatally Friday.

INSIST ON THEIR DEMANDS.

Pennsylvania Employes Liable to Go Out Next Week.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 13.—General Manager Baldwin of the Pennsylvania company's system west of Pittsburg, has not yet replied to the demands of the railway employes. The latter manifest great restlessness, and Thursday night held another prolonged secret session at which, aside from more perfectly completing their organization, it was again resolved to strike on Wednesday next unless the demands for increased pay and other concessions were acceded to prior to that time. The men claim that fully 90 per cent., or 4,000 of their number are within their organization, and fully prepared for the conflict. It is learned that an effort is being made to interest the employes of the Pennsylvania railroad east of Pittsburg in the cause. So far this movement is meeting with success, and it is stated that if it becomes necessary to order a strike the entire Pennsylvania railroad system east and west of this city will be affected, and from 12,000 to 15,000 men thrown out of work. Another secret meeting of Pennsylvania company employes has been called, to which the Pennsylvania railroad employes have also been invited.

Gold in Wisconsin.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Jan. 13.—Specimens of gold which were found in Pierce county were exhibited in this city Thursday by W. W. Newell, who has been prospecting in various localities in Wisconsin. Mr. Newell, G. H. Nichols of Minneapolis, Col. William P. Dill of Prescott, and Charles Hawn of Rock Elm have formed a company called the Sand and Flour Gold company, and they are so well satisfied that gold exists in paying quantities in Pierce county that they have bought outright the land of ninety-three persons of Plum creek, near the village of Rock Elm.

THE RECORD OF CRIME.

While trying to break in at the door of a disreputable house in the suburbs of Providence, R. I., Charles Schneider was shot and killed by one of the female inmates.

Dr. Cross was hanged at Cork Tuesday for poisoning his wife in order that he might marry a younger woman.

At Amiston, Ala., R. H. Evans, a hotel-keeper, and W. R. Williams, one of the boarders, became involved in a quarrel, and in the exchange of pistol shots both were killed.

At Allegheney City, Pa., Thursday, Mrs. Mary Wilcox, a carpenter's wife, committed suicide by cutting her throat, thwarthing an attempt to save her life by tearing a bandage off and bleeding to death. She was in poor circumstances and killed herself, it is said, because her relatives refused to assist her.

Near Valparaiso, Ind., Thursday night, a snow-plow swept away an obstruction intended to wreck the east-bound Chicago & Grand Trunk passenger train, due at Lansing about 10 p. m. It is supposed that the object of the wreckers was robbery.

In the prisoners' pen of the court of general sessions at New York, Friday morning, Frederick Bennett cut his throat with a razor, and may not recover. He was waiting to be sentenced for highway robbery. The affair created intense excitement among the other prisoners.

Will Graduate and Then Go to Prison.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 16.—Judge Given passed sentence Saturday upon T. J. Jones and C. S. Porter, the young medical students who robbed the grave of Mrs. Claflin, of Mitchellville, about a month ago. They were sentenced to six months in the penitentiary and fined $50 upon their plea of guilty. As they are soon to be graduated, the court approved an appeal bond, and after graduation they will be taken to prison.

A Drunken Boy's Fatal Foolishness.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 16.—Sunday evening, in West Indianapolis, Edward Neimeyer, a 17-year-old boy, got drunk and began firing a revolver. Mary Benson, a passenger in a passing street car, was struck just below the left shoulder by a large bullet and received what will probably prove a fatal wound. Neimeyer was arrested and locked up.

Carlisle Retains His Seat.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 16.—Speaker Carlisle presented his reply to the case of Thobe, the contestant for his seat, Saturday, and with such effect that the committee refused to reopen the matter, three of the Republicans contenting themselves with not voting and the other three voting with the Democrats.

FARMERS' UNION.

The Farmers' Union met at Ellas Brown's, Friday evening, Jan. 13th. It was a pleasant evening, but very cold. There was a good attendance, and the program well carried out. The Question, "Resolved that Prohibition would be beneficial to the farming interests of Lenawee Co." was decided in favor of the affirmative. It was a question that all were deeply interested in, and both sides were ably defended. The next meeting was appointed at F. Davidson's, Friday evening, Jan. 27th, when the following program will be presented:

Music—Choir.
Dec.—Goodwin Conkling.
Reading—Lena VanNess.
Chip Basket—Hettie Cadmus.
Dialogue—Five Characters.
Song—Louesa Brown.
Essay—Rose Hendershot.
Question Box.
Inst. Music—Loana Davidson.

DEATH OF JOHN TREANOR.

From a recent issue of the South Bend Daily Tribune, we clip the following obituary notice of Mr. John Treanor. The deceased will be kindly remembered by many of our older residents. During the time he lived in Tecumseh he was universally esteemed as one of our most enterprising citizens. His death was caused by a paralytic stroke at the age of 74 years.

Mr. Treanor was born April 14th, 1814, in Tiron, county Armagh, Ireland, and came to America when 16 years of age, locating first in Bridgeport, Conn., where he learned the trade of saddlery and harness making, serving a full apprenticeship of four years. He remained in Bridgeport about nine years and then removed to New Philadelphia, Ohio, where he went into the harness making business with a brother, Daniel Treanor. There he dwelt a few years, was married and removing to Tecumseh, Mich, engaged in the same business there with B. J. Bidwell, a brother in-law of A. G. Cushing, of this city. They dissolved partnership after a successful business career of several years, and Mr Treanor then started in the drug business alone. He came to South Bend in 1855, and opened a drug store. Since that date he has continued to make his home here, and with the exception of two years spent in the south in cotton speculation soon after the war, has carried on the drug business in this city. He built and for a long time occupied the building where Bell's bazar was burned out a few days ago. Later he bought Good's opera house block in connection with Mr. Sam Good and erected the building adjoining it on the west, where he established his business and a residence in the upper floors. Mr. Treanor was a public spirited citizen, ever ready to assist in any good work and give aid to any progressive movement for the benefit of our growing city. He was a man of sterling integrity, and of generous, whole souled impulses that drew around him many devoted friends. He was at one time prominent in city and county politics, and was a candidate for the legislature at one time, at others for the office of county treasurer and sheriff, and though defeated, his party being in the minority, he polled a heavy vote. Mrs. Treanor died here in September 1885, and the surviving members of the family are Ed. Treanor, of Napa City, Cal.; Mrs. Alice Lintner and Sam, John and Charley Treanor, of this city.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 19, 1888.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Carrie Powers is spending this week in Adrian.

Henry Lovejoy of Adrian was in town last Monday on business.

The thermometers about the village ranged from 1 to 10 degrees below zero last Monday morning.

C. A. Rankin and M. W. Goodrich of Dundee were shaking hands with their Tecumseh friends last Saturday.

Franklin is the first town to settle with the County Treasurer. Town Treasurer Preston sent in the last of his quota on Monday.

The invitation to the Charity Ball at Adrian was a very unique affair. It was executed on one of Edison's latest inventions, the mimiograph.

Several young men from Tecumseh were lucky enough to get a "bid" to attend the leap year hop at Clinton last Thursday evening and enjoy the hospitality of the young ladies.

B. F. Graves will please accept our thanks for a copy of the Roster of the 4th annual encampment of the South-eastern G. A. R. association. Every old soldier should possess a copy.

Our temperance column is enlarged to two columns this week and appears on the inside pages. We shall follow this plan hereafter, as we can print more temperance matter without trenching upon our local columns.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Free Lance, published at Decatur, Ala., sent by the city authorities. Thousands of copies are sent all over the country by the city. That is the way they boom towns down South.

Services at the Universalist church next Sunday, Jan'y 23, as follows: In the morning, at 10:30, a sermon on "The Gift of a Day." Text: Luke, 4:24. In the evening, at 7 o'clock, by request a sermon on "Jacob's Dream and what it Teaches." All welcomed.

We are indebted to C. J. Moore for a copy of the Winthrop, Minn., News. It is a nine-column folio sheet, well printed and edited and has a big advertising patronage. The merchants of those booming western towns know how to advertise.

We have received a copy of the Oak Park Reporter, containing a lengthy "write up" of that thriving suberb of Chicago, in which La Mott Lovett's drug store has a prominent place. The old Tecumseh boys are prospering wherever they go.

A burning chimney at Henry Sweet's house last Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock caused the fire bell to be rung. No damage was done and the engine was not taken out. It was fortunate that it was only a chimney as a fire on that stormy night would have made fearful havoc among the houses in that section.

They are coming! Those maps of Tecumseh. They are not a picture nor a bird's-eye view, but correct, practical business maps, being drawn on a large scale, giving location, shops and size of lots, with owners' names. They will be of constant use for reference in every family, a never-failing source of interest to young people, and an educator for small children. They will be sold at a reasonable price by VINCENT WOOD.

Hon. G. P. Waring, chairman of the Prohibition County Committee, has called a County conference, to meet at Dean's Opera House in Adrian, on Wednesday next, Jan. 25th. There will be an open session of the committee at 10 A. M. At 1:30 P. M. Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert of New Jersey will give an address. The balance of the session will be devoted to arranging a plan of action for the local option campaign. In the evening Mr. Vibbert will address the conference on the saloon in politics.

Rev. George H. Vibbert of New Jersey will lecture in the Tecumseh opera house on Tuesday evening, Jan. 24th. Subject, "Public Opinion and Prohibition." He comes under the auspices of the Tecumseh W. C. T. U. Mr. Vibbert comes to us from Detroit, where he has been giving his popular lectures for a week. He is highly recommended as an earnest advocate of the Temperance cause. Everybody is cordially invited to come and hear him. Lecture to commence promptly at half past seven. Admission 10cts. Tickets to be had at the door.

Frank Tucker's Metropolitans played East Lynne Friday evening and Mrs. Partington Saturday to small houses, although the attendance on the latter evening was fair. The company is a strong one in both comedy and tragedy and the leading parts are especially well taken. Mr. Tucker's "best hold" is in Mrs. Partington and the audience were kept in a roar of laughter the entire evening by her droll sayings as well as in the efforts of both the deacon and the judge to secure the hand of that worthy woman in marriage. Young Ike was not slow by any means and came in for a good share of applause. The company will return here next fall and they should be greeted with a crowded house.

Bert Tribou of Detroit was at home over Sunday.

Pay for your HERALD in January and get the benefit of our reduced rates.

Chet. Haynes will move his family to Bay City where he is working at

T. C. Crane returned from an extended visit to New York State last Saturday.

E. L. Mills drove over from Adrian last Saturday and found it a fine day for a drive.

Miss Cora Jones started for Portland yesterday, where she will make her sister an extended visit.

W. L. Baxter, after spending several days at the old home, left for Battle Creek on the noon train to-day.

The County clerk has received the requisite number of names to require him to call a local option election.

Young man, engage your best girl for the old folks dance at once or your daddy is liable to get there ahead of you.

Thos. Adamson, our popular jeweler, has a new boarder in the family, a fine boy, who arrived yesterday morning.

A convention under the auspices of the Independent Forestry Commission will be held at Grand Rapids Jan. 26th and 27th. Gov. Luce will preside.

There was a fair turnout at the local option convention yesterday and much enthusiasm was manifested. We go to press too early to prepare a full report this week.

Salmon Crane died very suddenly Wednesday afternoon at the residence of his son, C. S. Crane, St. Louis, Mo. No particulars yet. The funeral will take place Saturday.

The largest car works in the world have lately removed from Urbana, Ohio, to Decatur, Alabama. The capital stock is $1,000,000 and 1,000 hands are employed. The boom continues in the new South.

A sleigh load of young and old folks from town attended a dance at Charlie Benedict's farm north of the village Tuesday night. About 40 couple were present and the fun was fast and furious until an early hour next morning.

A County local option convention was held yesterday at Dean's opera house in Adrian, and a Prohibition conference, called by Hon. G. P. Waring, will be held at the same place next week Wednesday, Jan. 25th.

Five bold hunters from this village shouldered their trusty guns and sallied forth in the country in quest of foxes last Tuesday. Nothing but foxes would satisfy their thirst for blood. But it didn't seem to be a good day for that variety of game as only one was bagged during the whole day.

Mr. J. W. Crane, late with the Tecumseh Creamery Co., has returned to his former residence in Adrian and taken the position of clerk at the Lawrence House. Mr. Crane's friends here will be interested in knowing that "J. W." has disposed of himself so well.

The winter ice crop is being harvested with serious results to the participants in this section. Last week Ed. Williamson carried his arm in a sling as the result of a bruise from the ice and now C. F. Skinner is limping around with a crushed foot, having had it jammed between large cakes of ice.

On Wednesday, Jan. 11th, at her mother's home, 598 Champlain St., Detroit, Miss Nellie Ream was united in marriage to Captain Edward Stevens. The bride's mother lived in Tecumseh years ago, her maiden name being Hattie Studledge. The old friends of the family will extend their good wishes and congratulations.

One of the most accomplished and plausible liars in the state is on or near the staff of the Elsie Sun. Among his latest efforts he says: "It is reported that the little daughter of Geo. Mercer is suffering from a live turtle in her stomach. It is said that last fall while playing with a turtle's egg she put it in her mouth and accidentally swallowed it. It has hatched and is steadily growing; it is already so large that it is perceptible on the outside.—Evening News.

An exceeding interesting article by Lily Higgin on "Modern English Artists," with portraits, appears in the February number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, giving just the information that all wish to have. Colonel C. Chaille-Long's "From the Suez Canal, Through Two Seas to the Equator," is important in view of the perennially interesting Eastern question. Then, too, there is "A Visit to Porto Alegre, Brazil," full of information and illustrations. Among the shorter contributions to this number may be mentioned "The Church of the Holy Sepulchre, Jerusalem," "Joan of Arc," "The Best of Countries," by Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, "Harrow School," "Hymns," "The Sacred Books of China," "Some Superstitions of the Synagogue," and others of interest and value. There is not much poetry in this number, but what there is is good, especially the sonnet, "In Fotheringay Castle," by Adelaide Cilley Waldron. The number closes, as usual, with a piece of sacred music.

Now is the time to pay up.

Four feet of snow in the Upper Peninsula makes the lumberman feel happy.

John A. Merritt, of Lockport, N. Y., was paying a brief visit at the old home last week.

The January Magazine of American contains a fine portrait of Prof. Samuel Dickey.

It is splendid sleighing now on all roads leading into Tecumseh. That is what all the farmers say.

Britton will indulge in a grand party on Washington's birthday. The invitations are already out, and they are all the gilt edge kind.

There will be a donation for the benefit of Rev. C. W. Dennis at the residence of Mrs. Sarah Morgan, Macon, Jan. 24th. All are cordially invited.

In the list of officers elected by the Baptist S. S. printed in the HERALD last week, the name of Spencer Lester as chorister was, through an oversight, left out.

Lenawee county is got to vote on prohibition. Now then, brother Applegate, which way does the wind blow down there? And how's the temperature?—Lansing Republican.

The storm last week in the Northwest was the severest in many years. At last accounts over 150 persons perished from the cold and the roll will doubtless be increased as the back settlements are heard from.

The M. E. Sunday School will hold a social at the residence of A. K. Waldron west of the village tomorrow evening. Those wishing to attend will be carried from the church in sleighs. It is intended to make this a leap year social.

The January WIDE AWAKE is the New Year's issue, a fine holiday number, delightfully pictorial, giving as it does a dozen of the beautiful pencil pictures of child life by the English pencil artist Warwick Brookes, together with an autograph letter of Mr. Gladstone's. Mr. Letherbrow's account of him is very interesting. But the most valuable article of the number is "The Foster Children of George Washington," the first of Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton's series, "Children of the White House." This has seventeen illustrations from the beautiful Stuart and Pine paintings and from old subjects and scenes in and around Mount Vernon. The various Presidential families are said to be greatly interested in this series, knowing how valuable it will remain for all time to come to young American people.

AN OLD FOLKS DANCE.

Tecumseh will indulge in an old folks dance, the old-fashioned music of thirty years ago will be revived and the old folks will again go through the ancient figures of the quadrille and cut a "pigeon wing" to its inspiring strains. It is many years since anything of the kind has been attempted in this village and it should be well patronized by the dancers of years ago as well as the rising generation. The program will be prepared to suit all classes and the younger folks are especially invited to participate.

The committee are making arrangements for a fine time. It will be held at the opera house about the first of February, (the exact date will be given next week,) and the invitations will be issued soon. Good music will be in attendance. Spectators' tickets 15 cents. Below is the committee of arrangements: M. E. Conklin, P. W. Adams, Geo. Marsden, Jas. Aten, L. P. Tribou, W. T. Eccles, Will Hayden, Chas. Patterson.

MACON GRANGE.

Macon Grange met in regular session Jan. 12th, with a fair attendance. Owing to the amount of work and the absence of some of the officers elect, it was thought best to postpone the installation of officers until the next regular meeting. After closing of Grange the adjourned meeting of stock association was called to order by the chairman, J. W. Baker. The meeting proceeded to elect a board of directors for the coming year which resulted as follows: J. W. Osborn, J. W. Baker, M. J. Martin, I. Osgood, M. Yates.

Macon Grange will meet in regular session on Thursday, Jan. 26th, at one o'clock P. M. sharp. In addition to installation of officers other important business will come before the meeting. It is hoped that all members will feel it their duty to be present and assist in this work. It is expected that P. W. Adams of Tecumseh will be present to talk. M. J. MARTIN Sec.

Life Insurance at Actual Cost.

Persons desirous of obtaining life insurance at actual cost, should write for circulars to the SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY, No. 243 Broadway, New York.

This Society claims that since its organization the cost to a member of middle age has been less than twelve dollars a year for each thousand dollars of insurance.

Now is the time to subscribe.

CLIPPINGS AND CONDENSATIONS.

Monday, February 20th, is special election day.

The Circuit Court has been adjourned until next Monday.

C. A. Conklin of Adrian, has secured a patent on a coffin fastener.

Scott Post of Blissfield will give a grand ball on February 22d.

Tecumseh is booked on the route of Frank Robbins's circus next season.

Revival meetings are in progress at the congregational church in Hudson.

Palmyra Grange is in a prosperous condition. It now has 162 members on its rolls.

Lenawee Co. ought to improve upon her former vote on the prohibition question.

Prosecutor Morgan appeared for the County in 229 criminal cases during the year 1887.

The annuel meeting of the County Agricultural Society will be held on Friday, Jan. 27th.

The young ladies of Blissfield will give a leap year party on Thursday evening, Jan. 26th.

The saloon keepers of Adrian have been seized with a sudden disposition to obey the law.

"Progressive anecdote" parties have struck Hudson. The person who tells the best story gets a prize.

Clinton's Leap Year party last week was a big success. To Clinton belongs the honor of starting the ball in this county.

Hudson village owns a full set of band instruments, and what they want now is a lot of musicians to blow the horns.

Bishop Harris will visit St. Michael's church at cambridge Junction, on the afternoon of Feb. 1st., and administer the right of confirmation.

Tecumseh is the banner town of the County on the local option question. Her petition contained 351 names. Rollin comes next with 331 names.

The State Dairyman's Association will hold its annual session in Adrian next month, February 13, 14 and 15, and a Farmers' Institute will be held in connection therewith.

The Addison Courier is bound to grow and flourish under the management of the new proprietor. Joe. will give the citizens of the northwest corner a good newspaper.

Don M. Dickinson was confirmed as Postmaster General on Monday. On Tuesday he attended the first cabinet meeting and by a singular coincidence he was just 41 years old on that day.

County Clerk Fleming has issued an official call for a special election on the local option question, to be held on Monday, Feb. 20th, 1888. Now let the campaign be pushed from this time until election.

Girls, take notice! The latest thing in Adrian is an anti-corset society, whose badge is a white ribbon, and every member of which solemnly, sacredly swears that he will never marry a woman who wears corsets. Of corset will require staying qualities to carry out such a purpose.—Morenci Observer.

Britton citizens are to petition for a change of the name of the post office from Balch to Britton, that being the name of the village. We do not understand why the office was not named Britton in the first place. There is no sense in having a railroad station one name and the post office another. Hope there will be a change.—Adrian Press.

The county clerk reports that a number of clergymen in the county, and one or more in the city, persistently violate the provisions of the marriage law, in not returning certificates within ten days after the ceremony was performed. Some have made no returns since the law went into effect, an offence to which an unpleasant penalty is fixed.

The editor of the Hudson Gazette, speaks a quiet word for himself as follows: "This being leap year, we commend to the notice of young ladies the many eligible young men of which Hudson boasts. They are for the most part, good looking, of fair business prospects, and but for their reticence would be living husbands now instead of lonely bachelors. Girls, here's your chance."

A practical revivalist preached out west from the text on "rendering unto Cæsar," requested all in the congregation who paid their debts to rise. The uprising was general. After the bad taken their seats, a call was made for those who didn't pay their debts, and one solitary individual arose, who explained that he was a country editor, and could not because the rest of the congregation was owing him on subscription. Ex.

There will be an eclipse of the moon to-morrow, Jan. 20th, beginning at 9 27 P. M. The moon enters the earth's shadow before sunset, but when the total eclipse begins it will be dark enough to watch its progress. The moon will not be entirely lost to sight when totally immersed in the earth's dark shadow. She will shine faintly with a lurid, copper colored light, thus giving an unearthly aspect to the surrounding landscape.

OBITUARY.

Died Dec. 30th, of heart disease, age.

Deceased was born in Columbia Co., N. Y., April 10th, 1810. His parents moved from there to Lucas County, O., [illegible] where they resided until he reached the years of manhood and was married to Lucy Sacket.

Soon after his marriage he removed to Ohio, then the far west and an unbroken wilderness. He endured the trials and privations of pioneer life with true pioneer spirit. Many readers of this sketch will remember the keen zest with which he used to relate stories of pioneer life. His wife being of frail constitution the hardships of pioneer life proved too hard for her, and in '40 she died leaving two helpless little girls, one a mere infant. A little son had died shortly before his mother. In the year 1841 he married Permelia Raymond, of Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich., whom he took to his home in Ohio, to care for his motherless little ones and help him earn a home and fortune; well has she performed both. Four children blessed this union, all of whom, with his aged companion, survive him.

In 1858 he moved from Ohio to Raisin, purchasing the homestead of his wife's father, which he still owned at the time of his death, it being the home of his youngest daughter, Mrs. Jennie Macham.

In 1886 he moved from Raisin to Tecumseh, purchasing the farm adjoining A. D. Hall's, on the north. In 1864 he met with the second great trial of his life, losing by death his loved and favorite child, Mrs. Geraldine Lovejoy.

By economy and good management he added to his farms until he had acquired a good competence, and as old age began to creep upon him he gave the active management of his business to his younger son Brookwell. He built a new house on a part of the farm just west of A. D. Hall's, and with his wife took up their abode there to spend the remainder of their lives in the comfort and ease they had so justly earned.

To know Uncle John, as he was familiarly called, was to love and respect him, for he was a man of genial character and strong affections. His home always stood with open doors of welcome, and guests were always sure of generous-hearted hospitality; but in the home circle he was best known and loved. His children and grand-children were a never failing source of comfort and happiness. Many times during his last illness did he express to neighbors his loving appreciation of his children.

A year ago the strong constitution began to give way and when the family physician was called he pronounced the ailment heart disease and gave the family no hope of ultimate recovery. He however rallied as warm weather advanced and was able to ride about to visit his children and pursue his favorite pastime, fishing. As cold weather approached he again began to fail, and feeling that his time was short he expressed a great desire to see a sister who resided in Kansas. She was notified; also his eldest daughter, Mrs. Mary Bailey of Alma, Mich., was telegraphed. They both arrived and the daughter took the entire charge of him during the days, being relieved nights by the other children and kind neighbors. His love of old customs was so strong that he insisted upon the children and grand-children coming home to celebrate the Christmas festivities. They went, but it was a sad day, for he, as well as they, realized it was the last Christmas together. After this he ceased to inquire for the little ones, but gradually grew worse until Friday morning Dec. 30th, when surrounded by weeping children, the spirit took its flight; the great heart ceased to beat; and all that remained of Uncle John Rector was inanimate clay.

His funeral was attended Jan. 1st, at the Presbyterian church, Rev. W. H. Babbitt officiating. The remains were placed in the vault, and the week following were interred in the cemetery at Raisin. "Dust to dust, ashes to ashes."

Killed by a Falling Shed.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Friday night the shed attached to the store of John M. Everett, at Gardinerville, nine miles south of here, becoming unsafe by reason of the snow on the roof, a number of men undertook to brace it up, when it suddenly gave way, killing three and injuring seven. Those killed were David Wright, a carpenter, an old resident of the neighborhood; John Tuttell and David Kelly. One or two of those injured are not likely to recover.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, which the unparalleled demand with which it meets, speaks at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Boils, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin, and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people of the United States, and our confidence in its efficacy is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the report. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

PLAIN WORDS ON PROHIBITION.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

During the summer of 1852 I paid a visit to the Hon. Neal Dow in Portland, the beautiful city on Casco Bay, and my chief object was not only to see the honored father of the new prohibitory law, but to inspect for myself its practical workings. They surpassed my most sanguine expectations, and I found Portland without an open dram shop or distillery. During the thirty-five years that have elapsed since that time, the cause of Prohibition has had varying fortunes, but has never had more vigor in its bones or strength in its ten fingers than it has to-day. Let me jot down rapidly some of the impressions I have gained during my long practical acquaintance and co-operation with the prohibitory movement.

1. The arguments in favor of the legal suppression of the dram-shop have stood the test of time. It is the most logical method of dealing with a most stupendous moral, social and political evil. The saloon is the enemy of the home, the enemy of the laboring classes, the enemy of the Christian church, the enemy of public order, the enemy of the commonwealth. As such, the commonwealth has a clear right to deal with it. The right to restrict by excise laws (which are unfortunately called "license laws") implies the right to suppress it entirely, as a public nuisance. Heavy taxation of grog selling has practically reduced its volume in some localities, but the right place to apply the knife to the wolf's tail is close behind the ears. "Salus populi est suprema lex" is a sound maxim—the safety of the people is the first aim and object of all righteous law.

2. Logical and admirable and desirable as prohibitory statutes are, yet it must be remembered that they have their limitations. The moment that they become "sumptuary laws" they are out of joint with justice and the public conscience. If they attempted to prescribe what every man should eat or drink, or even to forbid any man to drink an intoxicant in his own dwelling, they would not stand a month; we cannot enforce such laws, and no prohibitory legislation thus far has been "sumptuary," although the pouring traffic has made it as such for their own purposes. The necessary limitations of a law for the suppression of tippling houses, which was the title of Neal Dow's original Maine law, were well illustrated in a visit which I made to Portland three years ago. On two successive evenings I scoured the back streets, wharves and saloons of the city but could discover no shop or saloon in which intoxicants were exposed for sale. The clerk of the Falmouth House told me there were none such. He was right. One afternoon the sheriff, a thorough prohibitionist, summoned me to come to the basement of the City Hall and witness the summary destruction of a large number of barrels and hogsheads of liquor which had been seized for confiscation. I went to the City Hall and had a good view of a traffic that was gone for sore eyes. After the execution was over I asked him how many arrests for drunkenness there had been during the last year. He replied that they amounted to no less than 140 in a population of thirty-eight thousand. His explanation was this: A part of the drunkenness had been caused by liquor procured, under false pretenses, from the city agent, who was empowered to supply alcoholic liquors "for medicinal, chemical or sacramental purposes." Another portion had been produced by intoxicants sold "on the sly" at various places which eluded the utmost diligence of the authorities. For, as the sheriff well said, "Laws against theft do not prevent all stealing and burglaries, neither can our laws against dram shops break up all secret liquor selling." A prevalent evil in Portland was the consumption of liquor in private dwellings and secret places. No city law can prevent this; for the authorities are only permitted to seize and destroy liquors which are brought into the city for public or secret sale. The sheriff had no authority to enter a private dwelling and forbid the use of an intoxicant. The conclusions I drew from my Portland experience were these: The best prohibitory enactments have their limitations and therefore we shall be fools if we rely entirely on civil law and neglect to employ moral agencies to remove the drinking usages. Just as soon neglect to teach the Eighth Commandment and rely on policemen and constables to prevent all kinds of theft. A prohibitionist who is not a moral-suasionist, is an idiot.

It cannot be rung too often or too loudly into the popular ear that no oppressive laws can be enacted or enforced unless there is a stiff public sentiment behind them. "Why spend time and money in issuing all these Sunday school books and these tracts and volumes in favor of total abstinence? Shut up the saloons and the job is done." So said a zealous political prohibitionist to me in our Temperance Publication House in New York. "Yes my good friend, but how are we going to get the job done unless we educate the hearts and consciences of people against the satanic saloon? If we do nothing to remove the drinking usages, they will, by-and-by, put the prohibitory statutes but would sweep down all legal barriers like bullrushes in a cataract. Legal action and personal suasion of men's consciences must go hand in hand. No bird can rise on one wing; no side-wheel steamer can be driven by a single wheel. God never intended that his moral and spiritual agencies should be ignored, or that the most colossal sin should be fought by the single hands of the magistrate and policeman. Brother prohibitionists, without God we can do nothing; we need a fresh infusion of spiritual power into all our machinery of reform.

4. We must not split asunder on any imaginary conflict between local prohibition (sometimes called "local option") and prohibition in the lump, by enactments covering a whole state. Practically the success of prohibition depends upon public sentiment in each locality. In New Hampshire a general State law is made a dead letter over much of the State by a weak public conscience. In Atlanta, Ga., a sharp-edged local suppression act has achieved the superb success of shutting up every bar room in a city of 65,000 inhabitants! Who cares for names? Let us have the solid substance itself.

5. There is no cause for discouragement because the proposal to incorporate prohibition in a State Constitution has been defeated in Michigan, Texas and Tennessee. It is not essential that the principle be engrafted into a constitution if it is put on the statute books and well enforced. Neither murder, theft, adultery, arson or any other particular crime is forbidden in state constitutions; and even if we put a prohibitory clause into a constitution it is powerless without legislative statutes to punish dram-selling. My own private judgment is for letting constitutions alone and for aiming at strong suppressive laws against the saloon and the distillery with all the backbone of public sentiment that we can put behind them.

6. Finally, thirty-five years of labor for saloon suppression has taught me that public opinion is the fulcrum on which our movement turns; and to secure that we must welcome the aid of men and women of all creeds and political parties. Total abstinence from buying and drinking intoxicants must go hand in hand with prohibition of selling intoxicants. To fight appetite and aversion and fashion we require faith, patience, hard work, hard praying and hard voting. But this country is the battle-ground for the world's salvation, so sic the Almighty King whose "holy arm will get him the victory."

An Impromptu Proposition.

Nicodemus, I tell thee, the above would apply to the "woman who could see her husband staggering home drunkenness without a pang of grief." Many a woman becomes prematurely aged and hagged by reason of intemperate indulgence. What a pity that such should not know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will restore their organs to a normal state, and make them youthful and beautiful once more! Dr. Pierce's is when the daughters are peculiarly liable to the "Prescription," is a sovereign remedy. It is the only medicine sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

D. Woodward, accompanied by estimable wife, left last Thursday for the east where they will visit old friends. Dave will also attend the great horticultural meeting at Rochester.

D. H. Silver's auction called together a large crowd of people, with standing the severity of the weather, many coming from abroad. The sale proved very satisfactory, aggregating about $1000,00.

Mrs. Mary Bruce, who has been spending some months in Kansas, looking after her interests there, returned home Friday night.

Miss Calista Brown left the first of the week for Saginaw City to spend some time with her aunt, Mrs. Barton Lazell.

David Woodard and Geo. Runyan returned from the Grand Chapter meeting at Grand Rapids last Thursday morning. They report a very pleasant session.

John J. White has been suffering from an attack of inflamation of the lungs for several days but is now on the gain. He feels it a bad time for him to be sick as he is terribly rushed with work.

Leon Clark, who has been quite sick, is doing nicely now.

Will J. Kies and John Freeman of Tecumseh, were in town Sunday.

A. B. VanDeMark and Frank Woodward spent Monday at the county seat.

Will Dorr left Monday for East Saginaw to the Grand Lodge of F. & A. M. He will represent Clinton Lodge, No. 175, as D. Woodward the W. M. is east.

Munson R. King, while doing his chores Sunday morning, was taken with a severe chill lasting two hours. Doctor Waite was summoned and found him suffering from an acute attack of Pneumonia, both lungs being involved. While it is hoped he will recover he is at present very sick.

Chris. Smith's youngest child fell out of a chair a few days since, and for a time they thought its collar bone was broken; upon examination it was found fortunately to be only bruised.

Chas. Minnie, representing the Jackson Cracker Co. was in town Tuesday.

J. S. Kies has gone on a long trip for the Woolen Mill.

Chas. S. Burroughs visited Jackson and Albion Monday and Tuesday of this week on business connected with his popular remedies, Crescent Cough Cure and Pills.

At a meeting of the school Board Saturday the resignation of Prof. Travis was presented and finally accepted to take effect immediately.

Until a new Superintendent for the schools is secured, Miss Laura Haggert will act in that capacity. The board fortunately were able to secure Mary Cummins to act as Assistant, so that there will be no interruption.

Selden Plumb, an old Clinton boy who is now traveling for a Cleveland Stove Co., was in town over Sunday. He combined pleasure with business, calling on many of his old friends. He left Tuesday noon for Lansing and other points. His route comprises a portion of Indiana and Michigan, so that we shall see him often.

Geo. Field of Tecumseh, sojourned with friends here from Saturday until Monday.

S. C. Stacy of the HERALD was in town Friday last.

Miss Josephine Severance had a very narrow escape from severe injury last Friday morning. While coming to town her horse became frightened and ran. She being unable to hold it, passing up Chicago street she undertook to turn it up Jackson street; in doing so collided with the lamp post at the corner, demolishing both the post and cutter. She was thrown out in the snow but not injured in the least. The horse ran in back of Freese's store; save a few scratches the horse was not hurt.

Relative to current reports, in this community with reference to school matters, "The School Board have, after careful investigation, found nothing derogatory to the character of any teacher or pupil in the school."

ONSTED ODDS.

Splendid sleighing.

Farmers are very busy getting out wood and logs on this good sleding.

Geo. Bennett and wife of Brown Co., Dakota, are visiting at their brother John's at present.

Prayer meeting at A. Townsend's last Saturday evening.

Henry Powell is quite poorly at present.

Henry Wood, our school teacher, has moved into Mrs. Caroline Stoddard's new house on Secor street.

The other day as George Randolph was a cording a straw stack, on a ladder with a hay knife in his hand for the purpose of cutting down a portion of the stack, the ladder slipped, letting Mr. Randolph suddenly to the ground and causing his head to come in contact with the knife, cutting through his cap and making a severe wound in the side of his head, cutting clear to the skull bone. The wound was immediately dressed and without doubt, will soon be healed up.

As Norris Morey was cutting wood last week he gave his foot a severe blow, instead of the wood, which laid the foot open to quite an extent, and will give Mr. Morey plenty of time to read the papers and get posted up on the tariff issue.

Postmaster Glenn has got his ice house full of that luxury and so intends to keep coal next summer if it is an election year.

A bran new girl at Mr. and Mrs Curtis and Tommy's and Ida's face are illuminated with smiles.

Will Daniels limps around with a cane since that 42 inch stave dropped and lit on his instep.

A party of young people from this vicinity drove out to the residence of Henry Howes in Fairfield, last Friday to surprise that gentleman and family as they had previously lived in this locality. A good time was had while there, and the party returned the next day.

The young people indulge in a dance now and then these nice evenings.

Mr. Local Option is loitering around town at present, and rumor says that he will move into the village on Feb. 20th and open up a general business on the first of May next.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Halsted of East Rome, visited at M. Aldrich's last Sunday.

Mrs. Albert Townsend is making a two week's visit with Rollin friends.

Frank Pratt and family were guests of A. P. Onsted and family on Sunday last.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

F. G. Florance started for Detroit Thursday morning of last week, and after a pleasant visit with his friends, and his business transacted, he boarded the cars and returned home the Friday following.

Dr. Begel made a business trip to Toledo last Friday. Doc reports things booming in Toledo and natural gas running high.

A pleasant surprise was given at the residence of H. H. Osgood last Friday night. It is reported that 100 were present and a "high old time" was the result.

Miss Mamie Duboise made Nettie Barrett a visit the latter part of last week.

Dexter Still killed a fine steer for A. H. Kelley one day last week. Now if Al. don't get fat it won't be his fault.

W. Cox has got the art of eating candy down fine at last. He carries eight teeth in his pocket with the candy, and at his bidding the teeth grind the same so fine as to be easily swallowed. We will probably have an interview with Mr. Cox soon, and if we are convinced that the new method is any help to the system, you will see us marching in a direct route to the dentist's office. Bill's a genius, you bet.

We noticed W. E. Wilson going home last Monday with a new carriage on his sleighs. It is a nice one, but we cannot see the advisability of buying a new buggy during leap year.

A meeting was held in the new church last Sunday evening and judging from the size of the congregation we are happy to say we have concluded that all the people in this town are not heathens. Good for Holloway!

We hear it reported that a thing went with one of his relatives from here to Adrian last Saturday to sell some fur, of which he had a large stock. Therefore, after an elapse of two whole days, his parents living in Deerfield became worried that he had been murdered for his money and sent out three searchers to look for the carcass. Had he not been found with his relatives near here there is no doubt they would have been in Pontiac by the time this reaches our readers. Now, Jay, take a little of our good advice, and after this return to your parents before dark.

Yours Resp'y, L. C.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Fine sleighing and the best of winter weather.

Marcie Kelley is very sick at this writing with inflammation on the lungs.

Jesse Potter and wife attended the Rinn Cheever wedding at Brighton on Wednesday evening of last week.

Several couples of the young folks took a sleigh ride one evening last week and spent three or four hours in Adrian indulging in an oyster supper.

Mrs John Arner went to Dundee on Thursday of last week, to attend the funeral of her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. McNeil, who had been a great sufferer with dropsy for several weeks.

R. J. W. Bowen, of Tecumseh, was in the village last week, working up the interests of the C. T. L. from Tecumseh to Ridgeway and connect with the local line here. The prospects are very good that the scheme will work.

A company of little folks took Master Bertie Cadmus by surprise one evening last week, and had a very pleasant time.

A gang of hands are getting out ship timber on W. P. Cadmus' wood lot.

A large company of friends took Chauncey Dibble's quiet home by surprise one evening last week and enjoyed a pleasant time. Several from this village who were invited to participate were unavoidably detained at home, but wish for Mr. Dibble and family a long and happy life.

We have been informed by one of the Miller Band that they are making preparations to give an entertainment at Cottage Hall in the near future. Full particulars and programme will appear in due time.

The attendance at the entertainment given by the L. C. S. at Cottage Hall, on Friday evening last, was as usual large. The exercises were opened by a piece of music by the Miller Brass Band, followed by prayer by Rev. W. H. Benton. Little Fern VanDuzer then gave one of her fine solos, Susie Miller a recitation, and Jared Van Vleet a mouth organ solo with organ accompaniment. A select reading by T. H. Temple produced much laughter from the audience. Rose Hendershot then recited a choice selection with much credit. Mrs. Sarah Rappleye recited "Rock me to sleep, mother," responded to by Mrs. W. R. Wilson. Fern Van Duser sang "Rock-a-bye Baby," Mrs. F. E. Pocklington read a selection. R. J. W. Bowen furnished a violin solo, with organ accompaniment by Rose Easlick. They were enthusiastically encored and responded with another fine selection. The charade, "Independent," was well rendered each one playing his part with the desired effect. The exercises were closed by a quartette by the Millers. The entire program was carried out successfully and all vacancies filled in very nicely. The society realized $10.70, for which they extend a vote of thanks to all taking part, especially to the Miller Band and Mr. Bowen. Much credit is due the former for their musical efforts, when it is remembered that it is less than four months since they began playing as a band.

The L. C. S. will give a box social at the home of Mrs. H. J. Williams, next week Friday evening. The Gentlemen are respectfully requested to furnish the boxes with eatables sufficient for two, and the ladies are invited to do the buying the boxes will be sold at 25 cents a piece and it is hoped that the gentlemen will let the ladies see that they can furnish a variety of choice boxes. Some of the boys are afraid that the girls will take a back seat, and wont pay, but we will venture that the girls will do their part if the boys do theirs. It is hoped everybody will take an active part, and make it a lively and pleasant time.

BY ORDER OF COM.

Card of Thanks.

I desire to express my thanks through the columns of the HERALD to the people of Macon for the kindness, and their ministrations to my support during my labors among them as a minister of the Gospel. The many warm friendships which have grown out of Christian labor and fellowship will never be forgotten. With enmity toward no one, and charity for all, I close a pastorate of two years and 9 mos., hoping that the effort has not been lost, but that much good be realized. I remain yours truly,

C. W. DENNIS.

I have not used all of one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget. I procured a bottle, and since the first day's use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with Boston Journal.

This is splendid weather for tobogganing.

FRANK ROBBINS'S SHOW.

The following article, clipped from the New York Sun, will doubtless be of interest to many of our readers, Frank's big show will visit Tecumseh this season.

"I suppose," said a man who is pretty well acquainted with Frank Robbins, the winter circus manager and owner, that very few people in and out of the show business know how Robbins came to follow the white tents. His father, Dr. Frank Robbins, was a druggist in a little Indiana town when Frank A. was born, about thirty one years ago. Like many another country lad, he ran away with the first circus that put up its tents in town. He was hardly fifteen then. The show was Hemming, Cooper & Whitney's—an old timer. Robbins went away with them as lemonade boy, and for nine years following he sold pink lemonade, and every other kind of lemonade, with every circus traveling.

"With this experience gained on salary he felt himself confident to embark for himself, so he rented the candy and lemonade privileges with the Aullman Bros. & Hamilton circus, and bought a horse and wagon to haul the fixtures in. But the summer of 1880 was not a good one for pink lemonade, and Robbins closed the season something of a loser. It was then that chance threw in his way the foundation of a venture that, humble enough then, has since brought to him a competence. In the winter of 1866, the building of a railroad depot left a number of wagons belonging to a stage line for sale cheap. Robbins bought five of them, and to them added an old Concord coach that was honored by the title of a tally-ho. This he made to serve him in a triple capacity of band wagon, ticket wagon, and passenger wagon. To get performers the exercise of further ingenuity was needed, so in return for the lemonade privileges he engaged a troupe of performing dogs and monkeys, and to another person he agreed to give a percentage of the profits on condition that that person contribute to the show a pair of performing ponies and two horses and a band wagon, the latter to double, as they say on the stage, as a bill wagon. Then a little ready money was necessary. He paid $110 for two horses, and finally hired harness for the tally-ho and the other wagons. Thus uniquely organized, numbering not more than thirty people altogether, and with some of these interested in the profits, the Frank A. Robbins show gave its first exhibition May 6, 1881.

"The necessity of economizing at that particular time even led Robbins to cut with his own hands the poles necessary to hold up the canvass. He was always a good sportsman, and his foraging in the Northern woods came into play. His tent was then only 60 feet in diameter. Somehow or other he prospered. Now when he is on the road he uses twenty times as much canvass, and doesn't carry any wagons either, but over 2,000 feet of railroad cars, to transport his outfit."

HELP FOR THE WOOLEN WORKER

The following is taken from the Journal of United Labor and is the most genteel bit of sarcasm we have seen in a long time.

Among the many plausible schemes for the benefit of workingmen is that of the President of the Philadelphia Textile Association. Mr. Search says that the woolen manufacturers are losing money, and that Congress must do something for them or wages must go down. He suggests that duties on woolens must be raised. The necessity of cutting wages would be extremely painful to the manufacturers, but they must have help some way and that way, he hints, is for Congress to put some money where the manufacturers can get it and pay it over to the workmen.

We do not mean to cast a doubt on the disinterested devotion of manufacturers to their employees, especially of this class we simply suggest that Congress devise some way of conveying the money direct to the workmen themselves. It would be more direct, and save troubling the bosses.

The workm[illegible] had some little experience [illegible] help through the method [illegible] by Mr. Search, and have not [illegible] cases, found it thoroughly reliable. Doubtless this was due to the long and devious route the money had to travel. We must believe so. So much has been done by manufacturers for workingmen, the wonder is that labor on its part has not long since owned the manufacturers. That labor has not reversed existing conditions goes to prove its impenetrable stupidity. To-day labor might and ought to have been one gigantic billionaire had it improved the opportunity offered, yes, piled upon it.

This winter weather cannot well be improved upon.

CHAPTER V.

At length we reached the Etowah river and safely passed over the great bridge at that point. No stop was made, though the first serious cause for anxiety was here visible. Hitherto every thing had worked exactly as we had calculated, and our confidence in our leader and in final success was correspondingly increased; but on a side track which connected with a little branch road that ran up the river about five miles to the Etowah iron works and rolling mills, there stood a locomotive! It was but a short distance from us, and the smoke from the funnel showed too plainly that it was ready for work, thus constituting an element of the most dangerous character which had not been embraced in our calculations. It was named the Yonah—a private engine used by the owners of the works for their own purposes. Thoroughly as Andrews had explored the road, he had no knowledge of its existence until the moment when he saw it standing on the side track not a dozen yards away, and looking as if it was ready to enter upon a race with our General on equal terms. It was still thirteen miles to Kingston, and the enemy, if there was any direct pursuit, would be able to get an engine there much sooner than we had supposed possible. Several men were gathered about it but not enough to make an assault seem very formidable to our party. At the first sight, Knight said to Andrews, "We had better destroy that and the big bridge," but Andrews refused with the remark, "It won't make any difference."

Nearly all critics of the expedition who knew of the presence of this locomotive—for a long time I did not, as I was shut up in the box car—are disposed to think that here Andrews made a most unaccountable mistake. But this is far from certain.

It must be remembered that the burning of this bridge formed no part of Andrews' original plan, and could have accomplished nothing more toward the furthering of Mitchel's plans than the burning of the Oostenaula bridge. The local freight train was now due, and if it came in sight while we were engaged in destroying the Yonah or the bridge, and getting the alarm, as would be almost inevitable under the circumstances, should get away from us and run back to Kingston, or should run on us and cause a wreck, our situation would be far worse than with this engine left behind us. But even if we could be assured that the local would not come, but remain for us at Kingston, still the attack here would alarm the enemy, and we would be followed from this point as readily as from Big Shanty, an eighteen miles further up the road. It would be but little more than an hour's gallop to Kingston, where a train for pursuit would surely be found. The capture at Big Shanty assured us of a longer start, under any circumstances than seemed possible if we stopped to strike a blow here.

Leaving the engine and bridge behind, we glided on through Cartersville, a town of considerable size, where there were many disappointed passengers on the platform, and continued without incident until we reached Cass station. The town of Cassville is some distance from the railroad, but the station was important for us as the regular place for taking on wood and water. Here we stopped and began to wood up. William Russel, the tender, was naturally curious about the appearance of such a small train running on the time of the morning mail, with no passengers and none of the regular hands. Here Andrews told a most adroit and carefully planned story, with enough of foundation to make it probable. He claimed to have been sent by Gen. Beauregard, who was in desperate straits for ammunition, to impress a train, have it loaded with powder and run it through at lightning speed. Had he been pressed more closely, he could have produced passes proving himself worthy of belief. But it was not necessary to go so far. The very appearance of Andrews, tall, commanding and perfectly self-possessed, speaking like one who had long been accustomed to authority, was so much like the ideal southern officer that Russel's credence was won at once. He knew very well that after such a battle as Pittsburg Landing it was natural that powder should be scarce, and if it did not come at once what more natural than to send for it? Seeing the impression that he had made, Andrews, who, of course, did not work at throwing on wood, but left that to his companions, asked if he could not be supplied with a schedule of the road, as it might be useful. Russel, in his patriotic fervor, took down and handed out his own schedule, saying that he would "send his shirt to Beauregard" if the latter wanted it. When asked afterward if he did not suspect a man who made such an unreasonable demand he answered: "No; I would as soon have suspected Jefferson Davis himself as one who talked with the assurance that Andrews did."

We were now within seven miles of Kingston, resupplied with wood and water, without having met the slightest hindrance and with a full schedule of the road. But at Kingston we had more reason to apprehend danger than anywhere else along the route. A branch road from Rome connected there with the main track, and the morning train from that town would be awaiting our arrival. This, with the local freight which we hoped to meet and the complicated arrangement of the switches, would constitute no small obstacle to our onward progress. The real difficulties surpassed expectations. Andrews had made himself familiar with the minutest working of the road at this point, as also at Dalton and Chattanooga, and we would soon be able to see how he would overcome the hindrances in his way.

We reached Kingston a little ahead of time, and some showed us that the local freight had not yet arrived. Without the slightest hesitation Andrews ran a few hundred yards past the station and ordered the switch tender to arrange the switch so as to throw us on the side track; then we backed out on it, stopping on the west side of the station, and almost directly alongside of the Rome passenger train, then lying on its own track, which joined the main line still further north. This train was expecting the coming of Fuller's mail, and of course the arrival of our partial train in the place of the one they were expecting was a matter of the greatest interest to them. The engineer stepped over to our locomotive and said, with an oath:

"How is this? What's up? Heres their engine with none of their men on board."

Fortunately Andrews was just at hand and promptly replied, "I have taken this train by government authority to run ammunition through to Gen. Beauregard, who must have it at once."

He waved his hand toward the car in which we were shut up (representing the powder), and they inquired no further in that direction, but simply asked when the passenger train would be along. Andrews responded indifferently that he could not tell exactly, but supposed it would not be a great while, as they were getting out another train when he left Atlanta. With this cold comfort they were obliged to be contented, and Andrews, leaving the engine in care of his three comrades, went into the telegraph office, which was on the side of the depot next us, and asked, "What is the matter with the local freight, that it is not here?" He was shown a telegraph dispatch for Fuller, ordering him to wait at this point for its coming—an indication that it was not very far away. This was the only information vouchsafed to us by the management of the road during the whole of that eventful day!

Andrews returned to his engine, and stood there, or walked about on the end of the platform near by during the tedious moments of waiting. He did not seek to enter into conversation with any one, but quietly answered any questions asked. He appeared abstracted and a little anxious, as was natural for one running an express ammunition train, on which the safety of an army might depend. It was fortunate that his real and assumed characters were so much in harmony.

Brown, Knight and Wilson attended to their engine, seeing that all was in good order with a reasonable head of steam, and refrained, as far as they could, from any kind of conversation, answering all demands in monosyllables. Their position during this enforced stop was embarrassing, but far less painful than ours in the box car. We could hear low mutterings outside, we knew that we were at a station, and alongside another train, and could hear the tread of feet; but we could not learn why we did not press on. A thousand conjectures will spring up at such times; and the possibilities of our situation were ample enough for all kinds of imagining. We had a tolerably high estimate of our fighting power, and did not doubt that we could capture any ordinary train, or the usual crowd around a village station. But to be shut up in the dark, while—for aught we knew—the enemy might be concentrating an overwhelming force against us, was exceedingly trying, and put the implicit confidence we had in our leader to a very severe test. There was no precaution Andrews had neglected—probably because he trusted so fully in his own marvelous genius—but the need of which was felt keenly afterward. No lieutenant was appointed. One who could have taken charge of the men, leaving Andrews free to plan, and give general directions would have been a support to us now and a help to all of us later. With George D. Wilson or some other of the soldiers as authorized second, the force would have been in better fighting trim, and, what is of still more importance, Andrews would have felt more free to order the capture of any pursuing train. But at present we had nothing to do but wait till the road was cleared for us.

Before suspense became intolerable the whistle of an approaching train was heard, and the local freight rumbled up to the eastern side of the depot and stopped on the main track. Andrews made haste to begin the inevitable conversation. He went over and spoke to the conductor, telling him to pull his train, which was quite long, on down the road so that we might get out of the switch and proceed on our way, adding the same powder story. This conductor saw that Andrews was treated with marked deference by the people about the station, and did not hesitate to believe his story and obey the order. But before he had moved his train Andrews noticed a red flag on the hind car, and at once exclaimed, "What does this mean? I am ordered to get this powder through to Beauregard at the earliest possible moment, and now you are signaling for another train on the track!" No doubt Andrews felt all the vexation he expressed. The man said he was very sorry, but it could not be helped; and then he gave the reason, which was a startling piece of intelligence. Mitchel had captured Huntsville and was said to be advancing eastward toward Chattanooga by forced marches; and as they had no force to resist him, they were running everything out of Chattanooga, and had put a large extra train on the track to get the rolling stock, as well as the goods, out of the way. Andrews thanked him for the information, and told him to go a long way down the road so that the extra would have room enough to get by, adding, "I must be off the very first minute that is possible." The conductor made no objection, but asked, "What will you do about Mitchel at Huntsville?" Andrews replied: "I do not believe the story. Mitchel would not be fool enough to run down there, but if he is, Beauregard will soon sweep him out of the road. At any rate I have my orders." The train was pulled down the road, and the tedious process of waiting continued.

CHAPTER VI.

PURSUED.

While the moments are dragging their leaden weight along as the three trains rest on separate tracks at Kingston, it may be well to narrate the experiences of those whose engine was unceremoniously wrested from them at Big Shanty. We had counted on a great commotion and excitement following the seizure, and in this we were fully warranted; but we also believed that for some little time no one would know what to do. In this we were mistaken. The absence of a telegraph office or engine, or even of any horses, did utterly confound the great majority; but a fortunate mistake on the part of one man served the Confederate cause better than the deepest calculation could have done; to this gave rise to the thrilling railroad chase that followed. Conductor Fuller, Engineer Cain and the foreman of the road machine shops, Mr. Anthony Murphy, sat down to the breakfast table not far apart. Before they had tasted a mouthful, however, the sound of escaping steam, the loud whir of the wheels on the track and the outcry that rose in a moment from guards and camp, brought them and all the breakfasters to their feet. By this time the locomotive had started, and Fuller and Murphy, with loud exclamations about the robbery of the train, rushed pell mell with everybody else out on the platform, the passengers who had been uncoupled and left on the road not being behind others in their complaints and uproar. The whole camp also was in a turmoil. A single glance around showed Fuller that there was no chance for help there; and being a man of quick thought his mind fastened on an idea—utterly wrong as it proved—but which had the merit of putting him vigorously to work. The nearest guard declared that only four men were engaged in the capture—he had only seen those that mounted the engine—and others corroborated him. Fuller remembered the conscripts he had been warned to watch for, and at once the thought flashed across his mind, "Some of those men, one of whom happened to know enough of an engine to pull open the throttle, have jumped on my train to get out of camp, and as soon as they are outside they will leave the engine and run into the mountains. I must follow as fast as possible and try to get it back before I get very badly out of time."

CAPT. W. A. FULLER. (From war time photograph.)

The presence of Mr. Anthony Murphy that morning was purely accidental. He was going to examine an engine at Allatoona reported out of order. As an officer of high authority on the road, commanding all engineers and firemen, knowing all the engines and everything about the road perfectly, his presence at that time was most unfortunate for us. He was a man of great coolness and good judgment. His first action was far-sighted. He sent Mr. William Kendrick on horseback to Marietta to notify the superintendent at Atlanta by wire. Mr. Kendrick arrived in time to hold a freight train there till orders were flashed back to drop all cars but one, run up to Big Shanty, load on soldiers and pursue with all speed. This was the first train in chase. A message was also sent from Marietta to Richmond, but no result followed that. My opinion is that Andrews had in some way arranged for cutting the wire between Chattanooga and Knoxville, which was the only route by which the message could have gone around and got on the line of the Western and Atlantic railroad ahead of us.

Had these been the only measures of pursuit—wise and judicious as they were—our task would have been easy. But Fuller's error and his ardent temperament prompted to another course. He had called Murphy and Cain, "Come on with me," they promptly followed and the three of them started at a dead run up the track. The spectacle of three men running vigorously after a flying engine, as if they expected to catch it, instantly restored the mob to good humor, and they cheered and shouted with laughter! What would have been the fate of these runners if they had overtaken us at the first stop, where we cut wire and obstructed the track, it is needless to inquire. They would have hardly begun such a chase had they not entirely underestimated our number, as well as mistaken our purpose. The Atlanta Southern Confederacy of the next day, in an article full of panic, written before the issue was determined, speaks of us as "some four men yet unknown."

The different running powers of the pursuers were soon made evident in this apparently hopeless chase. Fuller was extraordinarily fleet and of great endurance. His companions were equally zealous but less able for running. They were, therefore, soon spread out for a considerable distance. While putting in his best efforts, Fuller shouted back encouragement to his comrades, but did not wait. The hope of getting his train soon was too strong, and he also feared that the reckless men who had taken it might do some injury to the engine before he could come up. The idea that they might offer any resistance did not enter his mind.

But the chase could not long have continued in this manner, for human muscles cannot be pitted successfully against steam. The labored breath and the decreasing pace of the runners showed that they were well nigh exhausted; and as curve after curve was rounded—for with the instinct of railroad men they clung to the track—they grew discouraged; but just before their "second wind" was exhausted, they received both help and renewed excitement. They came to Moon's station, some two miles from the place of starting, and have never been able to make even a plausible conjecture of the time consumed in this first stage of the journey, but it is certain that it was just as little as straining muscles and iron could well make it.

Here they learned from the track laying party that some of their tools had been "borrowed," and a short distance beyond some ties placed on the track and the telegraph cut. This was our first halt, and the track had been obstructed that a train coming from Atlanta might be hindered. The pursuers here found a hand car—not one of the elaborate machine cars, which may be driven at great speed, but what Fuller termed a "pole car." It was at once pressed into service and gave a welcome rest. Fuller ran it back a little way and picked up his companions, who were behind, then drove forward as fast as the construction of the car would permit. Pushing with a long pole in flat boat fashion, quite rapid time could be made on the level and on down grades, while on the steep up grades two would jump off and push at a full run.

At Acworth they got a reenforcement of two men, Mr. Smith and Mr. Stockely, and hurried forward. All idea that they were following conscripts had now been given up. They had learned that the captors had been seen oiling their engine, as if preparing for a long run, and seeming to perfectly understand their work. Fuller and Murphy were now able, for the first time, to consult about their plans. We were running on regular time—a circumstance that they had noted in the reports received from the different stations—and that time was only sixteen miles per hour, which meant two hours to Kingston. They were making seven or eight miles on the pole car, and that, if kept up (it was the utmost they could do), would bring them to Etowah in two or three

THE FUTURE OF SPAIN.

To Be One of the Great European Powers According to Don Carlos.

VENICE, Jan. 20.—In an interview here Don Carlos said that Spain must become one of the great European powers; that her navy should immediately be strengthened, and that an obligatory military service bill was essential. He thinks that the present monarchy is totally unfitted for raising Spain to greater power, and strongly believes that a republic is speedily forthcoming. The future of Spain, in his opinion, lies in Morocco, and South America where there are great possibilities for her. Don Carlos declares his readiness to fight in the Spanish ranks the moment he was called upon to do so.

DON CARLOS.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSION.

Janesville, Wis., Shaken Up and Two Men Terribly Mangled.

JANESVILLE, WIS., Jan. 21.—The city was shaken to its foundations Friday morning by an explosion of a heavy boiler in the flour-mill of Kastner & Gogan. The explosion was terrific, and all that is left of the greater part of the mill is a deep pit banked up by smoking wreckage. Pieces of the boiler were blown 600 feet and through solid walls.

Underneath the debris were found the bodies of Byron Kennedy and James Bracken, terribly mangled. Death had resulted instantaneously. Bracken was unmarried, but Kennedy leaves a wife and child.

The damage done by the explosion is fully $40,000. The cause is believed to have been low water. The testimony of the coroner's inquest was to the effect that the boiler had been considered dangerous three months ago.

C. A. Wright & CO.

Very many of the healthiest people keep themselves in such condition by the occasional use of a reliable cathartic, and they give the preference to Laxador as more fully serving their purpose than any other similar remedy. Only 25 cents.

There is no denying the fact that Dr. Jones Red Clover Tonic is the most successful blood purifier ever put on the market. Its wonderful cures in all stomach, kidney and liver troubles has brought out many imitations. It restores debilitated nerve tissues, restoring the force lost by sickness, mental work or excessive use of liquor, opium and tobacco. Dr. Geo. Ferguson will supply the genuine at 50 cents a bottle.

A Modern Miracle.

Mrs. J. W. Wentworth, of Elkhart, Ind., was long subject to pain in the side, shortness of breath, weakness, pain in the side, slight cough, swelling of the ankles and other symptoms of serious heart disease. She was expected to die at any time. Doctors in New York, Toledo, etc., failed to help her. But two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart cured her three years ago and she has remained well ever since. Heart disease can be cured. Sold by Baker & Hall.

The New York MAIL AND EXPRESS, the favorite American newspaper among people of intelligent, refined cultivated tastes, has recently undergone many noticeable improvements, and is in every respect its general excellence. It is in the broadest sense most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from the corrupting, sensational and demoralizing, misnamed news, which defiles the pages of many city papers.

A National Newspaper,

OUR POLITICS.

Believes the Republican party to be the party of the POLITICAL PROGRESS of the American people; and holding that the enforcement of its principles is essential to the national welfare, will work for them with all our might; but we shall treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

The MAIL AND EXPRESS is the recognized organ of the great Anti-Saloon movement. It believes that the saloon, as it exists to-day in the United States, is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy and brotherhood of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections and legislation, is a menace to the State, and deserves the condemnation of good men.

MONTANA HEARD FROM. Recent railroad extensions have developed exceptionally fine mineral, stock and farming districts. Maps and full particulars, free upon application to C. H. WARREN, Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

STOCK IN MINNESOTA.—From an exclusive grain country, Minnesota is being rapidly transformed into the finest stock and dairy state in the union. Cheap lands still obtainable, convenient to railroad. Particulars free upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

NEW BUSINESS CENTERS. The building of railroads in a new country creates many new towns, affording excellent business opportunities. Particulars regarding such opportunities in Montana, Minnesota, and Dakota will be sent upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul.

PROSPEROUS North Dakota never had better crops than those just harvested. Many opportunities to secure fine Government lands recently surveyed, near excellent coal fields and adjacent to railroad. Maps and full particulars free, upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul.

SUCCESS Are you mortgaged, paying heavy rents, or running behind? Can you move to new location? Excellent lands cheap, which will increase in value several fold in five years. No other such opportunities existing. Full particulars, free upon application to C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

FAILURE OF CROPS is an unknown experience in central and northern Dakota and Minnesota. Maps and full particulars regarding lands, prices, etc., sent free. Address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn.

WHY WORK FOR ANOTHER, or on small salary? Why continue working on a worn out farm? Why try to secure a living from such high priced or heavily mortgaged farms? Why work on rented land? Why not start on yourself? Why not secure, at once, some of the low-priced but very fertile and well located lands adjacent to railroads now to be obtained by those going to Northern Dakota and Minnesota, where you can make a larger net profit per acre than on the high priced or worn out land you now occupy. Why not go and look the situation over and see for yourself, at least obtain further information, which will be sent free, if you will address C. H. WARREN, Gen. Pass. Agt., St. Paul, Minn. ?

EYESIGHT—SAVE IT! Use Proper Spectacles! Nothing is so much of a great value as perfect sight, and perfect sight can only be obtained by having perfect spectacles properly fitted. Send 25 cent stamp for test types and instructions, with the use of which those whose vision is impaired can make their own refraction, and receive by mail a pair of Spectacles or Eyeglasses scientifically adapted to any condition of sight. PUBLIC OPINION AND PROHIBITION.

The opera house contained about one hundred people last Tuesday evening, the occasion being the lecture of Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert of New Jersey and the subject being "Public Opinion and Prohibition." Mr. Vibbert is comparatively a stranger here, it being his first appearance, but he made many friends and his other lectures will undoubtedly be largely attended. He is a very rapid speaker and the manner in which he handled his subject showed a thorough familiarity with it. After devotional exercises he was introduced to the audience by Mrs. H. L. Stewart of the W. C. T. U.

Mr. Vibbert gave an account of the efficiency of prohibition in Maine and also an amusing description of the manner in which liquor was brought into the state and concealed. What has been the effect of license law upon public opinion? Those cities where the social evil is recognized are the most depraved cities of the world. There is no difference between the tax laws of Massachusetts and the license law of Michigan and they are wicked, vicious laws. The British people have tried license laws for 400 years and they are the most drunken nation in the world. Last year, in London, one person in every five died away from home—in hospital, prison or poorhouse. Christmas week in Great Britain is always the most wretched week in the year, and there is always more drunkeness and crime than in any other week in the year. Every year in that country more than 500 drunken mothers rolled over on their babies and smothered them. How is it in Michigan? The same tax law is in effect and in Tecumseh is a wicked failure. The very fact that you have 7 grog shops that are protected by the laws and the fact that you have 100 drinking men proves that your license law is a wicked, melancholy failure and swindle. Every liquor seller in Michigan sells on Sundays to minors and drunkards. What has been the effect of prohibition and public opinion? To day there is a strong sentiment in favor of prohibition and against license. They have had prohibition in Maine for 28 years. The people have voted to forever prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor. Less liquor is sold in Maine than anywhere else. In some parts of Maine liquor can be had, but it is where the laws are in the hands of those who will not enforce them. Real estate is not worth as much today in Tecumseh as it would be if no liquor were sold here. Suppose you want to change your home. If you had good sense you would pay more for real estate for business and home purposes where no liquor is sold. Prohibition would prevent drunkeness and thereby protect homes. Homes are not protected. There is a man in this town who not long ago took his potatoes and sold them to get liquor. That home is not protected. These laws do not protect your homes in Michigan.

Now is the time to pay up.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

We dance with the Old Folks.

Gallery tickets for the Old Folks Dance 15 cents.

An extra freight train went over the Jackson Branch last Sunday.

This weather is just the thing to grease up the toboggan slide.

Reserved seats for the Old Folks Dance can be secured at Adamson's for 25 cents.

A number of Tecumseh people attended the prohibition conference at Adrian yesterday.

Get your calling cards at the HERALD office with your autograph signature printed thereon.

W. & S. W. Anderson & Co. will close their store on Wednesday, Feb. 1st, for invoicing.

Young folks from the country, when they visit Tecumseh, should try Woodard's toboggan slide.

Subscribers who wish to pay their subscriptions in wood should take advantage of this sleighing while it lasts.

A large party of Adrian young folks came over to Tecumseh Tuesday evening for a sleigh ride and took supper at the Lilley House.

Rev. Mr. Vibbert is the finest lecturer who has visited Tecumseh in many a day. Turn out and hear him this evening and to morrow evening.

Luke Sharp has written a new story entitled "Jones and I," which will soon commence in the Detroit Free Press. Look out for some fun.

Three more counties voted for local option Monday. Shiawassee goes about 1700 in favor; Cass County 700 and Eaton County nearly 1,000.

Charles and Verner Crane were called here from St. Louis last week on a sad errand, to attend their father's funeral. They only remained one day, as business duties called them back home.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the friends of temperance in the lecture room of the M. E. church next Thursday, Feb. 2nd, at 8 P. M., for further consultation in regard to the question of local option.

BY ORDER OF THE CHAIRMAN.

Prof. W. J. Beal, of the State Agricultural College, will lecture at Raisin Valley Seminary, Feb. 23. Subject: "Some of the Problems of Forestry." Let everyone come—farmers especially. Prof. Beal is an old student of the Seminary.

E. B. Sutton informs us that the call for the annual Meeting of the Michigan State Temperance Alliance was made to say the first Tuesday in February next, at Jackson, when in fact it should have said the first Wednesday the first day of February.

D. H. Silvers' auction sale on Thursday last was the largest sale held in this County in several years. Over 500 people were in attendance and the property sold exceeded $6,000. He got out 600 large, half sheet posters, and he found that it paid the expense ten times over.

You are cordially invited to hear Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert of Boston lecture Thursday evening, Jan. 26th, at 7:45 o'clock in the Opera House; on "The Citizen and the Dram Shop." Friday evening, Jan. 27th, in the Methodist church, on "The Surplus Dollars." Come and bring your friends. Collection taken at close of lecture.

Miss Minnie Westcott, who teaches school in the Anthony district east of Holloway, was entertained with a sleigh-ride home by her scholars last Friday evening. They came up to her father's H. H. Westcott's, who in turn entertained the young folks very handsomely for two or three hours. Refreshments were served and a fine time had by all.

M. P. Brown has lately received a lengthy letter from his brother at San Diego, Cal., which is not as rose colored as some of the newspaper reports. San Diego is booming, that is true, but the real estate agents seem to be making the most money just now. California, however, is a big state and she has entered upon a career of prosperity that is likely to be permanent.

J. H. Darling of Duluth was in town a few days last week. He came out to be present at a family reunion held at Rev. Burnett's. His sisters Mrs. Hamill and Miss Jenny Darling, from Coburg, Ont., were also present, who returned home on Thursday. Mr. Darling is still in the government employ at Duluth, being the assistant engineer in charge of the harbor improvements.

The children of the Primary dep't of the M. E. Sunday School on Saturday afternoon of last week were given a sleighride by their teacher and Supt. Mrs. Gamble, to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Waring, where they were royally entertained by the host and hostess. Those who were present and enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Waring will gratefully remember it in the future.

Jim Cummins of Toledo is in town.

Don't fail to pay your subscription in January.

C. A. Slayton was in Toledo last

The pay car went over the Jackson Branch yesterday.

The Lyons Herald, published at Lyons, Mich., is for sale

Will J. Kies of Elkhart, Ind., was in town the first of the week.

Seth Bean and T. M. Hunter of Adrian, were in town Monday.

The Old Folks dance will take place on Thursday evening, Feb. 2d.

Our Sunday School lesson will be found on the inside pages this week.

Engage your best girl for the Old Folks dance before it is everlastingly too late.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Miles, nee Minnie Ross, are the guests of the latter's parents this week.

Mrs. Brown, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. M. E. Corey for several days, returned home to day.

Co. C will give their grand annual party Feb. 21st. Until then the bi-weekly dances will be discontinued.

H. H. Snell, who has been suffering with a prolonged attack of fever, is, we are glad to learn, now on the mend.

The Old Folks party bids fair to be a crowning success. The committee in charge are pushing it right along.

Charlie Herring mistook his finger for a "surloin" one day this week while cutting meat and sliced a small piece off the end of it.

Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert will address the people of Tecumseh again this evening at the Opera House. Admission free. Turn out and hear him.

The death roll of the late Dakota blizzard has now reached the number of an even thousand. The loss of stock is beyond computation at present.

After one has read the fearful record of the recent Dakota blizzard, he settles back in his easy chair and says: "Well, Michigan is a pretty good state to winter in, after all."

Judge Stacy was taken with a severe chill last Sunday evening, followed by a fever. The fever was broken on Tuesday, and he is rapidly gaining. He will be at the office again in two or three days.

S. P. Hosmer is in Cleveland this week, attending a course of lectures by Dr. Julius King on the eye. Mr. Hosmer has been making a study of the eye for several months and he takes this course to perfect himself in optics. He intends to have the optical department of his jewelry store second to none in Southern Michigan.

Postmaster General Dickinson does well in the promptness with which he has promulgated the new law signed by the President on Friday removing the vexatious restrictions as to writing upon second, third and fouth class mail matter. Merchants and publishers are especially benefitted by the new regulations.

D. Barnes of Lake Ridge, who has drawn wood to the public schools of Tecumseh for the last eleven years, brought in a load last week Friday that takes the money. Mr. B. had on 1½ cords of elm blocks, 12 bu. wheat and a log weighing 290lbs. Besides this, there were himself and one other man on the load. Mr. B. has drawn to Tecumseh 110 cords of wood since corn-husking. Who beats this record?

A silver lining to every cloud! With the short dull days of early winter come the cheery holidays and Vick's beautiful annual, and lo! spring already appears not far distant. We can almost see the greening grass and the blooming flowers. In the way of Catalogue, Vick's Floral Guide is unequaled in artistic appearance, and the edition of each year that appears simply perfect, is surpassed the next. New and beautiful engravings, and three colored plates of flowers, vegetables, and grain are the features of 1888. If you want to know anything about the garden, see Vick's Floral Guide, price only 10c, including a certificate good for 10c. worth of seeds. Published by James Vick, Seedsman, Rochester, N. Y.

Peterson's Magazine for February is before us, as varied and interesting as ever, and we could hardly bestow higher praise. There is never any falling off in this favorite periodical, no slow numbers, and no unfulfilled promises. Its serials and short stories are of the first order of merit, its fashion department always presents the prettiest and freshest of Parisian novelties, and its numerous steel and wood engravings are invariably artistic in design and finish. No household fond of the best literature and no lady desirous of possessing a thoroughly reliable guide in regard to dress, needlework, and the household, should be without "Peterson." Long years of unexampled success and prosperity have thoroughly established its position; and, as it yearly offers greater and more striking attractions, it runs no risk, even in this age of competition, of losing one iota of its hold on public favor. Terms: Two Dollars a year, with great reductions to clubs. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

J. H. Smith went to Lansing Monday.

Operations at the C. J. & M. gravel pit have been suspended until spring.

patronized these days. It is in splendid condition now.

Hunt's Orchestra will furnish the music for the Old Folks dance. Grand march at 7:30 sharp. Gallery tickets, 15 cents.

Three sleigh loads and several single cutters loaded, attended the M. E. church social last Friday evening. A fine time was had.

Prof. Travis has resigned his position as principal of the Clinton school and will give his attention to introducing his "patent Black Board Eraser" and his self closing Ink well into the schools of the country.

Dr. Bennett will be at Lilley House, Monday Jan. 30th. You all know he cures those chronic cases, as surely as the sun gets up. Piles no matter how long or what complication, get well and no pain or failure. Hernia (Rupture), be the age, 5 or 75 years, radically cured in one week.

This is the peoples' institute and we hope every one will feel interested and at liberty to ask questions upon any of the papers. The gentlemen from the college request questions and discussions upon these topics. The committee did not appoint any one to open discussions upon the Professor's papers as they wish any one interested to ask for information, as that is what the State Board of Agriculture appoint these institutes for. These gentlemen spend the greater part of their time upon the State farm, and they are willing to tell the people what they are doing, and they in turn wish to know what the people are doing throughout the State.

AN UNFORTUNATE AFFAIR.

We clip the following from the Independent published at Helena, Montana.

J. M. Erskine, business manager and general overseer of Bach, Cory & Co.'s stores, was on Sunday last the main participant in a shooting affray at Basin City, which resulted in the serious though probably not fatal wounding of Mr. Leo Sutor, a gentleman well known in this city, having formerly resided here, being in the employ of the several Kleinschmidt Bros. in their various business establishments in Helena. A dispute originated over some business affairs, resulting as stated, the ball striking Mr. Sutor in the face, glancing around, underneath the skin, coming out at the back of the neck. From Mr. Erskine, who returned to Helena yesterday, the following statement is obtained:

On Friday last he was sent to Basin City to attach the store of Sutor & LaSalle. Serving the papers and leaving a deputy in charge, Mr. Erskine went up to a wood camp and attached a small store belonging to the same firm, returning to the hotel for supper. After supper some one came in and said Mr. Sutor was outside and wanted to see Mr. Erskine. Mr. E. put on his overcoat and stepped outside, when Mr. Sutor struck him on the forehead, knocking him down. He got up and started away, Sutor following. He repeatedly warned Sutor to keep away from him, but, finally, seeing Sutor reach toward his hip pocket, he fired his pistol, hitting Sutor in the neck. Mr. Erskine says there were a number of witnesses who will testify to the above statement.

COUNTY PROHIBITION CONFERENCE.

Held at Dean's Opera House Yesterday—A Stormy Day but a Good Attendance.

A call for a prohibition conference to take action on the local option question, was issued Jan. 9th by the chairman of the committee, G. P. Waring, to secure names to the petitions for the purpose of calling an election on that question, but later the call was issued and the meeting was more to devise a plan of campaign for the coming election. The day selected for the meeting proved to be very stormy during the morning and probably kept many from attending.

An open session of the county committee was the first thing in order and at 10:30 o'clock Chairman Waring of Ridgeway called the meeting to order with a fine audience. Jesse Rogers of Palmyra, acting as Secretary in the absence of the regular one, who was afterward elected Secretary of the County committee.

Chairman Waring stated that the committee had met to talk over a plan of campaign, and also to consider the advisability of establishing a district prohibition paper. The date set for holding a county convention to elect delegates to attend the State convention was Wednesday, May 23. Wm. Hook was elected a member of the County committee in Ogden and G. F. Cone in Hudson. The district paper matter was then taken up and the meeting was addressed by Prof. Copp, chairman of the Hillsdale committee. He stated that the prohibition people of Hillsdale had long wanted an organ. They had gone to the different editors of the home papers and asked for a space in their papers, but no satisfactory arrangement could be made and a paper was started, The Lance. It grew and paid its way. The paper was printed at one of its contemporary's office, but the managers at last concluded to buy a press of their own and invested in one, paying some down and giving a mortgage on it for the remainder. The amount paid down left no money to pay paper bills, etc., and eventually the paper went under, but will appear in a short time. The subscription list had grown to 1200 copies, and the stock represented was $1500. Now if the people in the three counties of Lenawee, Washtenaw and Monroe would raise among themselves $1500 stock and put it with the Lance, the publishers of that paper would be willing to move it to Adrian or anywhere else and make it a district organ. If not it would remain where it was.

M. P. Brown thought it would be a good idea to resurrect the Lenawee Record. Rev. E. B. Sutton thought before arranging for a new paper it would be a good idea to make good the subscriptions of the defunct Record. Walter Jones of Raisin, wanted a home organ. No paper he said in Adrian even, presented the moral side of the question. Mr. Waring said the county committee had nothing to do with making good the Record list. All the connection it had with the paper was that they engaged so many papers for a cent a copy. After appointing a committee of one from each township to canvass the matter, the meeting adjourned.

The local option conference was called to order at 1:30 by Hon. M. T. Cole of Palmyra. The proceedings of the meeting held last week were read and affirmed and the plan of work then laid out was adopted. The presidents and secretaries of the township committees were given notice that they were requested to meet at Adrian next Saturday. Mr. Waring then offered the following resolution:

Resolved: That it is the sense of this conference that it is of the greatest importance that the voters of the county be at the polls Feb. 20th, '88, and we recommend that each township be so organized that every voter who is likely to vote for prohibition have a free sleigh ride to the polls.

The resolution was adopted. The Adrian College Glee Club then favored the meeting with a stirring song, after which Mr. Geo. E. Vibbert of Boston, was introduced and delivered a stirring address, giving a description of the two extremes of civilization the rich and the poor.

A vote of thanks was tendered the college quartette, after which the meeting was dismissed.

The Co. committee was again called to order to consider the district paper business. A committee of three was appointed to confer with Monroe and Washtenaw counties. The chairman of Hillsdale and Lenawee Counties were two of the committee and will choose a third. A committee was appointed to investigate the old Union Light stock to see if it could not be transfered to a new company. E. B. Sutton and G. P. Waring was that committee.

The committee adjourned without taking any definite action. The same subject will be bought up at their convention May 23d.

Our Young people must not consider that they are excluded from the "Old Folks" dance. All lovers of dancing will be welcome, and the "Old Folks" wish the young people to come and enjoy themselves.

DEATH OF SALMON CRANE.

Another old resident and respected citizen has gone the way of all flesh.

Salmon Crane was born in the village of Mannahawkin, New Jersey, in the year 1812. He came to Tecumseh when about twenty-five years old, just fifty years ago, and this village has been his home ever since. Shortly after taking up his residence here he was married to Harriet M. Thorp, with whom he lived happily in domestic life and reared a large family of children. His trade was that of a carpenter and builder, and for more than forty years he had charge of the principal buildings in Tecumseh. The Central School, the Opera House, most of the churches, the Lilley House block, nearly every brick store on Chicago street, and scores of the best residences in Tecumseh were the result of his skill and handiwork. During the past five years he had been enjoying a partial respite from work, his mantle having fallen upon the shoulders of his son Theodore. Last November he went to St. Louis, Mo., to spend a few weeks with his sons Charles and Verner. On the afternoon of the 18th, he had passed a couple of hours at a neighboring drug store and returned to Charles house. He seemed in the best of spirits and talked about going home to Tecumseh in a few days. He stood at the window a few moments chatting with his grand children and then sat down. Mrs. Crane was startled by a strange sound and turning saw that he was ill.—Before a physician could be summoned or even a neighbor called he had breathed his last. Heart disease was undoubtedly the cause. His age was 75 years. The remains were brought to Tecumseh on Friday the 20th inst. and the funeral services were conducted at his late residence Saturday forenoon, Rev. W. H. Babbit Pastor of the Presbyterian Church officiating. There was a large attendance of neighbors and friends who were anxious to pay a tribute of respect to an old and honored resident.

His wife preceded him to the better land on the 12th of February 1885, and he has been calmly awaiting the summons since that time. In his death the family is bereft of a kind father, and our community of an enterprising citizen. Four sons survive him, Charles and Verner who reside at St Louis Mo. Henry and Theodore who live in Tecumseh and occupy the old home.

THE Michigan State Labor Bureau in its last report presents statistics showing how rapidly the American farmer is exchanging the condition of an independent owner for that of a dependent tenant. Of 60,839 farmers in that State 43,079 are mortgaged for fifty five to sixty per cent. of their assessed valuation, the average rate of interest being 7.3 per cent., which means that they are paying the mortgagee his entire loan every fourteen years in addition to being held for the principal. Does not this State of affairs call for some investigation by the farming community into that broad issue called the land question?—The Commoner.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 10 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE LOCAL OPTION LAW.

The following is the law passed by the last legislature, and under which the election is called:

[No. 197]

AN ACT to regulate the manufacture and sale of malt, brewed or fermented, spirituous and vinous liquors in the several counties in this State.

SECTION 1. The people of the State of Michigan enact. That the manufacture and sale of malt, brewed or fermented, spirituous and vinous liquors in the several counties in this State, be and the same is hereby regulated as follows: That upon application by petition, signed by not less than one-fifth of the voters of any county, as shown by the last preceeding vote on Governor, who are qualified to vote for county officers in any county in this State, the county clerk of such county shall call an election to be held at the places of holding elections for State and county officers, to take place within forty days after the receipt of such petition by the said county clerk, to determine whether or not intoxicating liquors, as mentioned in section two of this act, shall be manufactured or sold within the limits of such designated county, Provided, that no election held under this act shall be held in any month in which an election for State, county, city, village or township officers is held; and such question having been submitted and decided by the votes of the electors shall not be again submitted for a period of three years, but shall, at any time after the expiration of the said three years, upon like petition, be again submitted. Notice that such a question is to be submitted shall be given by the county clerk for the same time and in the same manner as is provided by law for giving notice of special elections for county officers. The vote shall be by ballot, and the ballots shall be deposited in ballot-boxes furnished for the purpose, and separate poll-lists and tally-sheets shall be kept. The county clerk shall provide poll-lists, tally-sheets, and a sufficient number of tickets for such election, at each polling place, at the expense of the county. All the electors voting at any such election that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for use as a beverage shall be prohibited, shall have printed or written, or partly printed, or partly written on their ballots, the words "Against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors," and all the electors voting at any such election that such manufacture and sale shall not be prohibited, shall have printed or written, or partly printed or partly written, on their ballots the words "For the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors." The inspectors of elections, as provided by law, shall act, and shall have authority to appoint assistants, if any shall be necessary. The ballots shall be cast and counted, and the returns of the same shall be made from each voting precinct to the clerk of the county in which such election is held in the manner prescribed by law for the election of county officers. The clerk of said county shall enter in a book to be provided by him for that purpose a tabular statement of the number of votes cast for and against such proposition in each voting precinct in said county, as shown by said returns, together with the aggregate number of votes cast for and against such sale in the elective county. Said statement so recorded shall be a public record of the county, and shall be prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein stated.

SEC. 2. That from and after the first Monday in May next after such special election, it is hereby declared unlawful to manufacture, sell, give away, or furnish malt, brewed, fermented, vinous or intoxicating liquors of any kind, or in any quantity, or liquors, any part of which is malt, brewed, fermented, vinous or intoxicating, or to keep for sale, or keep a place where such liquors are manufactured, or kept for sale, given away, or furnished, within the limits of any county in which a majority of the votes cast at the election next preceding upon the question of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, as provided in section one of this act, have been cast against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors; except when done by a druggist who is or who employs a registered pharmacist strictly in compliance with the laws for the regulation of druggists. And whoever, within such limits himself, or by any agent, or otherwise, thus manufactures, sells, furnishes or gives away any such liquors, or keeps for sale, or keeps a place where such liquors are manufactured or kept for sale, given away or furnished, upon conviction thereof in any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be fined in any sum not less than fifty or more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than ten days or more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 3. In any county in this State to which the electors of such county, as hereinbefore provided, have voted to prohibit the manufacture and sale of such liquors by a majority vote, then in such case the provisions of the general laws of this State for the taxation and regulation of the business of the sale, manufacture or dealing in such liquors is suspended, or superseded, from and after the first day of May next following, so far as relates to the territory of such county, and all sales made by druggists in such county shall be under all the restrictions imposed upon druggists by the said general laws of this State.

Approved June 18, 1887.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

LESSON FOR JANUARY 29th.

PETER CONFESSING CHRIST.—MATT. xvi, 13-38.

"Caesarea Philippi."—A city in Gaulonitis situated at the foot of Hermon, the most majestic of all the mountains of Syria. The city was formerly known as Paneas. Philip the tetrarch enlarged and named it Cæsarea in honor of Tiberias Cæsar, and Philippi after himself to distinguish it from Cæsarea Palestine, where Paul was imprisoned.——"That the Son of man is?"—What construction did the people put upon the title which he had frequently used in speaking of himself? (DAN. vii. 13, 14.) Did the people apply it to him in its Messianic sense, that was the question.——"John the Baptist."—Like Herod Antipas.——"Elijah."—A forerunner of the Messiah.——"Jeremiah."—In the same sense Elijah, perhaps even in a higher sense than Elijah, for Jeremiah was at that time held in very high repute among the Jews—or any other great prophet risen from the dead.——"Simon Bar Jonah."—A solemn circumstantial address on account of the importance of what is to follow. Bar is Aramaic for son.——"Flesh and blood."—That is, men. That which follows must necessarily be restricted to Peter, as a special revelation of truth from God to him.——"Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church.—Jesus in turn makes a declaration in reference to Peter. He first declares Peter to be a rock in his faith and knowledge, all in character what the name conferred upon him John i. 43, implied: and upon this, namely Peter, this rocky element of character, capable of resisting all shocks of time, I will build my church, the community of believers, which is spoken of as a building, with Christ as the architect and Peter as the foundation-stone, firm enough to withstand every effort to destroy it.——"The keys of the Kingdom of Heaven." The figure is changed. Peter is transferred from the foundation stone to be the major domo—the steward of the kingdom, not less glorious position, but one of extreme importance and responsibility.——"That they should tell no man." It might produce a tumult of the people, so defeat his plans.——"Satan."—Adversary.——"Coming in his kingdom."—On the day of Pentecost Christ began to come in his kingdom.

INSTRUCTION.—This lesson is appropriately called "Peter confessing Christ." Here is a full, whole souled confession recorded. Though impulsive, it is the mature outgrowth of months of companionship with the Master. Christ asks no confession of any one based on ignorance or momentary excitement. How can we confess that which we know not? Our confession of him should be the most thoughtful, decisive act of our lives, the result of most intimate communion with him. Even then, though we pave the way for it, such a confession as Peter's is not of ourselves, or from men, but is a precious God given revelation.

Peter's confession was a most blessed one. Not only is it a watchword for all times, but it brings true happiness to each confessor's heart.

Peter was not the last rock by any means. Each one can fashion himself by his faith and courage into a secure prop that shall uphold Christ's Church. This spiritual community of saints on earth is made up of living stones, each one of which shall be built into the holy temple of the Lord.

Such a "living stone" shall successfully withstand the assaults of the Evil One. Is it not worth all our efforts to become unconquerable in such warfare?

The charge to tell no man is superseded now by the command, "Go thou and publish abroad the Kingdom of God."

Peter would that Christ had seized the kingdom by power not by death. By his death he reigns in the heart of men. Turn away from him who would persuade you to win the Kingdom of God otherwise than by the atoning death of Christ. Such persuasions are of the Devil not from Christ.

Christ frankly tells all that his service consists of hardship and self denial. He foretells the sufferings as the joys of his disciples.

In Christ the wisdom of the world is confounded. What mystery! Where loss is gain and death is life.

How many would lose their souls for much less than the world, even a very few dollars! Hold not yourself too cheap. The least that we shall give in exchange for our souls should be Christ.

Many of us may live to see marvelous progress made in Christ's kingdom. This will be wonderful indeed if like Peter we are instrumental in converting our 3,000 apiece. Let us all work toward it, at least.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS

WORK OF THE NATIONAL SOLONS AT WASHINGTON.

Both Houses Just Getting into Good Working Order Now and Doing Business—A Summary of the Most Important Bills and Resolutions Introduced During the Week and Action Thereon.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 28.—A brief debate took place in the senate Tuesday over a resolution by Platt inquiring as to alleged holding of senators' mail matter because of unlawful printing on the wrappers. Platt said the department had gone beyond its authority in the matter. The resolution was adopted. The house bill prescribing what inscriptions may be put on mail wrappers, etc., was passed as it came from the house. The president's message on the Pacific railways was read and referred to a special committee of five senators. Bowen and Blair spoke in advocacy of the educational bill, after which the senate adjourned.

By resolution in the house Cox of New York was elected speaker pro tem, during Carlisle's illness, and the chaplain prayed for Carlisle's speedy recovery. A number of bills were introduced, the president's message on the Pacific railways ordered printed, and Wilkins' bank bill ordered taken up by a vote of 145 to 100. Wilkins said he was willing to give ample time to discuss and amend the measure, but Weaver declared it pernicious and said he would resort to any parliamentary means to defeat it. After some filibustering the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 19.—The first business of the senate Wednesday was the passage of a bill reducing the fee for a passport to $1. Then came a short rush of petitions and bills on various subjects, among them Farwell's bill to perpetuate the national banking system, which it is proposed to do by issuing 5 per cent. bonds to run fifty years in exchange for those now held by the banks, paying the premium on the latter, and allowing circulation to issue to the full amount of the par value of the former. The bill also authorizes the treasury to buy bonds with the surplus in the open market. The bill to refund the direct tax to the states was then taken up and passed—48 to 10—and then Brown of Georgia and Blair continued the debate on the educational bill, both speaking in favor thereof. The senate then adjourned.

Cox announced to the house that Speaker Carlisle was rapidly recovering, and would soon resume the gavel. A resolution was adopted calling on the secretary of the interior for information as to what legislation is needed to protect the forests at the head of navigable waters. Plumb offered a resolution appointing a committee to investigate the refunding legislation with the object of ascertaining if the government can pay the bonded debt at its pleasure. He wanted it considered at once, but objection was made. The majority report on the Carlisle case was presented. It was ordered that 10,000 extra copies of the president's Pacific railways message be printed. The appropriation for agricultural experiment stations was passed. Wilkins called up his banking bill, but Weaver and others filibustered until an adjournment was forced.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 21.—The house Friday received and referred a petition from the National Board of Trade convention favoring liberal appropriations for waterway improvements. Springer made a personal explanation regarding a statement by Kelly Thursday, and denied the imputation that he had claimed a fee of $10,000 for inserting a clause in the bill appropriating money to the Philadelphia centennial, by which the money was returned to the government. He had appeared in court for the government in the case and afterward had asked that the court of claims fix the value of his services, but his request had not been acted upon by congress. The Thobe-Carlisle case was then taken up and after Thobe had addressed the house in his own behalf the resolutions of the majority of the elections committee, declaring against reopening the case, were voted on. The Republicans, with the exception of a few who voted aye, and Brumm, Hovey, and Laidlaw, who voted nay, refrained from voting on the ground that they were not sufficiently informed on the subject. The vote was ayes, 140; nays, 5—no quorum. The house then adjourned.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 23.—The house held a short session Saturday. The Thobe-Carlisle election case was again called up and Hogg of West Virginia moved to reconsider the vote by which the reopening of the matter was defeated Friday. The speaker pro tem permitted the motion, but afterward reversed his ruling, declaring that he had made a mistake as it was out of order until the previous question on the majority resolutions was disposed of. An objection was made to unanimous consent to offer a resolution to reopen, and then a vote was taken on declaring Carlisle entitled to his seat, the vote was yeas, 140, nays, 6—no quorum, and Crisp then, in view of the fact that there was not a quorum voting, moved to adjourn, which was carried—139 to 22—a strict party vote.

WHITE SAVAGES.

They Torture and Then Murder a Whole Family.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 21.—Full particulars of the fiendish murder of Simon McCoy, his wife and three children have reached here. The affair is spoken of as another outbreak of the Hatfield-McCoy troubles, although Simon McCoy and his family have no connection with the feud, and the attack on them was unwarranted. The men took Mrs. McCoy and Johnson, a mere boy, out to the woods. They were fastened to trees, and, like any other savages, the men fired shots around them until they tired of the sport. An order was then given for a volley, and the bodies of the woman and boy were riddled with bullets. A guard around the house had prevented McCoy and two of the children from escaping. Upon the return of the murderers from the woods the house was fired, and McCoy and his children burned alive. Had they attempted to escape they would have been shot down. The men engaged in the terrible deeds conducted the affair with great coolness, but otherwise they did about as a party of savages would have done when murdering, and torturing prisoners. McCoy's brother was murdered a few days ago by the Hatfield gang.

Real Arctic Weather.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 23.—The temperature at Chippewa Falls, this state, on Saturday morning, was 68 below zero; at Janesville 32, Hudson 35, Princeton 32, Hartford 32, Sparta 27, and so on down the scale. A mean point was the record above 30. At Ripon at 7 a. m. thermometers registered 45 below zero. At Green Lake it was 52 below, and all neighboring towns report from 40 to 55.

Garfield's Mother Is Dead.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 23.—Grandma Garfield died at the Garfield homestead at Mentor at 5 o'clock Saturday morning. Her death was like a peaceful falling to sleep.

Read the following: Mr C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark, says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample bottles free.

In another column we print the advertisement of that sterling and reliable paper, the New York Mail and Express, and we wish to commend it to our readers as in the broadest sense a national newspaper, most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from the corrupting, sensational and demoralizing trash, miscalled news, which defiles the pages of so many city papers. The Mail and Express discusses with ability and fairness all questions of public interest as they arise and is always found on the moral and progressive side. It gives the latest news from all parts of the world, and presents in its special departments an immense amount of the choicest and best reading matter for the instruction and entertainment of every member of the family, old and young. Sample copies are sent free, and we advise all our readers to send for them.

Don't Give up the Ship.

You have been told that consumption is incurable; that when the lungs are attacked by the terrible malady, the sufferer is past all help, and the end is a mere question of time. You have noted with alarm the unmistakable symptoms of the disease; you have tried all manner of so-called cures in vain, and you are now despondent and preparing for the worst. But don't give up the ship while Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery remains untried. It is not a cure-all, nor will it perform miracles, but it has cured thousands of cases of consumption, in its earlier stages, where all other means had failed. Try it, and obtain a new lease of life.

When will the average citizen stop spending his hard earnings on cigars and tobacco? Give it up? Well, when he finds he can do without tobacco and cigars, but not without Dr. Bull's Cough syrup.

Salvation Oil, the greatest painless cure on earth, is compounded of purest drugs. It is guaranteed to contain nothing of a poisonous character. Only 25 cents a bottle.

JOHN, please call at the drug store and get another bottle of Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam. It has done my cough more good than anything I have ever used, and is so pleasant to take.

THE RECORD OF CRIME.

A New York longshoreman named Peter Peters, 46 years old, tucked himself comfortably in his bed, held a mirror in his left hand to get an accurate aim at his temple with a pistol he held in his right hand, and shot himself dead.

Ollie Sawyer, an engineer on the St. Paul road, was killed in a collision with another engine at Hoskins, Neb., Monday.

At Cincinnati Friday, Otto Sander fatally shot his wife, to whom he had been married but three months. They had been living apart.

The bodies of a boy and girl about 12 and 13 years of age, supposed to be brother and sister, were found floating in the river near Huntington, Miss. It is though they were murdered.

Mrs. Oswald, wife of a wealthy resident of Brownsville, Ohio, was bound and drugged Tuesday night by burglars, who vainly ransacked the house in search of $4,000 supposed to be in the place.

The best on earth can truly be said of Grigg's Glycerine Salve, which is a sure, safe, and speedy cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Try this wonder healer. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. Sold by Dr. Geo. Ferguson's.

Delicate Children Nursing Mothers, Overworked Men and for all diseases where the tissues are wasting away from the inability to digest food, or from overwork, should take Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. "I used the Emulsion on a lady who was delicate. It put her in such good health and flesh that I must say it is the best Emulsion."—L. P. WADDELL, M. D., Hugh's Mills, S. C.

English spavin liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeney stifles, sprains, sore and swollen throat, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh, Mich.

Itch, mange, and scratches of every kind on human or animals cured in 30 minutes by Woodford's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists, Tecumseh, Mich.

If you are afflicted with rheumatism, neuralgia, gout or other bodily pain, or if you have a sprained wrist or ankle you ought at once to procure a bottle of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain. It only costs 25 cents a bottle.

"Lo! the poor Indian!" dying with cold. Won't some "good Samaritan" send him a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup?

ECHOES OF THE BLIZZARD.

THE HUNDRED.

A Giant Many People Still Missing and Supposed to Have Perished in the Blinding Storm—A Number of Bodies Found in Nebraska—Thirty-One School Children Missing in One County in Minnesota.

DEADWOOD, D. T., Jan. 18.—A passenger train arrived Tuesday afternoon bringing mails four days overdue and passengers, who were delayed at Scribner and Inman, Neb., four days. Details concerning the storm that swept Dakota and Nebraska last Thursday morning have been received. The blizzard was first felt at Scribner, and occasioned a delay of twenty-four hours there, when the train was enabled to proceed and continue to Inman, two stations beyond O'Neil, Neb. This place was reached about 4 o'clock p. m. Friday, and here it remained until 9 o'clock Sunday night. News would be received that a driverless wagon and team or riderless horse had just arrived, or that some certain person had his feet, hands or ears frozen, that the feet or hands must be amputated or the surgeon's knife had already been applied, etc. These incidents became of such frequent occurrence, that they finally ceased to excite more than passing interest. At Inman on Sunday night the body of a woman, victim to the unsparing blizzard, was found and brought to the city. She was identified as the teacher of one of the county schools, who after having dismissed the children at [illegible] assayed from the school house in an endeavor to reach the hotel, situated eighty rods away. Two children are said to have been with her. It is not positively known whether they were or not. If so, however, they probably escaped, as their bodies have not been found.

The known and unknown loss to human life was so great as to exclude at first almost all thought for the suffering stock. At Inman information was received that the owner of 160 head of cattle and seven head of horses had lost all the cattle and six horses. Another man lost thirty-six out of thirty-seven head of cattle. A detailed statement, if such was obtainable, would be a long chapter of horrifying and heartrending incidents. Estimates that at present must appear extravagant, place the number of human victims not less than 100 and as many as 1,000. From the valleys immediately contiguous nothing has been learned. No death has been reported. A party of twelve traveling men started from a way station on the road in a wagon just before the storm came in. Nothing has been heard of them since, occasioning serious fears that the whole party may have perished.

ABERDEEN, D. T., Jan. 18.—A farmer, who started for a doctor during the blizzard last week was found thirty-six hours after with his horse standing beside his dead body. The report of the death of a school teacher and sixteen children at Clear Lake township, in eastern Edmund county, at first discredited, is probably true. Parties who came from Warner, D. T., Tuesday, state that a teacher and six children have been found, and that teams had started out to bring in the bodies.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 18.—The summary of fatalities resulting from the storm, as prepared by The St. Paul Dispatch, brings the number of deaths up to 215.

NEBRASKA VICTIMS.

A Number of Dead Bodies Found on the Prairies.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 18.—Charles Gray, living near Tekamah, died Tuesday from exposure in Thursday's storm. He walked all night between his horses to keep from freezing, and was found half a mile from home by neighbors badly frozen. Edwin Record, living five miles from Norfolk, was found on the prairie dead Tuesday. He had left his brother's house Thursday on foot, but had only gone a mile when he was overcome by the cold. Henry Kruckhafer, living two miles from Lester, at first started out during the storm to drive their cattle out of the cornstalks into the yard. They lost their way and wandered two miles east, where their bodies were found Tuesday lying side by side. They had passed two houses but a few rods away.

A farmer who lives a few miles north of Stuart, Neb., discovered a team and wagon on the prairie. On driving up to it he found the wagon contained three frozen bodies. They were those of an old lady and two children, Malinda Chapman and Eddie and Minnie Faust. Mrs. Chapman was the grandmother of the two children, and was taking them to Stuart. The father of the children is a railroad postal clerk. A farmer named Mason was also found frozen to death near Stuart.

Advices from O'Neill, this state, report that in Custer county, alone, fifteen persons perished in Thursday's storm. The loss of stock is reported to be enormous. More details cannot be learned as yet.

WOULD NOT OBEY THE TEACHER.

A Large Number of Children Dead and Missing in Minnesota.

ALEXANDRIA, Minn., Jan. 18.—The frozen body of Hanly Countryman was found Tuesday morning, about ten rods from his home. He left Alexandria at 5 o'clock Monday night to walk home, carrying about forty pounds of provisions. He had stopped several times to rest, and at last fell back upon the snow and died. He served in Company F, Seventh Minnesota.

The death of Edwin Kyling, a farm boy of 17 years, has just been reported from Canton, D. T. He went after hay and was caught in the blizzard.

It is reported that thirty-one school-children are missing in Turner county.

Three children of Mr. Heines, northwest of Lennox, perished while going home from school. The lady teacher argued and pleaded with the scholars not to leave the schoolroom, and finally locked the doors, but they were too many for her, and had their own way. One scholar, aged 17, was among the lost. Mr. Heines wanted to kill the school mistress, but the explanation of the balance of the scholars exonerated her. This makes seven children lost in the vicinity of Lennox.

A Bad Wreck Near Apple River.

FREEPORT, Ills., Jan. 19.—An Illinois Central passenger train was wrecked Tuesday night, near Apple river, Jo Daviess county, by the breaking of a rod. No one was killed. The injured were: Mr. Birmingham, Galena, hurt badly about the arms and back; Mrs. E. L. Bedford, wife of a Galena attorney, severe injuries of the back and head; Robert McLeod, Grant county, Wisconsin, left side injured; Miss Jennie Ransom, Avery, Ills., generally bruised about the head and shoulders; Arthur T. Ransom, Coatesville, Ind., fracture of a rib, by coming in contact with a seat, and left ear split open; Mr. H. C. Traer, Iowa Falls, Ia., received several bad bruises; Mail Agent Comstock, injured badly.

In Carney's tunnel, near Greensburg, Pa., Friday, an express train struck and killed two unknown men.

CLINTON, Mich., Jan. 29, '86.
My little boy had the whooping cough and caught a severe cold with it. Crescent Cough Cure relieved him in twelve hours to a marked extent. It is the best remedy we have ever had in the house.
A. MIDDLEBROOK.

FRANKLIN, Nov. 21, '87.
I had a severe cough that had settled on my lungs. A small bottle of Crescent Cough Cure cured me; am much pleased with it.
N. C. ARNOLD.

ADRIAN, Mich., Nov. 10, '87.
I believe Crescent Liver Pills to be the best I ever used.
MRS. W. PENTICOST.

RIDGEWAY, Mich., Nov. 18, '87.
I found Crescent Cough Cure just as recommended and am well pleased with it.
MRS. GEO. ALLISON.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 15, '87.
I have had dyspepsia for ten years, with all the disagreeable feelings that go with it. Nothing I ate seemed to agree with me. I suffered everything, bodily and mentally. I tried the best physicians in numerous cities, but found no relief until last spring when I commenced to take Crescent Liver Pills. They relieved me at once. I can now eat almost anything, have gained ten pounds and feel like another man.
J. F. JOHNSON.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Dec. 19, '87.
We have used the Cresent Cough Cure and Liver Pills as our family medicine for coughs, colds and the irregularities of the liver, and gladly add our testimony in favor of both. The Crescent is not only pleasant to take, but is one of the very best medicines for a cough or cold we have ever used. We would hardly know how to keep house without it now.
G. S. SPAFFORD & FAMILY.

MACON, Dec. 1, '87.
I have been troubled with a severe cough for several years and have used ALL kinds of cough remedies, and must say Crescent Cough Cure has given me the most relief of anything I ever used. I cheerfully recommend it to everybody.
THOMAS LANGTHORN.

SALINE, Mich., Nov. 3, '87.
Have used Crescent Cough Cure with very satisfactory results. Am much pleased with it.
MRS. GEO. OSBORN.

MILAN, Mich., Nov. 20, '87.
I have used Crescent Cough Cure with very good results. Think it the best I have ever used for all throat and lung troubles. Would not be without it.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

A number of our Masonic friends contemplate visiting their Tecumseh Brothers Friday eve.

We have had a lady book agent in town the past week.

The progressive euchre club had a delightful time at Will Dorr's, one evening last week.

The gentlemen are making arrangements for a return party in the near future.

Will McDermott, who has been visiting his parents, left Wednesday for St. Louis, Mo.

Mrs. Ella Clark visited at her brother Allen's over Sunday.

Wm. Brown and wife of Rome, Mich., were the guests of Geo. R Brown over Sunday.

Miss Carrie Huntington entertained a cousin from Jackson, the past week.

Ed. Rowland of Tecumseh, came up with three new cutters which he sold to H. Lancaster, Wm. Amspoker and Jas. Kehoe.

Henry Mensing is soon to move his family from Tecumseh and will occupy E. F. Muir's house on Church street.

Anson Roff celebrated his 72d. birthday Monday afternoon and evening, assisted by a large number of relatives and friends. It was a happy occasion.

Ed. A. Clark has been sojourning in Jackson for some time.

The Episcopal social at Mrs. E. R. Smith's, Tuesday afternoon, was largely attended, and the receipts correspondingly so.

John Hause and D. Keyes visited Raisin township Monday last.

Mrs. Isaac Post was called up, near Grand Rapids, last week by the death of her mother.

Will P. Hamilton came over from Detroit Monday, returning Tuesday.

Mrs. Thos. Rix and daughter Addie, of Dowagiac, have been visiting her sister, Mrs. D. H. Davis' the past week.

D. H. Silvers left Saturday morning last for Chicago where he is engaged in business. His family will go very soon.

Mrs. McMaster, having sold her stock of millinery to Mrs. Matie Clark, expects soon to leave Clinton. We shall regret deeply to lose Mrs. M. and daughter Anna, for they are highly esteemed by the entire community.

Dow Draper and wife are visiting his parents at Jackson this week.

Lew Waldron of Tecumseh, was calling on friends here Monday.

J. J. White and Munson King are both recovering from their recent illness.

Geo. W. Kishpaugh, M. D., is now a resident of Fort Wayne, Ind.

C. D. Keyes and J. L. Kishpaugh attended the meeting of Poultry Breeders at Adrian, Friday last.

Richmond Gadd & Co. shipped 500 fat sheep last Saturday.

John T. Clark, of Claire View, visited his old home over Sunday.

McAdam and Mensing are receiving new goods.

Most of our citizens were not star gazing Saturday night but watching the eclipse of the moon.

Ed. Semark is actively engaged in finishing the interior of his block for John Bush to occupy with his stock of groceries.

Ed. VanDeMark visited Washington the past week.

E. D. Telle of Jefferson, Mich., was in town Saturday. He is an applicant for the Schools, and made a very favorable impression on those he met.

Elmer Fullar is at home wrestling with the measles, having been exposed while away.

Bert Roff, Wm. Alexander, wife and sister Libbie, came down from Jackson Wednesday afternoon to aid in celebrating A. Roff's birthday.

Vic. Haywood left the last of the week for Detroit, having accepted a position with W. H. Elliott & Co.

It is reported that Miss Lou McDermott is soon to be found in McAdam & Mensing's store.

We learn that the neighbors and friends of Joseph Linden and wife gave them a surprise Tuesday eve.

W. H. Potts of Jackson, an old Clinton boy, made his cousins John and Frank Jenkins, a visit this week.

Over fifty friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Kishpaugh, walked in upon them Tuesday evening in an unexpected manner and took possession of the premises. A royal good time was enjoyed by all.

C. D. Keyes and J. L. Kishpaugh are to exhibit Fowls at the poultry show at Ypsilanti next week and at Detroit the week following.

ACUTE rheumatism can be effectually and permanently cured by the use of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters.

MACON MUSIC.

A gang of hands are getting out ship timber on Mr. Barney's wood lot.

The G. A. R. boys and their wives of Tecumseh, drove out to the residence Elwin Camburn's last Wednesday night and gave him a surprise on his birthday.

Will Harring had his collar bone broken Saturday night while riding down hill on a toboggan.

Mr. and Mrs. Delos Biddle celebrated their first wedding anniversary last Thursday night; they received presents.

The Baptist Donation was well attended. Over 100 people ate supper and many went home without supper on account of the lateness of the hour.

FARMERS' UNION.

The Farmers Union met at Frank Davidson's Friday, Jan. 27th. It was a very pleasant evening, and Mr. Davidson's house was so well filled that there was scarcely standing room. The program was well carried out, and the question box proved to be interesting and entertaining. The next meeting was appointed at Mr. John VanVleet's. Friday evening, Feb. 10, when the following program will be presented:

Music—Choir.
Recitation—Jennie Sanford.
Declamation—Bert Rlood.
Inst. Music—John VanVleet and Son.
Select Read.—Loana Davidson.
Recitation—Bernie Waring.
Question—How are farmer's benefitted by the crop reports as taken by the Supervisor's. Opened by Wm. Hopkin's, followed by B. F. DePuy, M. Smeltzer, Wm. Raymond E.C. VanVleet and others.
Question for Feb. 24th.—Growing, caring for and feeding roots.

EMMA BROWN, Secy.

ONSTED ODDS.

Howard's mill yard is chuck full of logs.

D. F. Aldrich takes the cake in skunk hunting in this locality. He caught eleven in one-half day, getting nine out of one hole—Whew!

The ship timber that has been got out this winter in this vicinity is being hauled to the depot grounds ready for shipment in the spring, and the staves that Detroit parties have been getting out are also being put into the yard ready for shipping. Will and Fred Daniels have the job drawing the staves.

Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Aldrich started on Thursday of last week on a tour through the central part of the State and intend to be absent about two weeks.

A goodly number of the grange fraternity surprised their brother, Uncle Geo. Sheeler, on Tuesday of last week, and passed the day with music and story telling, listening to Uncle George's recital of the primeval days of this locality, and as twilight began to gather, the guests took their departure after wishing their kind host a happy career during the remainder of his life.

A debating club has been organized in Dist. No. 5, North Rome, with the following officers:

Prest.—Miner Townsend.
Vice Prest.—Bert Kimball.
Secretary—Eda Kimball.
Assist. Sec.—Lewis Hallett.
Treas.—Andrew Johncox.

Meetings will be held on Thursday evenings of each week until further notice.

W. C. Sharpe of Brooklyn, is canvassing in this locality in the interest of the Wilcox & White Organ Co., of Meridian, Conn., and we will say where the instruments have been tried they have given good satisfaction.

Ice houses in this vicinity have all been filled with a first-class article this winter.

Wilmer Knapp has moved in Jacob Russell's farm house south of town.

A gentleman from Illinois is working up this town and getting history for the history of Lenawee Co., that will be published in the near future. He has his headquarters at Supervisor Maxwell's at present.

This vicinity is being gone over by D. Coryell of Woodstock in the interest of the Adrian Times and family physician.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

A good many people are sick with severe colds.

Rodman Taylor is slowly recovering from the accident he met with; it seems indeed a marvelous escape for a man nearly 80 years of age.

Uncle Perry Allen is very feeble and suffers a great deal of severe pain, probably neuralgia. Aunt Ann his wife, is also very poorly; one day last week while suffering with a severe neuralgic spasm, she applied a hot brick to her stomach; the pain was so intense that she did not feel the heat and received a severe burn therefrom which proves very sore and troublesome.

Mrs. Ada Kemp has been very dangerously sick, but we understand is some better.

Mrs. Geo. Allen remains about the same; she suffers greatly from nausea almost all the time.

A little bird of Mrs. Hann's, while taking its daily exercise alighted near the window, when the family cat jumped upon the window sill outside, and the poor little bird dropped dead, literally killed by fright.

Rev. Mr. Pierce and Putman were each the victim of a donation party on the 24th ult.

We understand the members of the M. E. church at Tipton contemplate giving an old folks concert sometime in the near future.

L. J. Whelan entertained a few friends Jan. 20, with music and dancing; an elegant and substantial repast was served and, "All went merry as a marriage bell." E. J. never does things by half.

Prof. Walker has been visiting the schools the past week.

The Franklin Literary society has met regularly all the time your humble correspondent has been silent. On Jan. 13th, it met at the house of G. W. Allen where a "good old fashioned time" was expected. On the night of Jan. 27th, Mr. Ben Lamkin opened wide his hospitable doors to the shivering beings who ceased very soon to shiver in his warm and pleasant home. The evening spent proved one of the pleasantest of the season; the literary part of the exercises was very enjoyable. A declamation by Miss Luella Taylor, "Out o' the Fire" was particularly fine and well rendered; the music by Messrs. Spaulding, Simmons & McCollum was enjoyed by all; some extracts were read from a paper dated March 19th, 1868, which was gotten up by the society and read at an exhibition held in the old stone school-house in that year. After intermission the question, Resolved, that ownership in land should be limited by government, was taken up and discussed and decided in favor of the Aff. Adjourned to meet at the residence of A. D. Hunt, Feb. 10th, where the following program will be carried out:

Inst. Music—H. Davenport and S. Simmons.
Recitation—Stella Wisner.
Declamation—Carl Wisner.
Recitation—Lulu Hanes.
Biog.—G. W. Allen.
Song—Nina Allen.
Rec.—Effie Burroughs.
Dec.—Alton Wheaton.
Sel. Rea.—Bertha Taylor.
Dec.—H. Davenport.
Rec.—Ruth Taylor.
Song—Ula Burroughs.
Rec.—Nina Allen.
Dec.—Newell Wisner.
Gleanings—Ella Munger.
Essay—Minnie Wisner.
Dec.—Howard McCollum.
Rec.—Inez Allen.
Dec.—Seth Simmons.
Ins. Music—E. Spaulding, H. McCollum, J. S. Allen.
History of the Society—A. B. Wisner.
Question—Resolved, That monopoly is a greater evil than intemperance. J. S. Allen, Aff.; G. Allen, Neg.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Mrs. A. W. Kelley is at present on the sick list and is confined to the bed

Hello, Jack! Hello, Bill! Well, old boy, how are you this morning? Say Jack, did you see Jim Sutherland come to the store the other morning with a smile all over his face? Yes, Bill, I did, and what on earth ailed him? Well, I'll just tell you: he is the father of a nice little girl, born on Jan. 25. Well, that's enough to make anyone smile, and I don't blame him any, do you Bill?

A. F. Gordon spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents in this place.

Vern Hoxsie made good his escape from the city of Detroit last Sunday afternoon and came to this village to "rust up" or more properly rusticate. That's right, Vern, you have studied physiology long enough to know a person doesn't want to stay in the city too long.

"Ha, ha, ha! By jolly!" We are to lose the young man who is always saying the foregoing. He is to take a position in the C., J. & M. depot at Tecumseh—just to learn, that's all.

Quite a little excitement sometimes prevails at the drug store. Byron has a target gun, with which our brave Nimrods practice for the foresk.

Fannie Kelley spent last Saturday at the Raisin Valley seminary.

Bert and Bertha Holdridge returned to the residence of his father Wednesday evening of last week. They have been living for about eight months in Kansas, and according to Bert's conversation we should judge that they think old Michigan is the stuff yet.

Another link welded into the chain of surprises Thursday evening, Jan'y 26th, at the residence of M. H. Bowen. A large crowd was present and a fine time reported.

Seymour Barrett and John Campbell made a business trip to Adrian last Saturday. Bill Blone followed suit and Walt trumped in.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The young folks have improved the light nights and fine sleighing.

Quite a delegation of the W. C. T. U. went to Britton to attend the meeting at Mrs. Chas. DeBaix Saturday.

Phillip Parks has been visiting in the village and vicinity for several days past.

Ed Freer, of Mason, visited friends here last week.

Mrs. George Cone, of Hudson, spent upwards of a week with O. H. Montgomery and wife and Mrs. Jno. Arner.

Mrs. Thomas Lupton and William Larkin and family a visit last week.

Lulu Rappleye visited friends at Dundee last week.

Mrs. Libbie Mason, of Morenci, was the guest of S. V. Miller and family last week.

Mrs. R. T. Bush took her folks by surprise Saturday morning by breaking in upon them unexpectedly. She left Monday night for Chicago, where she will meet Mr. Bush and make a western tour.

Frank Gove and wife, of North Adrian, spent Monday with his brother, C. M. Gove, and family.

Upwards of fifty friends from northeast Raisin made John VanVleet and family a surprise last week Tuesday night, and spent a pleasant evening.

The Farmers' Union will meet at the home of John VanVleet Friday evening of next week. Mr. V. extends a cordial invitation to all his friends to come.

Several from the village went to Frank Davidson's to attend the Farmers' Union, held there on Friday evening of last week, and report a grand time.

Although the night was very stormy the attendance at the donation last week was exceedingly large. The Miller band furnished music during the evening, and all seemed to have a pleasant time. The receipts amounted to a little over $100.

Some of the village people joined with the friends over south and of Raisin, and made T. H. Montgomery and wife a surprise Monday night and had an old-fashioned evening visit.

We are informed that G. W. Arner, of Augusta, was married to Miss Libbie Emmonds, last week. We extend to the happy couple our congratulations.

The public entertainment for which the L. C. S. are preparing will be held Wednesday evening, Feb. 15th, instead of the 17th, on account of the farmers' institute to be held at Tecumseh on the 16th and 17th. Full particulars given next week.

Prof. A. F. Clark, of Saline, was in the village last week and organized a singing class. It will be held at the school house every Thursday from 3 to 5 p. m. The first hour will be entirely devoted to teaching the rudiments, the second hour to voice training and reading music. Tickets 50 cents, or $1 for family.

The W. C. T. U. will give a mask social at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Beevers next week Tuesday evening. It is the wish of the Union that all mask. Hot coffee and doughnuts will be furnished by the society at ten cents apiece. A special invitation is extended to the friends of Britton, Macon, Tecumseh and Raisin, as Mrs. Beevers has a large house.

A. J. Monaghan, who has been selling medicine in this section for the past two years, has established an agency here with S. P. Smith.

Go and hear Rev. Geo. Vibbert at Grange hall next Wednesday evening, February 8th. Subject, "The saloon and its effect on business."

The monthly meeting of the W. F. M. society will be held at the home of Mrs. D. W. Loree next week Wednesday afternoon. A full attendance is desired, as it is the time for the annual election and the retiring officers declare they will cease to perform longer. It will depend on a good attendance if the society exists after the time set for the election.

It is So

That we are daily guaranteeing Kemp's Sarsaparilla to the people. After taking three-fourths of a bottle without relief, we will refund the money. It is the greatest and best remedy in the market for cleansing the blood and giving you a new lease of life. A well known business man informs us he has gained 8 pounds on two bottles of this Sarsaparilla. Price 1.00. For sale by Baker & Hall.

There was an old fashioned big crowd in town last Saturday.

The cleansing, antiseptic and healing qualities of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are unequalled.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB —

A FARMER ON THE TARIFF.

In Kiskilwa, Illinois, lives a farmer statesman, who has had a pioneer experience. When the abolition sentiment was beginning to crystalize years ago, Whiting was one of Owen Lovejoy's advance trumpeters, sounding the new doctrine on the western border. He afterwards became a Republican, and was a warm personal friend of John A. Logan. He was sent to the state legislature many three occasions to party caucus to made the speeches which nominated Mr. Logan for the United States senate. His claim to statesmanship is thus established. Now this plain, blunt, honest farmer has been a student of political economy as well as of politics, and his views upon the tariff question are especially interesting because it has been charged by the trickling Republican press that the president and the Democratic party are making a special fight upon the farming interest. Mr. Whiting is now engaged in delivering tariff reform lectures to the farmers of Illinois. His views will be interesting to the readers of the HERALD, and some of them are here reproduced.

DARING AND SUFFERING.

History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Wild Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Sufferings of the Leader and His Party.

The capture, in the darling of its inception, backing success of a Romance which in the Romantic and Picturesque Dining results it sought and which consolidated a was also short-lived.—JOHN, ADVOCATE GENERAL, HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SECRETARY CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.) APPEAL.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could undertake in America.—COMTE DE PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,
A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

While going thus they were greatly stimulated and hurried by now the smoke and steam of the Yonah, which they could see across the long bend on their side of Etowah river. If they could only make the distance, a little more than a mile, they were safe. The road ran the branch! With all their power, these men working for their lives, they drove forward. They were soon to soon. The engine was on the main track still, and the tender was just being turned on the half moon turn table, preparatory to starting back. But the people there saw the furiously driven hand car, with the shouting, excited men on it, and at once suspended their work and gathered around to know the cause of these frantic gestures. Fuller had not much breath left to spend in talking, but managed to say that the Yankees had taken his train, and that he wanted their engine, and all of them with their guns to fall in behind. He, with every man of his party, was well known and there was no stopping to question. Their very appearance, streaming with sweat and almost exhausted, bore witness to the urgency of their mission. A score of strong arms whirled back the tender on the turn table, and pushed it and an empty coal car up to the engine, while a number of Confederate soldiers who were waiting to take the next train southward to Big Shanty, piled in also.

Now they were off with a strong, well armed party, and the chase was on more equal terms. "The Yonah," in the words of Fuller, "was not a strong engine, but had large wheels, was as active as a cat, and with a light load would run very fast." She was now "just in the service adapted to her, and her drivers called out all her powers. As they flew over the ground, it was a refreshing contrast to the exertions on foot or hand car. The thirteen miles were made in sixteen minutes. If the extra trains at Kingston only entangled us as long as Fuller hoped, the whole affair would soon be brought to a final issue. He did not dread the fight that was likely to follow, for our pursuer was only reported even yet by those who had seen us working as eight, while he had some twenty well armed men with him at this stage of the journey, and there were the crews of the four or five trains at Kingston. Indeed, Fuller and Murphy might be excused if they rather feared that "the Yankees" might be captured before they arrived.

CHAPTER VII.

TERRIBLE SUSPENSE.

But where were we while this train was flying toward us? Lying still on the side track at the left hand of Kingston station, those agonies of suspense and intense alternations of hope and fear which were harder to bear than all the exertions of Fuller and his companions! The local freight train came as previously narrated, and had drawn down the road to let the extra follow it, and still give us room to haul out above. Long and tedious was the waiting. But when we almost despaired the extra came. But alas! on this train, also, was a red flag! On being questioned as to the meaning of another train, the conductor said that there were too many cars and too great a load for one engine, and that another section was made up, and would be along shortly. The delay for these two trains had already been little less than an hour, and here was a third train still blocking the road before us! How Andrews wished that he had taken the risk of running out in the face of the first extra and had tried to make, at least, the station above! We could easily have succeeded. But now, in the absence of some telegraphic message—and no report was made to that office, while Andrews hardly thought it prudent to telegraph for instructions—it would be madness to run out between the two sections of a belated train. It was better to wait, even if that entailed the risk of a fight. For this possibility Andrews made ready; he said to Knight:

"Go back and tell the boys, without attracting attention, that we have to wait for a train that is behind time, and for them to be ready to jump at the signal, if needed, and fight."

Knight sauntered carelessly along down the train, just as if he was tired to death with waiting and did not know what to do with himself; and leaning against our car, without turning his head or eyes toward us, said in a low tone which we heard perfectly:

"Boys, we have to wait for a train that is a little behind time, and the folks around are getting mighty uneasy and suspicious. Be ready to jump out, if you are called, and let them have it hot and fast."

We did not know how many of the "uneasy folks" there might be about; and so unbearable had become the suspense of being shut up in that dark car, and hearing the sound of voices outside, without being able to distinguish the words or know what was going on, that a command to spring out and begin a deadly strife would have been welcomed as a relief, without much regard to numbers. We said we were ready; we had been ready at any time the last hour. Still we carefully examined the priming of every revolver, and saw that reserve ammunition was in pockets within easy reach. We did not intend, if it came to a fight, to shoot at long range, but to close right in, where every shot would be deadly. That we could, with the surprise of an unexpected assault, and firing each gun to kill, have cleared the station of four times our number, I have never doubted.

Could any situation be imagined by poet or novelist more trying than that of this carload of Union soldiers shut up in the midst of Confederate trains!

[illegible] outside which was may as quiet as Knight had described it, in any such unusual manner. Another [illegible] his post with unparalleled skill. The engineer, and especially the old veteran leader, seemed to scent something out of many questions were asked as to why Fuller, with "an regular train," who had passed the road at Allatoona half an hour before us, was so long in coming. [illegible] generally supposed that we were only [illegible] to let the train pass. The conductor of the local freight train, who had taken his train to the side track at a time very inconvenient to himself, was quite out in the sulks. [illegible] and the engineer of the extra, who had [illegible] to one engineer to [illegible] I think there was another train, [illegible] from the direction we were [illegible] expected, though, I think, there was another train, [illegible] Andrews, Knight, Brown, and Wilson, who were outside, declared that they did not see the slightest indication of fear, chagrin or impatience on the part of Andrews, save what he exhibited when telling how much Beauregard was in need of his ammunition, and what a shame it was that the road should be blocked by any ordinary travel when the fate of their brave soldiers was trembling in the balance. Andrews had explained that it was because he could not get his orders filled without ruinous delays by the ordinary channels that Beauregard had sent him to bring this powder through by force, if necessary, and declared that if the officers at home did not support the army in the field better, martial law would soon be proclaimed. Such grumbling and threats were applauded by those who wished to be thought especially loyal to the Confederate cause. For at least half an hour no distrust was shown.

The hour and five minutes we were at this station, added to our two hours' run, made us now three hours and five minutes from Big Shanty. Fuller was three hours and nine minutes on the way. He came in sight of Kingston just four minutes after we had glided around the sharp northward curve beyond; so near were we to the final collision at this place.

As soon as we were well out of sight of the station we stopped, and Scott, with a man at each foot to give him a start, was in a moment at the top of the telegraph pole, the box was knocked off and the wire cut. We wanted no message of inquiry sent ahead, preferring ourselves to tell the story of the impressed powder train and Beauregard's need of ammunition. While this was being done, others threw a few obstructions on the track. When once more on board we noticed a quickening of speed that after our long rest was delightful. We had been running slowly since leaving Big Shanty, but now Andrews said to his crew, "Push her, boys, push her." Wilson heaped in the wood, and the fire, which was but moderate when we left Kingston, was soon roaring and great clouds of smoke escaping. Our leader's intention was to reach Adairsville in a few minutes, in order to meet two trains there which were now overdue, southern passenger trains, and they would wait for us. "Fuller's train" is there. Our terrible delay in Kingston was in every way most unfortunate. If there had been no extra trains we could by this time have been at Dalton, forty miles further up the road, and beyond all pursuit. But instead of being ahead of our pursuers, these two trains passed, leaving no further serious obstacle to our speedy run.

THE BOX WAS KNOCKED OFF.

But while so anxious to reach Adairsville the next station above, where there was a side track, it would never do to leave the way open from Kingston, as the distance is only [illegible] miles, and the enemy might come up in a running train at any point, on account of sleeping engines. To obviate this, it was decided that we should run back a mile or two and there await the coming of our pursuers. [illegible] the train, and, without stopping to do so, cunningly watched the operator. The attempt to telegraph any kind of a message up the line would have probably brought on a disastrous collision.

Brown gives us a curious little episode as occurring here. He noticed a man who watched Andrews for a short time and then, when no one else was near, stepped close to him and handed him a large and seemingly well filled envelope. Andrews smiled and placed it in his vest pocket. Brown intending to ask about it, but more pressing business put it out of his mind. Probably this was an incident of Andrews' contraband trade, and the package contained an order for goods, with the money to pay for them.

Fuller and his party were now not many time toward us than had ever been made on that road before. But we knew nothing of that—supposed that we were still an hour ahead of any pursuit that could be imagined. We had been at this place "one hour and five minutes." It seemed to those shut up in the box car nearer half a day! And when the whistle of a train was heard, which fortunately for us was first from the north—not the pursuing train from the south—it was about as welcome as the boom of Mitchel's cannon, with which we expected to be greeted in the evening when our work was done. This last extra came up to the platform as the others had done, and was at once ordered by Andrews to draw on down the road that we might have room to go out. The conductor obeyed without hesitation, and this obstruction was removed.

It only remained to adjust the switch so that we might again get on the main track. This Andrews directed the old switch tender to do, but he had been getting in a worse and worse humor for the whole of the last hour; he had hung up his keys, and now roughly declared that he would not take them down again until Andrews showed him by what authority he was ordering everybody about as if he owned the whole road. We who were shut up in the box car heard the hoarse and angry voice, and supposed that the time for us to get had come; for we waited for our leader's command as we remembered how he had counseled us against being too precipitate. But he only laughed softly as if the anger of the old man amused him, and saying, "I have no more time to waste with you," he walked into the station, to the place where he had seen the keys put up, and taking them down, went quietly and swiftly out and made the change himself. The tender's wrath knew no bounds at this; he stormed, declared he would have Andrews arrested, would report him, and many other things. Andrews then waved his hand to the engineer, and as our locomotive came promptly up he stepped on board, and we glided out on the main track and were off!

It had been a fearful ordeal, but it was well met. The three men, Brown, Knight and Wilson, who were outside, declared that they did not see the slightest indication of fear, chagrin or impatience on the part of Andrews, save what he exhibited when telling how much Beauregard was in need of his ammunition, and what a shame it was that the road should be blocked by any ordinary travel when the fate of their brave soldiers was trembling in the balance. Andrews had explained that it was because he could not get his orders filled without ruinous delays by the ordinary channels that Beauregard had sent him to bring this powder through by force, if necessary, and declared that if the officers at home did not support the army in the field better, martial law would soon be proclaimed. Such grumbling and threats were applauded by those who wished to be thought especially loyal to the Confederate cause. For at least half an hour no distrust was shown.

The hour and five minutes we were at this station, added to our two hours' run, made us now three hours and five minutes from Big Shanty. Fuller was three hours and nine minutes on the way. He came in sight of Kingston just four minutes after we had glided around the sharp northward curve beyond; so near were we to the final collision at this place.

As soon as we were well out of sight of the station we stopped, and Scott, with a man at each foot to give him a start, was in a moment at the top of the telegraph pole, the box was knocked off and the wire cut. TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 2 1888.

[illegible] FARMERS' CLUB.

This club met at B. Hurry's, Jan. 24th. Lewis Waldron in the chair. Resolutions upon the death of sister Fay DePuy were read and adopted.

Program for the next meeting which is to be held at Mr. A. VanValkenburg's read. A meeting was appointed to be held four weeks from this night at A. K. Waldrons: committee on program Mr. and Mrs. Wm Waldron and Dolly Waldron.

The following program was carried out:

Ins. Solo—Miss Amy Alexander.
Declamation—Harry Hoag.
Song—Hattie Hurry.
Reading—Miss Lilly Brown.
Inst. Duett—Miss Alexander and Miss Hurry.
Reading—Mrs. Wm. Fisher.
Song—Mrs. Allen Wells.
Question—Which is the most profitable kind of farm fence to build?

Geo. Swartz gave some figures on different kinds of fence, the following estimate of cost was given:

Slat and wire per rod	[illegible]0
Post and board	[illegible]5
Rail, stake and ridder	[illegible]0
Straight rail	[illegible]45

[illegible] the best.

Mr. Hoag had some experience in hedge and thought it was the "coming fence." Was favorably inclined to slat and wire fence.

Mr. Hurry thought we should have larger fields and consequently less fence. Thought the old rail fence would last longer and cost less for repairs than any other at present.

Mr. O. Alexander had some experience in straight rail fence, thought it economized old rails, thought if slat and wire were used the slats should be hard wood.

H. Wilson was inclined to favor slat and wire fence had heard of instances of their standing 20 years.

L. M. Waldron gave figures on rail fence. Instances were given of rail fences standing 50 years and were pretty good yet.

Cost of rail fence, 9 acres	$763 20
Slat and wire	48 60

Rail occupies 3 acres of ground; slat and wire, one acre.

The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting of Franklin and Tecumseh Farmers' Club, Jan. 25th, 1888.

WHEREAS, It has been [illegible] to remove by death, our respected member and friend, Mrs. Fay DePuy, therefore

Resolved, That while we shall sorely miss her from our meetings, we submissively bow to the will of Him who is wiser than we.

Resolved, That we the members of the Tecumseh and Franklin Club extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and relatives.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the Secretary's book. Also a copy presented to the husband of the deceased.

MR. AND MRS. H. [illegible], Committee.

EAST RAISIN FARMERS CLUB.

Jan. 24th, 1888, meeting was well attended, and though several were absent who were to take part, the literary program was well carried out.

After recess the topic, "The best and most economical method of fencing a farm" was discussed as follows:

Willis Chatfield—I have about two rods of rail fence on the farm which amounts to about $400 invested in fencing, counting the rails at $10 per m. and saying nothing about the stakes and wire and about 5 acres of ground occupied. A rail fence will decrease 10 per m value each year making the annual cost of keeping up the fence $50 which I think is very expensive. I have a short piece of barbed wire fence and am well pleased with it. Have never heard of stock being hurt when in good repair. It is much cheaper and occupies less room than rail fence.

W. E. Doty—I have seen all kinds of fence and think a rail fence staked and wired as good as any we have. I have one that stood 40 years. Board fence is the poorest as stock will break it down as fast as a man can fix it if they once get in the notion. I have had stock killed by the rail road wire fence when it was in good repair. The slat and wire fence will be the coming fence if it proves durable.

George Holloway thinks picket fence will be the coming fence as it takes less room than rail fence and can be made out of small timber. He sawed 2½ cords of picket bolts and obtained 900 pickets—enough for 30 rods of fence. Was told by a friend that wire and picket fence cost 65cts per rod including work and all the materials.

N. Spencer's experience has been with the old rail fence, but thinks by educating the stock to it the barbed wire fence is as safe as any and much cheaper. The post raises the slat and wire fence out of the ground and in a few years it is blown over.

R. M. Boyd's experience has been far from satisfactory with the Dayton Hedge Co., and thinks hedge can be obtained much cheaper by buying plants, but does not like hedge fence, and thinks slat and wire fence by far the best.

J. Lane thinks we must discard the rail fence as it takes up too much room and is a nuisance; crib rubbish. Three boards and a wire strung along the top makes a good fence, but the slat and wire fence is still better.

A. Richard thinks quick hedge can be kept in repair cheaper than rail fence, but it must be attended to every year and broken posts must be replaced or the whole fence will go down. Barbed wire fence is a painful necessity on the prairies but is not desirable where timber can be obtained. A man might be educated to keep away from it but it would be difficult to educate a brute to do so. He thinks the name should be changed from barbed wire to barbarous wire.

Program for Feb. 8th:

Recitation—Mary Rogers.
Reading—Dora Anthony.
Dialogue—Will Wilson and John Richard.
Debate—Aff.—Rev. T. M. Belden and Caleb Satterthwaite. Neg.—W. Chatfield and L. Spencer.
Question—Resolved, that local option is beneficial to the cause of temperance.
Inst. Solo—F. H. Hillman.
Vocal Duet—Dora Anthony and Luella Billmeyer.
Inst. Duet—Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Richard.

In our report of Jan. 10, the paper credited to Geo. Spaulding should have been credited to Geo. R. Holden.

DEATH OF DANIEL WILLIAMS.

The death on Sunday evening of Daniel Williams removes one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Buffalo and one who was a resident here more than 50 years ago. He was born at Brooklyn, Ct., on March 3, 1809, and was consequently nearly 70 years old. In 1834 he moved to Huron, O., and during the same year was married to Miss Emily Huntington of Windham, Ct. The family remained but two years in Ohio, removing to Buffalo in 1836, where Mr. Williams engaged in the grocery trade in company with his brother, John R. Williams. A village directory of 1840 mentions the firm and locates it in the old Postoffice Block, though Mr. Williams was no longer a resident here. He had removed to Tecumseh, Mich., after remaining in Buffalo about two years. He lived in Michigan until 1853, when he returned to Buffalo and took up his permanent residence. He was principally interested in the lake trade and for a number of years up to the time of his retirement from business was connected with the New York Central line of steamers, which is now known as the Western Transit Line, though the exact identity has not been maintained. The line was for some time under the management of the late Sheldon Pease. Mr. Williams retired from business ten years ago and for the past five years has been an invalid. For this reason he has not lately been so entirely identified with the business and social affairs of the city as he otherwise would have been.

Few men leave behind them a better record of a life well spent than Mr. Williams. He was quiet and unobtrusive a true friend, and a liberal citizen and always commanded the respect and esteem of those who knew him. He leaves two sons, John L. Williams of Buffalo and Gurdon H. Williams of Goodrich, Tenn., and one daughter, Miss Mary H. Williams. A third son, Charley G. Williams, died some time ago. The funeral will be held from the family house, No. 270 North Street, at 2 P. M. to-morrow.

The above is taken from the Buffalo Express of Monday, Jan. 23d. Many of our older residents will remember Mr. Williams, who lived in Tecumseh for several years away back in the forties. He was postmaster here during the administration of Taylor and Fillmore, the office being kept in the store now occupied by George Heesen. Upon the inauguration of President Pierce a change was made in the postmastership and shortly after Mr. Williams returned with his family to Buffalo, where he has resided ever since. During his residence here he made many warm friends and took rank among our most exemplary citizens.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Ettie Karcher came down with scarlet fever Saturday, on account of which school has been closed indefinitely.

Miss Minnie Greenfield is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Charles Avery sawed 5,000 fence pickets for G. V. Osgood Saturday.

L. W. Sowles has sold his farm of 93 acres to John Beckley.

The friends of F. W. Yates to the number of about fifty called on him Friday night without sending word. They took oysters and "such" and had a jolly time.

Two sleigh loads repaired to W. Schreder's Friday night to trip the light fantastic.

Our telegraph line is booming at both ends. The objective point is Tecumseh.

Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert will speak at Grange hall, Macon, on Wednesday, Feb. 8th. Subject, "The Saloon and its effect upon business." It will be the first speech in the local option campaign in the township, and all should attend. Admission free.

At Night always have Acker's Baby Soother at hand. It is the only safe medicine yet made that will remove all infantile disorders. It contains no Opium or Morphine, but gives the child natural ease from pain. Price 25 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

THE LOCAL OPTION QUESTION.

FIRST OLD TOPER—"I say, Jack, how d' yer stand on Local Option?"

SECOND OLD TOPER—"Well, Bill, to tell the truth I don't stand much anyway, but standin' or settin' I'm agin it."

BARTENDER—"And the chances is I'll have ter shut up shop. It beats thunder now the women and the ministers is ruinin' bizness."

MACON GRANGE.

Macon Grange met in regular session Jan 28th, with a good attendance. After going through with the order of business, the officers for the ensuing year were enstalled. Wm. H. Osborn acting as installing officer, assisted by Wm. H. Mather.

The new annual word is a very suggestive one and we hope those that have not received it will be present at the next meeting and receive it.

A called meeting of Macon Grange will be held on Friday Feb 10th, at 1 o'clock P. M. sharp, for the purpose of doing regular work. A good program is expected also.

M. J. MARTIN Sec.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM.

Mr. Asa B. Rowley, Druggist, was induced to try some of the Papillon Catarrh Cure by his customers, after several physicians predicted he would soon have consumption from an aggravated case of Catarrh. He says: "The result was unprecedented, I commenced to get well after the first application, and am now, after a few weeks, entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure will do all that is claimed for it. Large bottles $1.00.

The multitude of valuable pictures strikes one as the February WIDE AWAKE is opened. The frontispiece is an etching of that model American boy John Quincy Adams, at the age of sixteen, very quaint, with powdered hair, ruffled shirt, round cheeks and smiling mouth. It accompanies the second paper in Mrs. Upton's "Children of the White House" series, "The Children of John Adams," which has eighteen illustrations, from paintings by Stuart, Copley, Brown and others, drawings by Bridgman, and reproductions of some little diaries kept by the future statesman when a little boy.

MARY, I think you had better try Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam for your cold, for I hear nothing but the highest praise for it.

CLARA, how is the baby? Oh, he is as chirp as a lark. That Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam is a great remedy. Three doses relieved his suffering, and he was ready for play.

Poultry and Pet Stock.

Pursuant to a call, the poultry breeders of Lenawee county met in the supervisor's room last Friday. After a short preliminary meeting an association was formed, under the name of the Lenawee county poultry and pet stock association, and the following officers elected:

President—Chas. A. Waldron, Tecumseh.
Secretary—C. D. Keyes, Clinton.
Treasurer—J. C. McCrillis, Munson.
Executive Com.—A. G. Hall, Tecumseh; A. J. Chappell, Adrian; Henry Barnes, Ridgeway; J. D. Templeton, Blissfield.

There will be a vice president for each ward and township represented in the association. The membership fee is $1.00. The Ex. Com. will meet at Adrian, on Friday Feb. 17th, at 10 A. M. for consultation.

A FAVORITE WITH THE FAIR SEX.

Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure is superior to all the much-advertised skin beautifiers with the advantage of being beneficial, and not like the mineral preparations usually sold which are very poisonous. It will remove all inflammation, chafing and roughness of the skin, sunburn, freckles and unseemly blotches, and leave the cuticle fair and soft as an infant's. An actual necessity for the complete toilet table. Large bottles only $1.00.

The chief interest of the unique February Magazine of American History centers about the writings and the portraits of the illustrious Washington. It is substantially a Washington number—a striking birthday tribute to Washington's memory. Twenty-eight unpublished Washington letters grace its pages, twenty-six having been copied from originals in the British Museum and edited by Mr. William Henry Smith of the Associated Press, who shows with much skill, in parallel columns, how Sparks altered and amended letters of Washington which he partially printed. The editor in the opening article gives some welcome information about the various Washington portraits—of which the Magazine, prior to this issue, has published eighteen—and also some vivid pictures of Washington's social life in New York as our first President. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

Persons desirous of obtaining life insurance at actual cost, should write for circulars to the SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY, No. 233 Broadway, New York.

We have just received a new piece of music, called "Silver Bell Waltz," by the popular composer, Charley Baser, which we can recommend to our readers as very good, it not being too difficult and at the same time very showy. It can be played on the piano or organ, and will be sent at the special price of only 11-2c. stamps. Address J. C. Groene & Co., 30 and 46 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.

The Hudson Gazette of last week says:

The Adrian Press and Tecumseh Herald both solemnly announced to their readers that there would be an eclipse of the moon last Friday, whereas the interesting exhibition is not due till to-morrow, the 28th. Scove hadn't better call on Stearns again till after the local option law goes into effect.

The problem which now puzzles us is whether Stearns stole the item from the HERALD or whether Stacy stole it from the Press.

Anderson's Dry Goods store was closed for invoicing yesterday. This morning the store was opened with a new firm in control: Webb Anderson retires, and the remaining partners, S. W. Anderson, Fred Rosacrans and J. L. Anderson continue the business under the firm name of Anderson & Co. "Webb" has been a leader in the drygoods trade of Lenawee county for nearly twenty years and he leaves the firm with a good competence. We regret to part with him but are glad that he will remain a citizen of Tecumseh. The new firm will continue in the same location and will undoubtedly prove a worthy successor to the former organization.

The horse found on the hill Sunday night proves to be a livery rig from Tecumseh. It was left in front of a residence there unhitched, while the young man in charge entered the house, returning and finding it gone he gave chase as far as Lenawee Junction. There all trace was lost. Although the horse had run all the distance from Tecumseh, the cutter was not injured in the least.—Adrian Times.

In the list of eligible bachelors being published in the Detroit Evening News, we find the following notice of an old Tecumseh boy:

SMALLIDGE, FRANK, on the better side of 30, pleasing in his manners sociable and given to society, holds the ribbons over a spanking roadster, runs a natty little drug store on the avenue, is a favorite salesman with fair customers, is keeping on top in the everlasting struggle, is well worth angling for and doesn't care a cent who his wife may be just so she's kind, wealthy, pretty, intelligent, musical, domestic, stylish, young and angelic. Make your applications.

The next regular meeting of the Lenawee county horticultural society will be held at the court house, in the supervisors' room, on Wednesday, Feb. 8. The meeting will be called at 10 A. M. Subject for forenoon session: "The best five varieties of pears for home use." Afternoon session: "The best mode of setting, pruning, and caring for young fruit trees." Paper by D. G. Edmiston. Recitation by Mary C. Allis. Dinner will be served at noon, consisting of oysters. The ladies of the society will bring the dishes required.

The Tecumseh Lumber Co is the name of the new firm that began business the first of February where the O. & M. Coal & Mfg. were located. The affairs of the old company have finally been adjusted, and the property passes into new hands. The present company is composed of some of our heaviest men financially together with Mr. Bradley of Bay City. It will be a strong reliable company and will undoubtedly do a good business. S. W. Temple will act as general manager of the new concern, assisted by competent men in all departments of the business.

One of Tecumseh's promising young men "blowed in" his week's salary on a livery rig last Sunday afternoon and accompanied by his best girl started for a ride through the country. The happy pair had proceeded about two miles south of the village on the Adrian road and were enjoying themselves as only a young couple can, when the cutter struck an extra-high snow-drift and careened gracefully over, spilling them out. The young man held on to the girl, but released his hold of the lines, and the horse continued on its way in blissful ignorance of the sad plight he had left his load. The couple concluded that the walking was good enough for them, and they proceeded to hoof it back to town. The horse was found near the Wabash depot in Adrian that night and brought back the next day.

Jno. Mason of Adrian was in town Monday.

Chet Haynes will move to Owosso instead of Bay City.

Mrs. F. C. Steepel of Detroit was in town three days this week.

The Page wire fence company will soon commence operations at Adrian.

Lent is rapidly approaching, but the Old Folks of this town will dance before it arrives.

Chairman Samuel Dickie, of the Prohibition National Committee, is circulating through West Virginia this week.

Grandon's Graphic, published at Charleston, West Virginia is one of the spiciest papers we have seen. It is red hot prohibition.

Miss Eunice Davidson of Tecumseh is canvassing in Hudson for a work entitled "The Story of a Great Nation," and is meeting with good success.

Mr. and Mrs. Gage and daughter, Mrs. Hale and two children, are preparing to go to California the 20th, with the intention of making it their future home.

About 41 members of Beers Post, G. A. R. took a sleigh-ride out to Chas. Schwartz's farm west of the village Tuesday evening and gave him a pleasant surprise and enjoyed a pleasant evening.

W. R. Bresie arrived Tuesday evening for a brief visit at his father's, Wm. Bresie's. He remains over to-night to attend the Old Folks dance. Mr. Bresie is still Assistant Supt. of the Pacific Express Co., at Decatur, Ill.

"Striving for the Mastery"—subject of sermon for next Sunday morning, Feb'y 5th at 10:30, at the Universalist church. Text I Corinthians, 9:25. In the evening, at 7 o'clock, a discourse upon "The Old Fear and the New Hope." Text II Corinthians, 5:17. All welcomed.

Vincent Wood's new map of the village has arrived and he is now taking orders for the same. We have carefully examined it and consider it the best map of the village ever issued. Every family in town should buy one. The price, mounted on rollers and varnished, is only $1.25.

Rev. Geo. H. Vibbert gave two lectures last week, Monday and Friday evenings, to good audiences, and went over the ground of the present local option issue pretty thoroughly. He is a fluent speaker, a candid and forcible reasoner. His lectures here made an excellent impression.

The injunction scheme failed to carry in Washtenaw and Jackson counties, the courts deciding that they had no authority to restrain a county clerk from calling a special election under the local option law. It would be an unwarrantable interference by the judiciary with the political rights of the people.

The many friends in Tecumseh and vicinity of Mr. W. F. Doty, of New York City, will be pained to hear of his death, which occurred at LaPorte, Ind., on Tuesday morning, after an illness of about one week. He died from an acute attack of rheumatic neuralgia. His body was taken to New York for burial.

Tuesday afternoon Chas. Pocklington, Sr., was standing at the corner of Spayde Bros.' clothing store, indulging in exceedingly loud talk and of a character unfit for the ears of respectable people and especially ladies. Officer Love tried to induce him to stop it, but failing, he was taken to the village bastile and locked up a sufficient time to reflect on the waywardness of his course, after which he was fined $2.50 and allowed to go.

Mrs. F. M. Chaplin, an old and well-known resident of this place, who occupies a part of Lou Addis's house on Pottawatamie Street, was given a very pleasant surprise on the evening of Jan. 23rd, by some of her old friends and acquaintances, who presented her with some very substantial tokens of their good will. She feels grateful to Mrs. T. Conklins, Mrs. C. J. Brewer, Mrs. D. W. Clark, Mrs. Jas. Boyd, Mrs. J. P. Slayton, Mrs. Wm. Hayden, Mrs. Dr. Fisher, Mrs. John Merritt, Mrs. J. D. Sholes, Mrs. B. J. Barwell, Mrs. Jno. Orr, Mrs. Sam'l McClure, Mrs. Albert Hyde, Mrs. T. Lilley, Mrs. Thos. Elliott, Mrs. Wm. McCowan, Mrs. J. Osborn, Mrs. Sanford, Mrs. J. Davidson and Miss R. Kingston.

The City Band are hard at work at their band room nearly every night practicing for another concert they intend to give Friday evening Feb 10. Among their selections is an anvil chorus entitled the "Jolly Blacksmiths," which will prove immense, and something new for them. Besides the anvil, will be introduced imitations of cock crowing, singing of birds and also a chorus sung by the members of the band, assisted by about 20 voices. This is out of their regular line, and would do credit to a larger organization in a city. The concert should be well patronized both on account of its merit and also to give the boys a lift in order that they may meet expenses that necessarily occur in a company of that kind. Full particulars will be given next week.

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT.

Two weeks from next Monday, on the 20th of February, the voters of Lenawee county will be called upon to decide whether the saloon business shall be legalized or prohibited in this county during the coming three years. The campaign for prohibition, which was so hotly waged last spring served to educate the people thoroughly on this subject. All the arguments pro and con were advanced upon both sides of the controversy and but little can be said now which the people have not heard before. It is a fair presumption that nearly every voter in the county has already made up his mind as to how he will cast his ballot, and it is an equally reasonable presumption that the electors of Lenawee will cast their ballots substantially as they did one year ago. All the arguments in favor of State prohibition are equally valid in favor of county prohibition. The evil effects of the liquor traffic, the misery it causes, the poverty it produces, the crime it engenders, are known of all men to-day, the same as they were in 1887. No man who favored prohibition then can vote against local option now without stultifying himself. The friends of prohibition have a safe majority of 1000 in the county. Shall they control their own forces? Shall they use the power they possess in establishing this needed reform? Shall they stand by the principle that the majority ought to rule? Or shall they sit down supinely, confident in the justice of their cause, and let the enemy steal a victory on the "still hunt" plan?

But we believe that the principle of local option, as now presented, will appeal to the sympathies of many men much more emphatically than state prohibition. It is brought home to us as a local question. It is not imposed upon us by any outside authority. We are free to examine the matter coolly and dispassionately. The liquor trade in Lenawee county effects principally the inhabitants of this county. We can vote local option down and allow the saloons, with all their contaminating influences, to remain among us, or we can vote local option up and drive the traffic beyond our borders. It is our own business. We conceive that local option is much stronger than state prohibition, as state prohibition would doubtless be much stronger than national prohibition. The chief argument used against prohibition last spring was that the law could not be be enforced, but in the present issue that argument is puerile. If the voters of Lenawee vote to adopt prohibition they certainly ought to be able to enforce the law.

An effort is made to prejudice Democrats against this movement by asserting that the Republican legislature passed the law for partizan reasons. Well, what of it? Suppose they did. It is not the first time that Republican legislatures have passed laws for party purposes. But the law has been passed. We are called upon to act under the law. The question is not whether this is the wisest and best law that could be enacted. Many men might prefer, on theory, a state prohibitory law. Others might prefer a high license law. To borrow the language of President Cleveland's patriotic message, "It is a condition that confronts us, not a theory." The retail traffic exists in this county. That it is an unmitigated evil, nine voters out of every ten in the county will admit. We now have an opportunity, under the sanction of the law and in a peaceful manner, to abate the nuisance. Shall we embrace the opportunity thus presented? That is the real question at issue. It is not a party question at all. Men of all parties and men of no party can vote on either side of this issue without endangering their party relations.

The chief danger to local option lies in the fact that its friends may rest too easy and be too sanguine of success. Over-confidence may breed disaster. With proper organization, and a systematic effort to bring every voter to the poles, the result cannot be doubtful. The friends of prohibition have a majority in this county. They must see that this majority speaks through the ballot box.

EPISCOPAL CONVOCATION.

The Southern Convocation of the Diocese of Michigan will be held (D. V.) in St. Peter's Church, Tecumseh, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb'y 7th and 8th. The program is as follows:

Morning service and communion at 10 A. M. Tuesday. The sermon will be by Rev. S. Earp, Ph D, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Ann Arbor. Alternate, Rev. B. Bevis Jones of Hillsdale. A business meeting will be held at 2 P. M. At 7:30 P. M. evening service and an essay by the Rev. M. Cooper, rector of Christ's Church, Adrian. Alternate, the Rev. G. Peters of Detroit.

The Rev. Mr. Flower is appointed to read a paper on the Rite of Confirmation. Alternate, the Rev. Mr. Brook of Monroe.

Wednesday evening a general missionary meeting.

The public are respectfully invited to attend these meetings.

B. L. Baxter, a former well-known resident of Tecumseh, has purchased the Sunday Morning Call, of Battle Creek, and with his son is "whooping" it up in great journalistic style. If he indulges in one of his old-fashioned Lenawee county laughs up there, he will "pi" the whole composing room—Adrian Press.

Thanks to our numerous exchanges for the good words spoken concerning the COURIER and its management. They are especially gratifying to us at this stage in our journalistic experience, and the kindly treatment received from the craft will be reciprocated as occasion offers.—Addison Courier.

The Michigan crop report, issued from the secretary of state's office, is devoted almost exclusively to the cost of producing the wheat, oat, corn and hay crops raised by the crop correspondents in 1887. The cost of producing and marketing one bushel of wheat in the southern four tiers of counties is found to be 72 and one-tenth cents, in the central counties 59 and one-tenth cents, in the northern counties 51 cents, and the average cost in the state 57 and five-tenths cents.

D. A. Downer is the owner of undoubtedly the best roadster in all this country. Its equal has never been known here. Not a large animal, it possesses powers of continuous action and endurance that are simply astonishing. Last Monday it took Mr. D. from Morenci to Adrian, a distance of 20 miles, in the remarkable short time of one hour and thirty-five minutes, and was by no means overtaxed.—Morenci Observer.

"Here! where did you get on?" asked the conductor of the Mackinaw Accomodation of an aged, white haired man in the corner of the caboose, as the train was whistling for Waldron. "At Hudson," replied the venerable passenger.

"No, you didn't!" retorted the ticket-puncher, "no one but a small boy took the train there."

"My dear sir," said the aged one, "I was that boy. Time makes great changes. If you don't get in the ditch again I may yet reach Alvordton before I die."

We again bring to the notice of our business men the project of an association to advance their interests and build up the town. We have recently felt the necessity of some organization of this kind. The matter of securing a competing express service or of compelling auction stores and peddlers to pay higher license, that they may bear their share of the expenses our business men have to pay in keeping up the town, are both among the objects of the B. M. A. which we have been advocating for weeks back. It is time our merchants were taking hold of this matter. It is not an experiment a theory. It has proved a great benefit to every town in Michigan that has adopted it, over a hundred in number.—Hudson Gazette.

A short time ago P. T. Barnum, in an address to business men at Bridgeport, Conn., said "You do not, any of you, advertise enough. You ought to use printer's ink every day. You are asleep and want your business to run itself. Standing advertisements in a paper command confidence. The man who for a year lives so that nothing unfavorable can be said of him, even though he be of moderate ability, will grow in the confidence and esteem of his fellows. On the same principle a newspaper advertisement becomes familiar in the eyes of the reader. It may seldom be read, still it makes the name and business of the man familiar and its presence in the columns of a paper inspires confidence in the stability of his enterprise."

If the blizzard season is to continue in the Northwest, would it be an excellent scheme to tow Alaska down the coast, cart her over into Dakota and use her as a warming pan to thaw Dakota out?

Some enterprising Yankee has suggested a project to establish a summer resort for school marms. Here is an idea for the Devils Lake Bonifaces to seize upon. A genuine hotel hustler could well afford to furnish five hundred handsome school marms with fried fish, cakes and coffee during the summer vacation gratis, as the rush of gentlemen customers with plethoric pocket-books and matrimonial ambition would be unprecedented.

The editor of the Leslie Local has struck a bonanza. He has drawn a new big dictionary in a church lottery, and is now fully armed and equipped to sling a few jaw-breaking pollysyllables at his delinquent subscribers. If he possesses the brain and muscle to use his new weapon with zeal and discretion, he can rake in a sack of buckwheat flour, a couple of cords of slippery elm wood, a bushel of ruta bagas, a gallon of hard cider, a bag of geese-feathers, a tea pot full of butter-milk, and a firkin of sauer kraut, and thus prepare himself to properly celebrate St. Valentine's Day in the bosom of his family.

Father—"The tariff, my son, is a peculiar political hocus pocus, neither man nor animal, neither flesh, fish nor fowl. The more you study it, the less you know about it. When it takes money out of your neighbor's pocket to fill your own, it is a benign and beneficent blessing. When it takes money out of your own pocket to fill your neighbor's, it is the quintessence of political villany. There, my son, go on now with your geography lesson."

Is Geo. Arbuckle, the millionare bachelor, the coffee merchant, and the victim of a $45,000 verdict for breach of promise, related in any way, to Arbuckle, the cornetist? We have no data at hand from which a reliable answer to this question can be gathered. But whether or not they are scions from the same stock, the fickle George has added several new notes to the gamut of love. Beautiful Clara Campbell, buckling down to business, won Arbuckle's heart and a promise of marriage. Letters of love passed between them, pathetic enough to pull tears from a tombstone, and numerous enough to fill a bushel basket. Matters went on swimingly until Clara's paternal ancestor took the benefit of the bankrupt law. Then Arbuckle's ardor suddenly cooled, he pined away and changed his mind. With that innate business tact peculiar to her sex, Clara had carefully housed his letters in an extra trunk, and these constituted the plaintiff's ammunition in the breach of promise suit. They were liberally interlarded with h's and k's, which, being translated into the vernacular, meant hugs and kisses. The mysterious "K. M. Q." signified in plain Anglo Saxon, "kiss me quick." Plain Clara was transformed into "Bunnie," and George himself into "Baby Bunting." This "celebrated case" contains many hints to the uninitiated. If brevity be the soul of wit, may it not be the soul of spooning also? The scale of K. M. Q. may be substituted for that of do, re, mi, and the duet "Meet me by moonlight," may be abreviated into telegraphic h's and k's. One little hint in the young lady's ear: "Keep a weather eye on the sitting room door, lest the old gent shall suddenly materialize and fire your Arbuckle out P. D. Q."

Well, this planet gets a little off the track once in a while; it gets in front o' the sun and throws a shadder. Then when the man in the moon gets too hot, he pulls off his coat and stands in the shadder a few hours to cool off. It's jest as simple, Jerusha, as A. B. C."

BELLEW BETTER LOOK OUT.

Miss Coffin and Her Big Revolver Still at Large.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Miss Harriet E. Coffin, the alleged insane young woman who became infatuated with the actor Kyrle Bellew and now threatens his life, is still at large with a big pistol. Her friends and her guardian are now thoroughly alarmed, and are doing all in their power to have her arrested and placed in an asylum. Miss Coffin is a very pretty young woman, and is well known in society circles. She is a daughter of a well-known Brooklyn family, and is the sole heiress to a large fortune. She is a member of the Brooklyn Society of Ethics, and has been a prominent worker in the Brooklyn Institute. A month ago she began to show signs of mental aberration, and her friends became alarmed. She left her home in Brooklyn, and, it is said, went to Boston, where she purchased a large-calibre revolver. She then came to New York, and, it is said, she has been following Bellew ever since. Her friends are now

DR. MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood; by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we would be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

WHAT ARE OUR NEEDS?

BY MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP.

It is late for holiday greetings, but our general officers send with this mid-winter message the prayerful wish that there may come upon all the workers a new baptism of the Spirit, and on the Unions a renewed energy and zeal which shall make this year the best of our history. The twelve months preceding our last convention were full of unusual strain and toil. You gave of money and effort to the amendment campaign and then made an offering of over four hundred dollars to other states engaged in like contests. If there has been something of apathy since, it is not strange, but we bid you in Christ's name now to go forward. The first great need is a strengthening of our own local organizations. We cannot live on theories, however fine, and ideals, however high. These may make the atmosphere of a convention helpful and inspiring, but the local union must have women to make the theory a fact, and the ideal an experience. Growth at the roots is the present demand.

I once took a dose of choral, and in the strange semi-conscious state into which the drug brought me had a dream never forgotten. I seemed to be looking at a tree with a very wide, thick, bushy top, while the trunk was slender as a pigweed, with roots that ran along the surface of the earth instead of striking deep. As I looked and wondered at the difference between trunk and top, a wind struck the tree and brought it to the ground. "What ailed that tree was too much top," I said in unconscious comment. There is such danger sometimes for organizations. Bright conventions and dull home meetings are a sure token of too much top. Let growth at the roots be the keynote until our next convention.

Such growth does not just now involve many accessions of new women, desirable as that would be, but the calling out of our forces and putting them into actual service. So small a fraction of our actual membership are engaged, that the work goes halting for need of help. This state of things has two main causes: First, Head and heart are not captured by the great ideals and enthusiasm of our organization.

Second. The talent and energy of the rank and file are not successfully called out and applied.

To correct the first, we earnestly recommend the following:

First, let no woman accept an office in the W. C. T. U. unless she intends to make it her first work. It is the cause of humanity and the cause of God. One woman cannot do everything. When crosses, therefore, let her say, "This one thing I do." Neglect of duty or careless work on the part of officers will ruin any Union. There is no Home Mission reaching the masses like the W. C. T. U. Facing the foreign missionary in every land is the whiskey barrel of this Christian nation. During your term of office, sisters, strike your blow for God and the Union.

Let the weekly meeting be more than a careless hour with a haphazard program. There is food for the intellectual life in a study of our work. With this leaflet we send another—"Course of Reading for Local Union." Take up at once books which lead along the lines of our great reforms. Make a study of them (not a careless reading), give our written questions one week in advance; secure five-minute essays on a single point; have discussions, and think; mental laziness is Satan's best advantage over humanity, and the best people are crippled and narrowed by it.

To remove the second cause of weakness, put every woman at work to do some one thing. Read carefully the suggestions of Miss Willard in her annual address at Nashville, and ask for every one. Can we make this helpful in local work? Read from the last State Minutes, page 130, "Department plans of work," and do something with them; let no one say you accomplish nothing. Make much of the devotional meetings. We believe if each Union would hold a daily prayer meeting for one solid month—do nothing but seek from God new power, new zeal, and the all things needed, a pentecost would come to our Michigan workers. We meet and speak sadly of the souls unsaved in the great world outside, while many women of our own number are not converted, and the children in their homes are not saved. Sisters, we need a "Salvation department" for our own membership.

No concert of action will bring the blessing following individual effort.

Let each woman of our 9,000 devote one half hour each day to the temperance work, and who can tell the result? Write a letter to a tempted young man, or a defenceless neglected girl; visit a sick room; call on a friend and invite her to join the W. C. T. U.; see some kind Christian man and ask him for a contribution to the work; talk to a Sunday School teacher or officer about the need of faithfulness in the school of the Church; keep the spirit of the quiet hour all day, and then at the quiet moments in special prayer for the temperance work and workers everywhere; ask your husband to pray for the home altar. Do some little thing every day, and the fruit will soon appear.

TEMPERANCE IN THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The W. C. T. U. of the Hawaiian Islands, Mrs. J. M. Whiting, president, has issued an appeal to the representatives of the Legislative Assembly petitioning that body to consider the subject of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the kingdom.

The appeal says: "We are well aware that this is asking for a great change in the existing laws. It requires the repeal of the statutes under which licenses are now granted. It cannot be successfully contradicted that the use of intoxicants as a beverage is useless, and for the greater part wholly injurious. Intoxicating liquor entails great evil and misery upon men of the native and foreign races in these islands. Their use destroys the peace of the home, and brings suffering to helpless women and innocent children. It causes men to neglect their business, and unfits them for good workmen, and makes them bad citizens. The open saloon, where such beverages are sold, is a constant temptation to men, luring them on to vice, and catering to their basest passions. It is a foe to the youth of these islands, and a standing threat to their safety and well-being, from among whom its future customers must come. It encourages crime, and we believe impedes the greater prosperity of the kingdom. Therefore, for these reasons, as well as many others equally weighty, we can and do ask for nothing less than what is called total prohibition.

"Statutes of total prohibition, and now constitutional provisions to that effect, have been enacted in many of the states. It is the line of modern legislation. It is the moving principle of a large political party in the United States, which is demanding that the liquor saloon shall no longer exist, because it exists for no good purpose, and with unnumbered evil results. If Hawaii shall enact a statute for prohibition, she will make that true which is the motto of the nation: 'The life of the land is preserved by right.'"

SALE OF BEER TO MINORS.

The validity of the ordinance forbidding the sale or giving of liquor to minors, was attacked in the court of Judge McAllister, Chicago, the other day, with some hope on the part of the liquor party of getting it repealed. The test case is that of a young girl named Sinclaire, who, it is claimed, was first intoxicated and then ruined by young Little.

The question before the court is whether, even if the ordinance is not repealed, the defendant can be punished, when the minor is in the company of an adult who orders and pays for the liquor afterwards taken by the minor. If the liquor interest is successful it means simply this: that our sons, and even our daughters, can be coaxed into saloons by older and viler comrades, and there corrupted by all the machinery known to Satan's experts, and all this can be done according to law!

Is it not time for respectable men to be a little more anxious about going to the polls, and casting their ballots in favor of common protection and common decency? Is it not time for the parents of our city to devise some plan for the protection of their own and their neighbors' children? Union Signal.

BLAINE AND TOBACCO.

From over the sea comes the information that tobacco is a necessity, and ought not to be taxed. If it come from the saloon we should not be surprised; if it came from the saints and the sluggers, we should think the doctrine in perfect harmony with the den. But it comes from one who is acknowledged on both continents to be a statesman.

This man who has appeared in the highest forum of the nation, appears again not the advocate of personal cleanliness, of purity and moral strength, but as the advocate of tobacco, and claims that it should be free from taxation on the ground that it is a necessity to man. The kind of a man that it is a necessity to he does not stop to define; and perhaps it is just as well not to be too explicit. It is enough to know that our "Plumed Knight" is the advocate of such a cause. If ever there was a time when the nation needed men—pure, noble, clean and whole souled men, the genuine and incorruptible article—that time is the Presidential campaign that is just before us.—Union Signal.

Don't trifle with any Threat of Lung Disease. If you have a Cough or Cold, or the children are threatened with Croup or Whooping Cough, use Acker's English Remedy and prevent further trouble. It is a positive cure, and we guarantee it. Price 10 and 50c. C. A. Wright & Co., Druggists.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 5th.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.—MATT. xvii., 1-13.

NOTES.—"After six days."—Luke ix. 28.

to which Matthew speaks of. Six days from conversion in last lesson.

"A high mountain apart."—Popular tradition has fixed the spot on Mt. Tabor; but modern scholarship, Lightfoot, Dr. Robinson and Dean Stanley, fixes upon some one of the mountains in the vicinity of Cesarea Philippi. It is likely that Mt. Hermon was the spot. No one can be positive.

"Was transfigured."—Metamorphosed, changed in outward appearance.

"Shone as the sun."—Inward purity in outward.

"Moses and Elijah."—Who represented the law and the prophets. It was indeed fit that these spiritual leaders should wish to talk with Christ about his death and he with them. The spontaneous spiritual recognition of these leaders, and the fact of their being there, after all, proves that death does not make an end to operations of the spiritual natures of those it claims.—"I will make here three tabernacles."—Booths, tents out of brushwood for you to spend the night in after your conversation. Peter was undoubtedly stupified by these wonderful apparations. His love and characteristic zeal prompt him to do something to make them comfortable. "A bright cloud overshadowed them."—There is a difference of interpretation as to whether the three or the whole company were included in the cloud. One thing we know is that the cloud was indicative of the divine presence, the complacency of the Father and Son.—"Hear ye him."—accept what he teaches as ultimate.—"Tell the vision to no man."—This word vision has an objective, not a subjective sense. It implies the reality of what had just ceased to be.—"Why then say the scribes that Elijah must first come?" How could Jesus be the Messiah unless Elijah had preceded him according to Matt. iii. 1, 4, 5. Jesus answers: He shall come and reform all the degenerate customs of the Jews, indeed he has come, and the Jews put him to death. Thus the prophets are fulfilled.

INSTRUCTION. Jesus took three chosen selected disciples to witness his glory. Thus it is not given to every honest Christian to apprehend all the inner spiritual truths. The Christlike soul, which, in its fidelity to truth converges toward him, will catch new glimpses day by day, but not at once. The Christian system is nothing if not one of development. We shall see him as he is some time if we follow him prayerfully to the mountain heights.

Moses face was changed to exceeding brightness by reason of the glory of God reflected therefrom. With Christ it was different. The radiance burst from within out. He was luminous as the sun, from the intensity of his own light—the exceeding purity of his divine nature and life. May we shine, not only from reflected light, but because there is within us an intensity of truth and love that can no more be hid than Ætna.

Peter in his delirium of excitement would build for the Lord and the saints temporary tents of brushwood, a sort of camping-out place for the night. Most of us do it. We erect temporary dwelling places for Jesus out of our impulses. Instead of this let each build a permanent home for him in the dominant purpose to do his will.

After all it is worth while to live such a life, modeled after Christ, so that even if we do not hear the Father's voice commending, nevertheless we know that our works are stamped with God's approval. Of this we are sure when we receive peace and bestow happiness.

The consciousness of true begets humility in the true disciple. He casts himself in the dust and cries "Unclean, unclean." Christ then raises him up and comforts him.

No wonder these three were troubled at the strange appearances. But when all was over, when the blinding excitement had passed away, and they felt their friend's touch and looked upon his calm face, what a feeling of personal security! They were alone with him.

Christ did fulfill literally the Law and the Prophets. He is a formal as well as a real Messiah. We can receive him in the full belief that he overlooked, no requirement of the position. He is no imperfect Saviour. He is our official Saviour.

Prove the second identification of Christ by the Father. Heresies abuse cavilling about the divinity of Christ if the gospels are accepted as true as most of what did take place. Deny them, deny all. Accept them, accept all.

A remarkably handsome woman is said to be the moving spirit in a novel authorized movement in Russia to supply the poor of that country with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

If you feel that everything is going wrong, if you do not feel like getting up in the morning, if you have pain in the stomach, take a dose of Lazador, the golden remedy. Price only 25 cents.

Greatly Excited.

Not a few of the citizens of Tecumseh have recently become greatly excited over the astounding facts, that several of their friends who had been pronounced by their physicians as incurable and beyond all hope—suffering with dreaded monster Consumption, are now enjoying good health. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, the only remedy that does positively cure all throat and lung diseases, Coughs, Colds, Asthma and Bronchitis, is the cause. Trial bottles free, large bottles $1.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The general implement manufacturing firm of Greer & Co., Tonawanda, N. Y., with branches west, west and south, has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors.

Whisky advanced 3 cents at Cincinnati Thursday under the management of the trust. Only one distillery—Dodsworth's—is not in the pool, and it is expected that he will not join.

The J. Wayland Kimball company, fancy furniture, of New York, are embarrassed. They owe $75,000, and have $100,000 assets.

Mortgages to the amount of $113,000 were filed at Pittsburg Thursday by the Krebs Lithographing company.

At Cincinnati Thursday whisky advanced from $1.05 to $1.08, the sales reaching 1,503 barrels.

From Galveston, Wednesday, there were shipped to Zanzibar, Africa, ten tons of superior Texas cotton seed. An experienced planter was also sent to instruct the natives in the cultivation of the cotton plant.

James Drew, H. A. Hawks, and Theodore Gross will open a bank at Atwood, Ills. March 1, with $50,000 capital.

The Kansas, Texas & Mexican railway was incorporated at Topeka, Kan., Friday, to build a 1,200 line from Kansas City to El Paso, N. M.; a 500 mile line to Albuquerque, N. M., and several short lines in Kansas.

The Boden Natural Gas company, of Pittsburg, which failed recently, but is said to be worth $500,000, was sold Friday to O. O. Hill, for the benefit of stockholders—it is reported, for $10,000, subject to a bonded indebtedness of $192,000.

"Just Hear That Child Scream!"

said Mrs. Smith to her sister, Mrs. Davis, as the sound of a child's shrieks came across the garden from a neighbor's house. "What kind of a woman have you for a neighbor? Does she abuse her children?" "No, indeed," replied Mrs. Davis. "She is one of the most tender mothers in existence. But you see, she believes in the old-fashioned styles of doctoring. When a child needs physic, she fills the spoon with some nauseous dose, lays the little victim flat on her lap, holds his nose till he is forced to open his mouth for breath, when down goes the dreadful mess. Then come the yells." "No wonder," said Mrs. Smith, "Why doesn't she use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? They are effective without being harsh, and are as easy to take as sugar plums. I always give them to my children." "And so do I," said Mrs. Davis.

What are Suppositories?

A. G. Rose, from New London, Penn., writes: Send me two boxes of your Kemp's Pile Suppositories by mail. Our druggist is out. They are for a friend. I tried everything without help, but the Suppositories cured me.

The treatment is new and within reach of all, and would advise the afflicted to give them a trial. For sale in Tecumseh by Baker & Hall, at 50c per box.

The people as a mass seldom make mistakes. This accounts for a large demand for Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cough Cure. It has given such perfect satisfaction that some druggists offer an imitation on which they make a large profit. Beware of both the imitation and the druggist, both will cheat you. The genuine is sold by Dr. Geo. Ferguson and will promptly and safely cure coughs, colds, and all throat and lung diseases. Price 50c.

Learned Professors Say.

The most serious diseases of the heart, says Prof. da Costa, may occur without any symptoms. Prof. Trousseau, of Paris, states that death from heart disease is usually caused by congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach or kidneys, from imperfect circulation of the blood. Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is the latest and most reliable remedy for this little understood but grave disease. It has cured thousands of cases. Don't fail to try it. Ask for testimonials. Sold at Baker and Hall's Drug Store.

Now is the time to pay up.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Miss Laura Clark went to Tecumseh Monday.

E. VanDeMark has returned from Washington.

Walter White, who has been attending [illegible] turned to his home near Battle Creek.

Mrs. E. R. Smith spent several days in Detroit last week.

The Congregational ladies give a supper and entertainment at the hall next Wednesday evening.

Addie Silyers entertained a [illegible] number of her friends last Wednesday evening. Her brother Herbie has a leap year party Saturday after[illegible].

Miss Laura Clark was very much surprised last Thursday evening by about twenty five of her friends coming in upon her, taking possession of tables, chairs, etc., for a game of progressive pedro. After a couple of hours spent in this way, doughnuts and cheese were served, and all declared it to be one of the pleasantest parties of the season.

St. John's church social will be held at Mrs. Louise Clark's next Tuesday afternoon. Gentlemen are invited to supper.

The M. E. church social was held at Frank Johnson's Wednesday eve. All had a very pleasant time.

W. H. Dorr, J. E. Woodward, Geo. DePuy, C. D. Keyes, W. C. Rogers, J. E. White, Henry Mensing and a numbers of other masons, visited Tecumseh Lodge last Friday night.

J. S. Kies came home Friday on hearing of the death of his brother, G. D. Kies.

Mrs. Chas. Clark gave a large card party Tuesday evening.

Will Muir's little daughter Blanche is reported to have scarlet fever.

Mrs. Frank Woodward has been sick this week, but is now better.

Mrs. Peter Kishpaugh has been sick for several days with a severe cold.

A large chicken pie supper was held at Baptist church Tuesday. We have not heard that much money was taken in, but judge from the amount of chicken pie that disappeared that the treasury is well replenished.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Maddon of Jackson, have been visiting at John and James Hause's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hause, Mr. and Mrs. Maddon, Jr. and Mrs. Slade LaZell, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas VanGieson visited John Henry's family at Palmyra, last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mart. Wallace and Messrs. Blosser and Bailey of Manchester, attended the funeral of G. D. Kies.

Mrs. Eugene Palmer is visiting friends at Britton.

A very pleasant card party was held at Frank Johnson's last Friday eve. Ice cream and cake were served.

C. D. Keyes spent the first of the week at the Ypsilanti Poultry Show. He returned Wednesday and Bert. Kishpaugh left for there on the same day. They have some fowls on exhibition there.

Albert Labo returned from Cadillac last Thursday.

The funeral of G. D. Kies was held Saturday at 2 o'clock P. M., at his late residence. Geo. Kies and Mrs. Will Kies of Elkhart, Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Field, Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Paxon from Tecumseh, Mrs. Bain of Omaha, Neb, and many other friends from a distance came to offer a last tribute to the departed.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Rev. and Mrs. O. F. Winton of Addison, visited at R. McCollum's last week.

Levi Taylor drove out from Liberty on Thursday, returning Friday.

Miss Clara Lamkin has gone to Ridgeway, where, we understand, she will open a dressmaker's shop. The people there will find her a good work woman.

The animal who so severely injured Rodman Taylor has been sent to the shambles. No mourners.

Mrs. Sarah Miller and Miss Rose Eastlick, of Ridgeway, visited at J. Spaulding's on Friday.

Grandma Wilson, as she is called, is keeping house for Mr. Cummins while Mary is doing duty in the Clinton High School. The old lady has seen eighty-four winters, but is still smart and active.

On the evening of Feb. 1st, a party of about thirty young people assembled at the home of David Burroughs, for the double purpose of giving Miss Ella a surprise and having a good time. The surprise was complete, none of the family having any inkling of the affair until the guests made their appearance. And as to the good time all agree that it could not have been bettered.

Mrs. Ella Learnard and son, of Napoleon, made a short visit at Jehiel Kemp's last week. Mrs. Kemp is still very sick, but is improving.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES

St. Valentine's Day n[illegible] day.

Mrs. Peter Sharp, w[illegible] been a [illegible] is failing quite rapidly.

The time of trains Nos. 3 and 4 has been changed, and persons wishing to go to Toledo can leave here about 10 a. m. and return [illegible] p. m.

Remember the meeting of the Farmers' Union at John VanVleet's this week Friday evening.

Mattie Gray, of Springville, Sundayed as the guest of Loana Davidson.

We understand that the Miller band furnished some music to a chautauqua entertainment given at Adrian Monday evening.

A goodly number from here went to Tecumseh to see the old folks' dance last week.

It is becoming evident to many that we are having one of the best schools in the county. The patrons of the district are not all aware of it, but would be if they more frequently visited the school. The musical department, lately introduced, is a good thing, and it seems as though the parents ought to have interest enough to drop in occasionally on Thursday afternoons at least, the last hour of which is devoted to vocal music.

H. J. Wil[illegible] and T. H. Temple spent two or three days at Wampler's lake last week fishing through the ice. They returned with [illegible] pounds of splendid fish.

As to the exact date for the entertainment to be given at Cottage Hall by the Miller band we have not been informed, but understand it will be in the course of the next two weeks. A very interesting program is being prepared.

There was a good attendance at the box social given at Mrs. Williams last Friday night. The most noticeable feature of the occasion was there were 31 boxes furnished, not a gentleman came without his box and every lady present became a purchaser. The society realized $8 from the affair, and everybody seemed to have a very enjoyable time.

It is now quite certain that a two days' teachers' institute will be held here during the spring vacation—the last week in March. Teachers and advanced students in the surrounding schools are invited to attend. Those who are able to pass a satisfactory examination at the close of the institute will be granted a certificate for teaching.

The L. C. L. are preparing the following program, which they will present to the public at Cottage Hall, on Wednesday evening of next week.

Opening piece of music in charge of W. R. Wilson.
Devotional exercises.
Vocal solo—Flora Smith.
Recitation—Hattie Russell.
Declamation—Geo. D. Arner.
Inst. music—Thomas and Montie Florance.
Dialogue, "The Canvassing Agent."
Recitation—Fannie Miller.
Solo—J. D. Arner.
Reading—Mrs. Sarah Pocklington.
Music—Kittie Clark.
Recitation—Mary Osgood.
Declamation—W. F. Raymond.
Music—Louise Brown & Lena VanNess.
Reading—G. P. Waring.
Quartette in charge of Mrs. R. S. Housman.
Dialogue, "A Boy's Plot."
Song—Darius Smith.

Admission, 10 cents; doors open at 6:30; exercises to begin at 7:30. As this is the last entertainment that the ladies expect to give this winter every effort is being put forth to make it interesting and pleasing.

Clara Lamkin, of Franklin, has opened a dressmaking shop at the home of Mrs. M. A. Barrett on South street, in the rooms recently occupied by Mrs. W. E. Barrett. Miss Lamkin desires the ladies of the village and vicinity to give her a call before engaging some one else.

Chas Gripton and F. E. Pocklington, who went to San Diego, Cal., a few months ago, arrived home Tuesday noon. They do not speak of California in very flattering terms. The hundreds of cases of typhoid fever, resulting in dozens of deaths, besides plenty of small pox, casts a shadow over the beautiful climate and completely upsets all pleasure of seaside life in Southern California.

At about 11:30 o'clock one night last week the family of S. P. Smith were suddenly awakened from sleep by an unearthly sound resembling that of an earthquake. When they regained composure they found the top part of the coal stove blown in a hundred pieces and scattered all over the lower part of the house. Fortunately no one was injured. The cause of the explosion is a mystery, as the stove was filled as usual and the drafts all regulated for the night.

NOTICE.—There will be a meeting of the citizens of Ridgeway and vicinity at Cottage Hall, Monday evening, Feb. 13th at 7:30 p. m., for the purpose of considering the proposition recently made through the columns of the Tecumseh Herald by Mr. E. T. Bush, relative to the formation of a stock company, the design of which shall be the erection of a hotel building in said village, or the adoption of any other feasible plan for the compassing of the same object. Let there be a grand rally of the people at this meeting, and give the village the "boom" it demands.

BY ORDER MANY CITIZENS.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Carrie Doty spent Saturday and Sunday of last week with her parents, living one and a half miles west of this village.

A spelling school was held at our school house on Friday evening of last week. Not a very large crowd attended, but a good time was had by all. Anna Rainey, twelve years of age, had the honor of spelling them all down. The school is now waiting to make arrangements to compete with some other school. We'll bet on Anna if they spell.

Following is the record of surprise parties since our last report: Thursday evening, Feb'y 2d, at E. G. Wilson's; Friday evening, the 3d, at H. J. Carlton's; Saturday evening, the 4th, at W. E. Doty's; also a party at M. Florance's, Wednesday evening, the 8th inst.

Will Begel Sundayed at Deerfield. He reports everything O. K. down there.

Lost, Tuesday evening, Jan. 31st, a door key. Anyone finding same will confer a favor on the owner by leaving it at the postoffice.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Florance Sundayed at Mrs. H. Clark's.

Meeting was held in the new church last Sunday evening, James Lynn, of Ridgeway, officiating. The church will be dedicated next Sunday.

A young man named West went on Sunday last to take his girl out riding. When ready to leave her house he was so excited that he tried to drive away with their hitching post. Now, kind friend, remember that presence of mind is as necessary in sparking as anything else. Great nuisances, them hitching posts, ain't they?

LAKE RIDGE

Eight or ten copies of the "Adrian Press" were received at Lake Ridge last week, ostensibly for the pupose of defeating local option, from the "red chalked" editorial therein, thereon. The editor says he is a temperance man and under no obligation to the saloons, or they to him, and but for the great space taken in explaining this point, people might have thought otherwise, and supposed that the saloons of Adrian had something to do in distributing these extra copies.

We will not attempt to analyze the Editor's position, life is too short; it takes longer to refute an error than to prove a fact, still it might be well to compare the two sides on this question as they will appear one week from next Monday. On the whiskey side are the saloon keepers, who are claimed to hold the 'balance of power,' followed by tipplers, loafers, gamblers, foul-mouthed roughs, drankards and the filth and scum of inhumanity about 5,000, all voters; not a woman in the crowd worthy of the name, nor a child to be seen, but here and there a temperance editor crying for "pap" through saloon tax, and for "personal liberty" without regard to consequences.

While on the other side are the progressive element of civilization, embracing the sturdy farmer, enterprising business men, the teacher, philosopher, philanthropist, the noble women of the county with their sons and daughters, all desirous of restraining each other from personal liberties that endanger the common welfare, remembering that all laws are restraints on personal liberty. About 6000 voters and at least 40,000 in all, which this "temperance editor" terms a "handful of prohibitionists."

Acker's Blood Elixir is the only Blood Remedy guaranteed. It is a positive cure for Ulcers, Eruptions or Syphilitic Poisoning. It purifies the whole system, and banishes all Rheumatic and Neuralgic pains. We guarantee it. C. A. WRIGHT & CO., Druggists.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 12th.

JESUS AND THE LITTLE ONES. MATT. xviii, 1-14.

NOTES. "In that hour."—After Peter had paid the tribute which he had taken from the fish's mouth. It is generally conceded that the lesson opens [illegible]

"Who, then, is greatest in the kingdom of heaven?"—Not a question concerning character but rank. In Mark ix. 33, we are told that the disciples had been discussing this question by the way. The mistaken ideas they entertained about Christ as a temporary king paved the way for these ambitions. Even the mother of James and John (Matt. xx, 20) did not escape this fever. Christ is appealed to to decide this question. His object lesson must have surprised and confounded them.——"A little child."—It was old enough to respond to Christ's call and come, therefore it must have had consciousness and will power. It was intelligent, and doubtless felt the privilege of nestling in Jesus' arms.——"Converted."—Turned about in a totally different direction. This implies a radical change in motive and character.——"Cause to stumble."—Tempt from innocence to sin.——"And if thy hand or thy foot."—That which tempts to do sinful things; and the foot, that which tempts to go in forbidden paths.——"Thine eye."—That which tempts to lustfulness, covetousness and unsanctified desires.——"Enter into life with one eye."—Not that we can be literally one-eyed in Heaven. But it is better to forego the brief pleasure of sinning, than the eternal pleasures of heavenly life.——"To be cast into the hell of fire."—The Greek reads "Gehenna of fire."—Gehenna was a valley near Jerusalem. Originally a delightful spot, it became the spot of the worship of Moloch; hence its associations were horrible to the Jews. It was a fit representation of everlasting torment after having been the scene of frightful abominations——"Their angels."—This surely argues a personal existence after death, and, according to Hebrews i. 14, helpful ministering spirits to those that shall inherit salvation. The eleventh verse is omitted in the Revised Version, as it is too true to lose, so we have it all in Luke xix. 10.

INSTRUCTION.—One of the greatest drawbacks to the spiritual growth of churches has been the eagerness on the part of many to become law-givers and leaders. This blasting thunderbolt of pride has not only struck the clergy from time to time but also the laity in a great measure. How often there is squabbling among church members and officers while the hungry sheep moan unfed! One's own pet puny opinions are of no account whatever in comparison to the great work for the Master.

Self-forgetfulness is a good household word for all. "Self-denial" and "helpfulness to others" are mottoes which, if translated into every-day life will bring tears of joy to wasted cheeks. They will make every family in the land headlights, luminous with gracious works. They will transform men and women into ministering angels.

It is said that every child is not like Christ, in the lesson, humble, free from petty jealousies, and obedient. All know some naughty children, that it would be a sin for others to imitate. Let parents see to it that their children, through prayer, tenderness and firmness, are all that Christ would have them to be.

It is for each to embody in his life all the endearing virtues he would have his child possess. Have the same spirit toward Christ as you would have your child have toward you.

The tempter is dramatically depicted as a stumbling block. Can one imagine a more heinous crime than willfully to wreck a train by putting an obstruction on the track? Yet it is infinitely more devilish to wreck (however it be done) an immortal soul.—Matt. x, 28.

Don't think how you will not be a stumbling block to others, but rather how your influence shall always be for the truest and best. Pray for this and trust your influence to God.

It does not pay to be chary about lopping off cherished evil habits. Do it quickly, silently.

Who dare take upon himself to despise or sneer at one who bears in his face the imprint of divinity? All have this hopeful mark.

No one is so insignificant but what Christ personally seeks him out. This is a universal salvation—for the unwashed and naked as well as for the prince in his palace.

All are his sheep—let none be impetuous enough to go astray.

A FARMER ON THE TARIFF

The protective system first came into note after the war of 1812, when manufacturers with no capital and little skill had been forced into existence. It was then, perhaps, proper public economy and equitable to give these struggling manufacturers a bounty for a time. This was the exact plea of Henry Clay for the protective idea. Clay may be considered more than any other one man the father of the protective system. Therefore let me [illegible] the exact utterance on the subject. He, the [illegible] from the pen of Carl Schurz, I read that Clay just previous to his nomination for the presidency in 1844, made a series of speeches throughout the country. In one of these utterances Mr. Schurz writes:

"He expressed himself emphatically upon all the Old Whig principles and measures, repeating his view of the protective tariff as a temporary arrangement which the infant industries, rapidly growing up to manhood, would not much longer require.

"The present high tariff had a plausible and perhaps legitimate beginning. A direct tax was levied on manufactured goods in the midst of the war to aid the treasury in its extreme demands. The tariff was simultaneously raised to compensate for the direct tax. After the close of the war, when the national finances became easy, the direct tax was repealed but the manufacturing interest was fortunate enough to retain the high tariff. The vast interests thus subserved are now active in trying to persuade the country that the public interest will be served by even making the tariff higher. But to create a necessity for continuing this war tax, they bravely propose to reduce the tax on spirits and tobacco. It is worth one to believe that the protection and labor propositions of Clay, Powerful interests, however, backed by wealth, are again [illegible] and speeches covering whole pages of great newspapers are devoted to persuading the people that relief is to be afforded by free whiskey and tobacco. When informed that $[illegible] worth of national taxes could be remitted, we farmers naturally raise the hand. It promises cheaper prices for the various adulterations of the [illegible] and instruments we are permitted to buy, and cheaper whiskey and tobacco. The old note pro[illegible] in the new protection set up by manufacturers that a high tariff is a public good, the higher the better—and is to be made perpetual. I do not think farmers that there is a new departure from the teachings of Henry Clay and the early fathers. I see that the American protective tariff league, which seeks to pledge [illegible] to contribute $100 each annually to a fund for maintaining high tariff, has just recruited its 400th man. How much the fund has to do in spreading the fallacies of the new tariff creed I leave each intelligent farmer in the land to estimate for himself. It is certain that no such system of public economy would originate with the consumer of protected goods, and especially with the farmers, who are their largest customers. I do not expect to impose my own sentiments upon others but to me the matter is so clear, and one which so vitally affects our agricultural interests, that I cannot forbear expression of my personal convictions. I believe the tariff taxes are real taxes and as a whole are paid at the dearest rate. I believe that the manufacturers can permit a large reduction in the protective features of the tariff greatly to the advantage of consumers and still enjoy more prosperity than do the farmers. I believe protection is largely used to assist the odious trusts in their successful efforts in the direct line of monopoly.

A large number of industries—and the list is daily increasing—have adopted a system of monopoly. One of these industries which comes near to your observation and interests, is that of lumber. The lumber interest is organized and in a measure consolidated from the pine forests to the local dealers in cities and villages. Every interest in this combination is guaranteed its profits. The consumer pays a price which covers their several charges. The effect has been that lumber has advanced in price, within a brief time from $2 to $4 per 1,000 feet. Salt, starch and barbed wire [illegible] forming similar combinations. It is becoming the rule for the various pursuits to form these combinations so as to exclude competition in their respective [illegible]

If government bounties are legitimate, it is time the farmers were protected. But we do not ask protection. We ask that the government shall cease to give bounties to other classes at our expense. We ask that the government shall cease to legislate for monopolists who have already been too long subsidized, and shall legislate for the welfare of the majority. Our demand is simply justice. In this demand we believe that not only the public interest will be served but that the few subsidized manufacturers will reach a richer reward. Small profits and steady work will be better for the mill owners and their operatives. We believe that the time has come when American skill and enterprise can compete with the world. We believe that the limited market of their own country—a result of the present system—cripples and fatally satisfactory to the manufacturing interest. A world wide market is the great need of the American manufacturer. Such world wide competition will necessitate cheaper goods but continuous employment will more than compensate for the loss. The cheap prices at which farmers sell their products will be counterbalanced by cheaper lumber, salt, coal, sugar, clothing, iron, farm implements and other necessaries.

My child was severely afflicted with nasal catarrh for some time. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle he was entirely free from catarrh. He appears as well as anyone. It is the best stock remedy in the market.—[illegible] Amoda, Ia.

Mr. A. N. Gow suffered from catarrh of long standing. He purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm of us. He now informs us that it has done him more good than anything he has ever taken for catarrh.—Byers Bros., Druggists, Independence, Iowa.

A Distinguished Clergyman's Testimony.

Rev. R. M. Rivers, Presiding Elder Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Carolina writes from Greenville:

"About four years ago I was attacked with what the physicians pronounced chronic rheumatism, accompanied with complete dyspepsia. My appetite failed me entirely, and I had become so feeble that I could not walk without great difficulty. A friend prevailed on me to try Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. I did so, and the result was most astonishing. My appetite returned, I began to gain flesh and strength, and the rheumatism left me. I am now in the enjoyment of good health, and I attribute my recovery to the use of Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cheerfully recommend them to all who suffer from dyspepsia."

Sample Free. Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists. Large boxes, containing 100 tablets, 50 cents.

ALL THE rheumatism can be effectually and permanently cured by the use of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters.

Can't Sleep Nights is the complaint of thousands suffering from Asthma, Consumptive Coughs, etc. Did you ever try Acker's English Remedy? It is the best preparation known for all Lung Troubles, sold on a positive guarantee at 10c., 50c. and $1. C. A. Wright & Co., Druggists.

THE INEVITABLE OCCURS.

BLOODY RIOT IN THE COAL STRIKE REGION AT LAST.

Attempt of the Reading to Operate a Mine Met by Lawlessness—Several Persons Wounded and Two Magistrates' Offices Wrecked—A Lock-Out Compromised.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Feb. 4.—The scenes witnessed here during the long strike of 1875, when Molly Maguireism was running rampant and a reign of terror prevailed throughout the region, were eclipsed Friday evening by a riot between the striking miners and the coal and iron police, in which five men were shot and two of the officers severely beaten. When the present strike began not forty thousand money could be raised, and the extent of transgression of the law, and it was to their credit that, up to Friday there had been no violence of any kind. The company made an effort Thursday to start one of their collieries here, and succeeded in getting them in operation with a small force of hands at noon. Thursday evening, when the men and boys returned were on their way home they had to run the gauntlet of groups of strikers, who hooted the officials epithet of "scab" and occasionally threw a more deadly missile at their heads. The men were guarded by a small force of coal and iron police, who alone protected them from violence.

Friday morning the performance was repeated, with serious consequences. Some [illegible] strikers, chief [illegible] and Hazgatiate, were seen going [illegible] Shenandoah [illegible] themselves [illegible] detachment [illegible] roads. In a minute the fronts of both offices were riddled with stones, and their inmates had a tough scramble for safety. Some [illegible] bodies received, but no serious damage was done except to the offices which are wrecked.

The town was in a perfect uproar. Men were crazed with passion and drink, and no one appeared to have the power to quell them. The borough authorities were powerless and no one can say how the mob's fury may yet vent itself. At midnight the mob had dispersed and everything was quiet. No further trouble was anticipated for to-morrow.

Accepted a 10 Per Cent. Reduction.

TROY, N. Y., Feb. 4.—After vainly endeavoring to get some concessions from the Troy Steel and Iron company, the employes have decided to accept the terms of the company, including a cut that employes of wages. Had they not done so, a strike would have taken place, which would have kept the works closed for at least a year. The amount has been in force a little over a month, keeping about 1,[illegible] men idle.

The men are to work at the reduced wages May 1, provided the price of rails does not advance. If the price of rails does [illegible] the men are to get a proportionate increase.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, careless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experiencing a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "goneness" or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, dull, heavy eyes, alternating specks before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flashes, sleeplessness, with chills alternating with burning heat in various parts of body, and flesh, cold feet, nervous dread of evil, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most obstinate of American maladies—Torpid Liver or Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, with its train of evils, of its consequence. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption, Kidney Disease, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has evinced great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

CURES ALL HUMORS,

from a common Blotch or Pimple, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by its powerful, purifying, and invigorating properties. Great lasting cures rapidly follow its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, or Scaly Eruptions, Tumors, Carbuncles, Swelling, Pain from Scrofulous and Syphilitic causes, "White Swellings," Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large Treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a Treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and strength and bodily health will be established.

CONSUMPTION

which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease. Nothing has such virtuous power over this terribly fatal disease when first offering the raw, worrying cough, to the public, Dr. Pierce thinks it a misnomer of calling it his "CONSUMPTION Cure," but abandoned that name as too restrictive, for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, and expectorant properties, cures not only Consumption, but all other Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Severe Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, Nasal Catarrh, Bronchial Affections, Scrofula, Consumption, and kindred diseases, it is a sovereign remedy. Sold by druggists, at $1.00, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

A LIZ-TOWN HUMORIST.

Settin' round the stove last night,
Down at Wess' store, was me
And Mart Stringpiper, Tunk and White

Fellers of the Muddock tribe
As is crowd to describe
And says I'se, he says, says he,
"Talkin' 'bout good things to eat,
Ripe persimmons's hard to beat!" a-
I chawed on. And Mart he 'greed
Warter'd'llion beat the mush.
"Bet," he says, "and jes' fresh
Fillin's loved by the crowd!"
Then a Muddock chap, says he,
"Tunk's a good enough for me—
A'mighty fine Injun," he says.
"Fer a fresh mollisses! Whatsay, Wess?"
I chawed on. And Wess says, "Well,
You jes' fetch that wife of mine
All the worter'mellion-vine,"
And she'll fall it down a spell—

And what else, Lord only knows!
But I'm here to tell all hands,
Them preserves needs my demands."

I chawed on. And White, he says,
"Well, I'll jes' stand in with Wess—
I'm no hog!" And Tunk says, "I
Guess I'll pasture out on pie
With the Muddock boys," says he;
"Now what's yourns" he says to me.
I chawed on, fer—quite a spell.
Then I spatts up slow and dry,
"Jes' to pacify," I says, I
And you'd orto heard 'em yell!

DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition in the daring of its inception, had for its witness of a romance while in the gigantic proportions of its failure it sought and was likely to obtain, it was also duly sublime.—A JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1862.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of heroes can do in a desperate undertake in America.—COUNT OF PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,
A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

Our fireman, J. A. Wilson, very graphically describes this fearful effort to conquer time:

"Our locomotive was under a full head of steam. The engineer stood with his hand on the lever, with the valve wide open. It was frightful to see how the powerful iron monster under us would leap forward under the revolutions of her great wheels. Brown would scream to me ever and anon, 'Give her more wood, Alf,' which command was promptly obeyed. She rocked and reeled like a drunken man while we tumbled from side to side like grains of popcorn in a hot frying pan. It was bewildering to look at the ground or objects on the roadside. A constant stream of fire ran from the great wheels, and to this day I shudder as I reflect on that, my first and last locomotive ride. We sped past houses, stations and fields and out of sight, almost like a meteor, while the bystanders, who scarcely caught a glimpse of us as we passed, looked on as if in both fear and amazement. It has always been a wonder to me that our locomotive and cars kept the track at all, or how they could possibly stay on the track. At times the iron horse seemed literally to fly over the course, the driving wheels of one side being lifted from the rails much of the distance over which we now sped with a velocity fearful to contemplate. We took little thought of the matter then."

Andrews kept his watch in his hand, seeming to notice nothing else, for time was the only element in this part of our problem, and he and Knight, who looked on the same watch, always joined in declaring that the interval of nine miles between the two stations was run in seven and a half minutes; and this not upon a magnificent road with steel rails, as that road is today, but over a poor and neglected track! It must, in candor, however, be allowed that Andrews probably reckoned the interval from losing sight of Adairsville until coming in sight of Calhoun. When near the two stations he would be otherwise engaged, and thus the rate may have been little over a mile a minute—surely enough for all the fear, wonder and sublimity of motion!

Our escape on this run was exceedingly narrow. The passenger train had begun to move out before we arrived, but it had only just got under way while we were slackening up for the station. A minute earlier in their starting would have ended the raid. But seeing us coming, and our whistle sounding out loud and peremptory, they backed before us up the track, and the proper officer obligingly opened the switch to let us on the side track. Of course this was done as much in the interest of the passenger train, which could not go on till we were out of the way, as in ours.

But they did not go on for some time and we were obliged to await their movements. In backing they had gone far enough, not only to give us room on the side track, but also, as their train was a long one, to completely block the far end of it, and we could not proceed on the main track until they should pull ahead. Before doing this they naturally wanted some explanation. The latness of the regular train, our having Fuller's engine, without him or any of his men; and not least, the manner in which we had swooped down upon them like some beast of prey, coming without any signal man ahead at a time when under railroad rules they were entitled to the road—all this, which only some most urgent occasion or public calamity could excuse, called for explanation. Andrews calmly told his story, and the urgent need of ammunition was felt to justify everything; and all the questions were asked and answered that are common among railroad men on meeting. Yet Andrews would have talked little and would have made a very short stop, had it not been for the manner in which the passenger train bound in his own. We had a good right to be uneasy this station and Adairsville because we had not dared, in the terrible urgency of reaching Calhoun, to delay even for this purpose. A question might come on the wires at any moment which Andrews, [illegible] easy to answer. Neither had we put any obstructions on the track. This latter omission prepared the way for another race against time, only less swift and fearful than our own.

Thus we were again delayed. Andrews tried gentle and indirect means to persuade the conductor of the passenger train that it was perfectly safe for him to run down and get to Adairsville before Fuller's passenger train. But he was not easily persuaded. The hare's escape from collision with our train had shaken his nerves too much for him to wish at once to repeat the experience. Neither did he seem at all in a hurry to move his train ahead and let us out on the main track. [illegible] would not have been long, had he continued obstinate, until the reserve force of our party would have been brought into requisition. It may be said here that Andrews was perfectly sincere in telling him that there would be abundant time for him to reach Adairsville before Fuller with his train would be along. We did not think that Fuller would be along that day, and with his own train he was not. But as matters were, if the Calhoun man had allowed himself to be persuaded to start southward, a fearful collision would have ended all possibilities of pursuit, and left us free to burn bridges at our leisure. Here was another of the narrow escapes made by the enemy. To understand this it is necessary to recur to Fuller and Murphy, who were within two or three minutes of Kingston when we left that place.

They were terribly disappointed when they found themselves stopped quite a long distance below Kingston by three heavy freight trains, and learned in a brief conversation with the engineer of the hearest, and the persons who had run down that way on hearing their whistle, that their game had flown. They heard with wonder how long the commander of the captured train had been held there, and how he had succeeded in concealing his real character. The formidable nature of the enemy ahead was now clearly revealed, but it looked for a moment to Fuller as if all his labor had been for nothing, and that he would be able to continue the pursuit only after a ruinous delay. To back all these trains up the heavy grade so that he could get on the side track, and then down again to get off at the upper end, would require an amount of "seesawing" that would give the captors of his train a hopeless start.

Here arose a difference of opinion between Fuller and Murphy, who up to this time had worked together in perfect accord. Murphy ran ahead and cut loose the New York, the new and good engine of one of the freights, attaching it to the car which had brought their tools from Etowah. He then called to Fuller to move the Rome engine back out of the way that he might come round on the "Y." But Fuller had different plans.

The Rome engine and train had stood on its own track all this time waiting for his coming; the Rome branch led into the main track above all the impediments. Why not take that engine? No sooner thought than executed. Fuller had taken one foot race that day, and he now took another, shorter, but not less important. The engine was headed already toward Chattanooga with only one car attached, and in the most favorable position. There was abundance of volunteers, and no need of explanations, for now everybody was sure that the impressed powder story was false and absurd—had thought so all the time! Conductor Smith, of the Rome train, gave it for the service at once. All was done so quickly that Murphy saw them start and had to run at his best speed to keep from being left behind! Fuller probably made a mistake in not taking the New York, as the other engine was much inferior, with small wheels and incapable of great speed. But the distance in which they could use it turned out to be short, and being driven at the height of its power, it is not probable that much was lost; while the time spent in changing the freight trains out of the way might have cost the Oostenaula bridge.

ANTHONY MURPHY.

A mile or more from Kingston they found some ties on the track at the place where we cut the wires, and were obliged to stop and throw them off. Of course an effort was made to send a message from Kingston to Chattanooga as soon as Fuller arrived, but we had cut the wire too quick for them. Continuing on the way, they came in a few minutes to the place where the track had been torn up. A southern account says sixty yards had been removed; but this is a gross exaggeration. Track lifting was only intended to make the road temporarily impassable, and our broken rail answered this purpose as well as a dozen. Had there been a regular track layer with the pursuers a rail would not have caused a great delay, but it was in all cases sufficient for its purpose on this day.

Though we had heard the whistle of the pursuers, they neither heard nor saw us at this point, and came near we'ck; but they were on their guard because of the similar break which had caused their fall from the hand car, and by great effort and reversing the engine they were able to prevent an accident. But their progress seemed to become completely barred. As usual no one but Fuller and Murphy seemed to have the least idea what to do; in fact during the whole day every hopeful plan of pursuit sprung from their indomitable energy. Too much credit from the Confederate point of view cannot be given to them. They were already practiced in foot travel, and once more set off in that manner, all the rest, remaining behind, had no further influence on the fortunes of the day. But at full speed the two pedestrians pushed over the slippery and muddy road and through the driving rain. They felt sure of finding the freight train, or the passenger, either at Adairsville or further on this side. Should they be obliged to take the terribly fatiguing run to the station itself they would probably be too late; but they were determined to do their utmost.

Notice how all things seemed to work against us on this eventful day. If we had not stopped to take up this rail at all, we would have had abundant time to reach the freight and start it south, as we did, and the freight train running south, and Fuller's train running at full speed, would have produced a frightful collision, which could scarcely have been prevented; for the freight man had been induced to set out by the representations of Andrews [illegible] that Andrews was still running on slow time and had not reached the station above. The stopping to lift this rail, as it turned out, was probably the greatest mistake Andrews made. On the other [illegible] so great a delay would have ensued that the Oostenaula bridge, which we were now very near, would have been in flames.

But the pursuing pair had scarcely been well breathed in this third foot race when they heard the welcome whistle of a locomotive. Fuller, who was ahead, stopped in a place where the view was clear, and gave the signal of danger; the freight was checked up as quickly as possible, and while Fuller told in a few words what had happened, and what he wanted, Murphy, who had been distanced, came up, and they sprang on board and took command. With all the power of the Texas, which was one of the very best engines on the road, and the best the pursuers had yet obtained, they pushed backward toward Adairsville and learned that Andrews had left a few minutes before. Fuller took his place on the last freight car, which was now the front of the train, and directed their movements. Murphy was the official superior of all the engineers on the road. He stood by the lever to render assistance when needed and all his orders were cheerfully obeyed.

It was not long till they were back at the station, when Fuller jumped off, threw the switch over to turn the freight cars which were detached at the same time and allowed to run with their own momentum on the side track; and then as the last one passed by, he changed the switch back, sprang on the engine and outran the cars, which continued to move parallel with him. This was quick work. They now had a comparatively small crew, but they were all armed with guns, and loaded on the tender and engine alone. It was true that the engine was reversed, but this, while it is somewhat less handy, does not diminish strength or speed. The first question which confronted the pursuers was whether to risk running up to Calhoun in the face of the delayed passenger train. They did not hesitate, as the way had been made clear for them. It was less than ten minutes since Andrews had left, promising to run slowly and carefully, and if he kept his word, he could be overhauled and inclosed between the two trains before he could reach Calhoun; and even if he did not the danger of collision would be borne by the train ahead and not by the following one. The marvelous flight which Andrews had made was not, of course, dreamed of. Had Andrews been able to persuade the passenger conductor to push out, as he did the freight conductor, Fuller's and Murphy's career would have ended.

These indomitable men now had an excellent engine and ordered full speed. The whole distance of nine miles was made in little more than ten minutes! There was no obstruction of any kind, and they trusted to the fact of being so close behind Andrews to assure them against any lifted rail.

CHAPTER X.

IN SIGHT!

Before they reached Calhoun, however, Andrews was released from his perilous position. After he had chatted with the conductor and engineer of the down freight for some time and found them indisposed to go on their way, he said in the most matter of fact and positive manner: "I must press on without more delay. Pull your engine ahead and let me out." When the order was given in this direct form they were obliged to obey or give a good reason for refusing, and it may be considered certain that if they had delayed, though Andrews did not threaten violence, yet our engineers would at once have taken control and executed the order, probably not without bloodshed.

At last we are on the main track, with no train between us and Chattanooga! and if the reports from Huntsville are true there is no obstruction west of that town, as all travel is cut off by Mitchel. There is reason for exultation on our part. An open road ahead and scores of miles of obstructed and broken track behind us! For the whole morning we have been running with a train right in front of us, or waiting for a belated one. We had passed five trains, all but one either extras or behind time—a wonderful achievement! now the way is clear to our own lines; and the "Y" at Chattanooga is no more difficult of passage than any of the many side tracks we have already successfully encountered. No small amount of the exultation we felt on first taking the train was again ours, as we rushed rapidly on for a mile or more, and then stopped to cut the wire, and to take up a rail as we hoped for the last time. The Oostenaula bridge was just ahead, and when that was burned, we would simply run from bridge to bridge, firing them as we passed; and no more of this hard drudgery of track raising and still more terrible work of sitting silent and housed in a dark car waiting for trains to arrive. We had heard the whistle of a following train a dozen miles back, but it probably was one from Kingston, and if not wrecked by the broken rail, would return there for tools. We knew nothing of Fuller's and Murphy's pursuit, and if we had been told the full story as already narrated, we would have thought it too wild and improbable even for some of us.

But it was expedient to take up this one rail more before we finally changed our mode of operations. A piece of torn track had been put before or after every train that we had met. It was well to put a broken road behind this passenger train also, that it might not turn back after us on any sudden suspicions freak and come upon us while working at the Resaca Oostenaula bridge. The crisis of our fate approached, and we believed it would be triumphantly passed. Nothing had as yet been lost but time, and if we were fairly prosperous for fifteen minutes more, all would be regained, and the fulfillment of all our hopes, as far as human prospects could reach, be in our own hands.

No wonder that we worked gladly and cheerfully. Scott climbed the pole with even more than usual agility. Some worked at the taking up of all kinds of combustibles for we wished to be well provided for the bridge. Every stick and piece of wood we could get hold of was soaking wet, but by breaking and whittling they could be made to add to a flame, and from the engine, which was kept full of wood for the purpose, we could give a good start to a fire. We had only one iron bar to drive out our spikes, a bent "crow's foot" would have been worth more than its weight in gold, but we hammered away with what we had, and spike after spike was drawn. Here I saw Andrews show real impatience for the first—I am not sure but I now say the only time. He had altered his dress, throwing off the cape and high hat that he wore while at stations, and had a small cap on which greatly changed his appearance. The nearing of the time when his plans would all culminate in success seemed to calm and inspire him. He snatched the iron bar out of the hands of the man who was wielding it, and—though we had strong and practiced workmen in our party—I had not before seen the blows rained down [illegible] say that he uttered an oath on this occasion, but though standing by I did not hear him the only words I did hear being directions about the work, given in his usual tones, but with quite an emphatic ring of triumph in them. He wanted that rail up in the fewest number of seconds and then—the bridge. There were several using a lever of green wood, and trying to tear up the end of a rail from which the spikes had not yet been drawn; but the lever bent too much, and a fence rail was added and we lifted again. At that instant, loud and clear from the south came the whistle of the engine in pursuit. It was near by and running at lightning speed. The roll of a thousand thunders could not have startled us more.

What could we do? At the end where we had been prying the rail it was bent, but it was still too firmly fixed for us to hope to lift it or break it like the last. But we did the best in our power; we bent the loose end up still further and put the fence rail carefully under it, with the hope that it would compel the pursuers either to stop and adjust it or throw them from the track, and then piled into the car and engine with a celerity born of long practice, and with one of its old bounds that jerked us from our feet—for Brown and Knight threw the valve wide open—the General bore us rapidly on. The impatience of Andrews to reach the bridge had not been diminished by the appearance of this new element in the situation.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed, there is a ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. If you have all, or any considerable number of the systoms, you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symtoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated, by physicians. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggists, at only 50 cents.

LOCKED UP IN THE HOUSE.

Six Children Cremated Through Their Parents' Criminal Foolishness.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 4.—The six children of Lester Singletary, a colored man of Clarendon county, were burned to death Thursday night. The parents locked them up in the house about 7 o'clock and went off to a negro church about two miles away, where a religious revival was in progress. During their absence the house caught fire and was burned to the ground, the six children perishing in the flames. The charred boxes of the victims were buried Friday in one grave.

An Illinois Assassination.

MANSFIELD, Ills., Feb. 6.—Adam Spears, one of the most respected and well-to-do farmers of Sangamon township, was assassinated Saturday night about 6:15 by some one meeting him on the road a few rods from his house. He had five bullet holes through his body, either of which was sufficient to cause death. He lived about half an hour after the shooting, but never spoke. The assassin is still at large. Circumstantial evidence points strongly to a disreputable person who is supposed to be the father of a wealthy man.

Renews Her Youth.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Cady Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 75 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and now able to do all my own housework and owe my thanks to Electric Bitters. I having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain."

A Model Newspaper

THE NEW YORK MAIL AND EXPRESS

The Advocate of the Best Interests of the Home—The Enemy of the Saloon. The Friend of American Labor. The Favorite Newspaper of People of Refined Tastes Everywhere.

The New York MAIL AND EXPRESS, the favorite American newspaper of many years, continues to meet the wants of an intelligent and cultivated readership, has recently made some noteworthy improvements, and is steadily increasing its general excellence. It is in the broadest sense

A National Newspaper,

most carefully edited, and adapted to the wants and tastes of intelligent readers throughout the entire country—North, South, East and West. It is a thoroughly clean paper, free from the corrupting, sensational and demoralizing trash, miscalled news, which defiles the pages of too many city papers.

OUR POLITICS.

We believe the Republican party to be the true instrument of the POLITICAL PROGRESS of the American people; and holding that the honest enforcement of its principles is the best guarantee of the national welfare, we shall support them with all our might; but we shall always treat opposing parties with consideration and fair play.

AGAINST THE SALOON.

The MAIL AND EXPRESS is the recognized National organ of the great Anti-Saloon Republican movement. It believes that the liquor traffic as it exists to-day in the United States is the enemy of society, a fruitful source of corruption in politics, the ally of anarchy, a school of crime, and, with its avowed purpose of seeking to corruptly control elections and legislation, is a menace to the public welfare and deserves the condemnation of all good men.

ANIMAL CATCHING DEVICE.

With this simple tool one man and a boy 10 years of age can hold and ring the most vicious and largest hog with ease. It can be used for handling hogs for all purposes, and sheep as well. In washing or shearing sheep, put the Catcher loose in the handle, then reach out and catch the sheep without disturbing the flock. Always catching by the leg. There is no danger of breaking the leg, the device being pulled out from the handle when on the leg of the animal. On receipt of $1.25 I will send to any address postpaid the Catcher with twitch to hold the nose of the hog to ring. Catcher without the handle for $1.00. Large profits to good agents. Ask your hardware merchant for them.

FARMERS SOCIAL CLUB

Tuesday evening, Jan. [illegible], the Farmers Social Club met at George Griswold's. After the usual literary exercises the question "How long should land lie after seeding for the good of the soil" was discussed in an earnest manner, showing that the [illegible] interests.

R. B. Gillespie opened the discussion as follows: "That would come somewhat to the [illegible] with us. We [illegible] years. [illegible] let the soil be [illegible] my part I would [illegible] covered [illegible] ground [illegible] thank it a premium. I think it better to cover it [illegible] with the [illegible] thing.

Mr. Fisher. I have not [illegible] ing rail fence [illegible] for some [illegible] that [illegible] grew [illegible]

Mr. Gillespie. [illegible] being partial [illegible] the soil [illegible]

Mr. Fisher. [illegible] fall wing.

Mr. [illegible] little experience with seeds [illegible] had a piece [illegible] fence, and it had been seeded so long that it was called sod ground. When I moved the fence and plowed it with the rest of the field the corn were not as good there as elsewhere. But I think the soil is better for being covered as it then retains the manure and gases. I think it is one of the best results of clovering as it effectually covers the ground and retains the gas, as I do not think the roots do all the enriching. After seeding to clover I would let it lie two years before plowing for crops, as the best plan for the good of the soil. I have been in the habit of sowing about three quarts to a [illegible] and seeding the next year after seeding and find my seeded crop as good as the first and the seed will have a good catch on clover.

Mr. Horton. I think last year [illegible] for the good of the soil just as long as you can get 2½ tons of hay per acre and when you cannot get that it better be plowed up. I believe land should not be plowed oftener than is absolutely necessary for the good of the soil.

Mr. F. Reeve. I think it well out [illegible] longer than two years after seeding we will not get much. There is land in Rome township that does not need plowing and can be an indefinite time and afford excellent pasture and not hurt the soil.

Mr. Griswold. My opinion is that ownership of clover [illegible] we should take off before it is plowed and sowed for a rotation of crops and then seeded again.

Mr. Fisher. I have had but little experience but I think the system of seeding to clover is beneficial to the ground and will continue to enrich it, and one or two years is long enough to let it lie before cropping again.

Mr. Schreeder. I think for the good of the soil two years is long enough to let it lie. My land has improved in productiveness and I attribute it to seeding to clover.

Mr. Fisher. My second years cutting of clover is better than the first but I think for the good of the soil it should not lie but two years. If the clover is large all the better, plow it under and rotate again. On our soil we must keep plowing and not raise too many crops before reseeding.

Mr. Coddington. I do not want it understood that I advocate letting land lie by reseeding the second year, but I think the clover could be kept good for a number of years, but it would not be good for the soil.

Club adjourned to meet Tuesday evening Feb. 14th, at I. H. Schreeder's.

MRS. F. C. RECTOR, Sec.

At a regular meeting of the Farmers' Social Club, a committee on resolutions was appointed and reported as follows:

WHEREAS, Death has again entered our midst and taken away Mr. John I. Rector, an esteemed and highly esteemed member of our club, and

WHEREAS, The bands that bind us together are so strong, that when suddered by the hand of death, they impel us to make public expressions of our sense of the great loss sustained, therefore

Resolved, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of God, we unite in tendering our sympathy to the bereaved family, who have lost one not only dear to themselves, but also to a large circle of friends.

Resolved, That in this death this club has lost a link from the chain which binds up in the ties of friendship.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of the club, that they be presented to the widow of the deceased, and also that they be sent to the Tecumseh Herald for publication.

NORTHERN LENAWEE FARMERS' CLUB

The meeting at A. Welch's Feb. 1st, was largely attended and the program given in last report was carried out with but few changes.

There were many present from a distance, about half from F. & C. club and from F. & I. club. All were well pleased and all supposed the meeting. The discussion was the liveliest and best that your correspondent has had the pleasure of attending. The addresses of the President, I. F. N. Bowen, was chock-full of good things. He said that nothing creates as much good feeling as a farmers' meeting, and that an era of good feeling was being inaugurated by the forming of the farmers' clubs. He thought that the interesting programs would serve to [illegible] and make them a means of good to the farmer and his family.

At the next meeting of the club, at Myron Midgette's, Wednesday, Feb. [illegible], a box social, with the price of dinner 25 cents, was resolved upon. All ladies expected to bring a box containing supper for two persons, with owner's name inside the box. The gentlemen's dinners will be sold for 25 cents each.

Question—What benefit is the credit system to the farmers?

W. B. Keyser said he had been away from home and eat too much lately to talk or think very easily. Thought that running in a debt indiscriminately a serious mistake. Paying cash was a cheaper system to get along by. Borrowing money at 10 per cent. and paying cash with it better than running a store bill. A good credit a detriment to a farmer. Had to pay more for an article bought on time than he had to pay cash. Running into debt for such a benefit. New mortgage law a detriment to the poor man, and beneficial to the rich one. Would rather owe $1,000 in a mortgage than ten notes of $100 each.

C. P. Remington said the credit system was convenient for a farmer, but a store bill was of no benefit. Small expenses should be met with cash or produce, to save large receipts for large bills. A good credit of great benefit to a young man of good habits, for it enables him to begin work for himself much sooner than to work by the month to get the start. Was harder for him to get the first $100 than the next $500, the first $500 than the next $1000. The prompt meeting of debts when due the only method of keeping a good credit. A judiciously used credit of great benefit.

G. Swartz. Credit was the ruin of many men. Did not believe in starting on credit. Interest paid and wear of tools takes all profits and leaves little to pay debts with. Credit makes it too easy to buy.

I. F. N. Bowen could not always buy cheaper for cash. The abuse of the credit system was the curse of it. Thought that the richest men in the country were helped to be so by the credit system and good management.

M. VanValkenburgh. Had derived profit from the credit system. Buying goods on credit was no more expensive than paying cash, if a man was good. But if a man could always pay cash would be pleasanter. Credit must be used with judgment.

Allen Wells could get started quicker and better on the credit system. Thinks men are few now working for themselves and out of debt, who commenced working by the month to get their start within the past ten years. Had managed to meet his payments when due so far.

Abram Derby. I commenced by working by the month at $16 a month. Worked 16 years and never got over $15 a month, but at the end of that time had $2150.00 saved; had to pay at that time 25cts a yard for shirting such as can now be bought for 5 and 6 cents. Had used credit system to advantage.

H. Hoag. Said that some of our largest farmers were not any more than meeting expenses; what would the small farmers do?

Others spoke on the question, and many two or three times; the discussion was enjoyed by those participating.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. P. W. DePuy.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst a kind neighbor, a true wife, useful member and steadfast friend;

WHEREAS, the intimate relations held by our deceased sister with the members of this society, render it fitting that we should express our appreciation of her services as a christian [illegible]

Resolved, That while we bow with humble submission to the will of our Supreme Ruler, we do not the less mourn for our sister who has been called this early from her labor, to rest.

Resolved, That in her death the club loses a member who has always acted to promote its interest, devoted to its welfare, ever ready to cheer and comfort the distressed everywhere, and one whose Christian virtues endeared her to all hearts, and that she has left by her pure life the gate ajar and through which we pass to our rest and peace.

Resolved, That this society tenders its heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved husband and brothers and sisters in this their sad affliction.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes of this club.

HONORABLY DISCHARGED

The following is taken from the Helena Daily Independent of Jan. 26th. Mr. Erskine's old acquaintances here will be glad to know that he has been exonerated from all criminality in the shooting affray in which he was engaged.

Mr. J. M. Erskine was examined before Probate Judge Kerley, at Boulder, on the 25th and 27th inst., upon the charge of assault with intent to kill Leo Sutor, whom he shot and slightly wounded at Basin on the 6th inst. At the time of shooting Mr. Erskine was at Basin as the representative of Bach, Cory & Co., in the transaction of some business for that house. The testimony disclosed that Sutor called Erskine out of the hotel where he was staying, and after a few words, and to the surprise of Mr. Erskine, knocked him down and attempted to jump upon him. Mr. Erskine kicked him off, and though somewhat stunned by the blow, sprang to his feet and drew his pistol. Sutor was very much the larger of the two men, and Erskine would have been no match for him in resisting his assault. He warned Sutor to keep away from him, but Sutor persisted in following him in a threatening manner, and by a movement which indicated a purpose to draw a weapon, caused the firing of the shot by Mr. Erskine, which slightly wounded him, and which ended the altercation. The evidence showed that Sutor was the assailant throughout, and that Erskine acted in plain self-defense, and Probate Judge Kerley therefore discharged him and exonerated his bail.

GOT THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Garretsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat and healed and entirely cured." Papillon extract of that Catarrh Cure effectually cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

MESSRS. I think you had better try Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam for your cold for I hear nothing but the highest praise for it.

CLERK, how is the baby? Oh, he is as chirpy as a lark. That Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam is a great remedy. Three doses relieved his suffering and he was ready for play.

At Night always have Acker's Baby Soother at hand. It is the only safe medicine yet made that will remove all infantile disorders. It contains no Opium or Morphine, but gives the child natural ease from pain. Price 25 cents. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

PROF. CHAS. F. SKINNER.

The subject of this sketch who is the present leader of the Tecumseh City Band, is a musician of great merit and many years experience, having served for some time in the British Army. He enlisted in 1857 and in 1860 he was sent to the military academy of music at Hounslow, and studied there three years, graduating in 1863. On his return to his regiment was made band sergeant and held that position until he purchased his discharge at London, Ontario, in 1868. He was then leader of the 7th Reg. Light Infantry band, which contained 42 pieces, for four years. We went from there to Stratford, Ontario, and was leader of the Grand Trunk band of 25 pieces for eighteen months. He then went to Fort Wayne, Ind., and organized the Fort Wayne City band of 18 pieces. He traveled one season with Warner's Circus band. He next organized the Ypsilanti City Band, and was their leader for 5 years. He then went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he was leader and teacher of the Band for five years. From there he went to Adrian and played at the Skating Rink one season, thence to Palmyra where he taught the local band about one year, and in the winter of 1886 he was induced to remove to Tecumseh and became the leader of our band. Since residing here he has also taught the Britton, Macon and Brooklyn bands. The reputation and efficiency of our Band is due in a large measure to his leadership and ability to mould the musical talents which exist here into the proper channels and to combine them in harmony in a good organization. The Band have been very fortunate in securing the services of such a man. The above cut is reproduced from a photo taken at twenty-two.

THE TECUMSEH CITY BAND.

As the City Band will favor our citizens with a grand benefit Concert on Wednesday evening next, we thought this would be an opportune time to present a brief historical sketch of the band itself and the men who compose it.

About the 1st. of October, 1884, Knapp's Sextette Band was organized in Tecumseh with the following members: Geo. Knapp, John Richards, W. T. Eccles, J. H. Smith, H. B. Root, and H. G. Conkling. They furnished music at the rink and also at private socials and entertainments. They rehearsed regularly and frequently and became quite proficient. May 30th, 1886, they reorganized and admitted several new members, and in August 1886 they purchased the uniforms and instruments of the defunct K. T. band of Adrian, which are now in use. In November '86, their leader, Geo. Knapp moved away, and they then secured Prof. C. F. Skinner as teacher and leader. New members were again admitted, increasing the band to sixteen pieces or seventeen members in all with the drum major; since that time the organization has been known as the "Tecumseh City Band," and is now recognized as one of the best bands of music in this section of the State. It has done a large amount of playing here at home and has received pay for only a small portion of it, not exceeding $70.00 in all. The expenses of the band since Aug. 1886 to the present time have been $1096, of which $300 was paid for uniforms and instruments at one time. They have received from citizens of Tecumseh in donations $336.75. Below is a complete roster of the present membership.

The Michigan and Ohio Band Association will hold their annual reunion here in August next, and a large crowd is expected here at that time. J. H. Smith, who is the business manager of the band, was elected Secretary of that Association at its last meeting held in Ohio, and H. B. Root was chosen President.

The Band, as at present constituted and conducted, is one of which Tecumseh may well be proud. It deserves the encouragement and support of all citizens. Let us resolve to give the boys such a benefit next Wednesday evening as will send them on their way rejoicing.

—Something new. I have opened rooms in the Mills Block, second floor, where I shall be prepared to do all kinds of cleaning, repairing and renovating clothes. My experience in custom tailoring will enable me to do first-class work, and my charges will be reasonable. Coats, pants and vests made after cut. Give me a call.
D. M. ZELLERS.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 9, 1888.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Edgar Ide of Detroit spent last Sunday at home.

The last freeze-up came just in time to hold the sleighing.

Let us all turn out and give the band a rousing benefit next Wednesday evening.

Miss Graves of Cambridge has been spending a few days with friends in Tecumseh.

Milo Aldrich, of Onsted was in Tecumseh yesterday, and favored the HERALD with a call.

Each township board of registration will meet on Saturday preceding election, Feb. 18th.

E. C. Rogers is in the Saginaw country, looking after Gus Slayton's lumber interests.

Sixteen counties have carried local option and sixteen more will vote on the question this month.

C. J. Hendershot has our thanks for the holiday edition of the Daily Sentinel published at Garden City, Kan.

It is suggested that the Presbyterian ladies might make it profitable to serve their supper Friday, Feb. 17th.

J. W. Crane, clerk of the Lawrence House, Adrian, spent last Sunday in Tecumseh. Wonder if he has a "best girl" in these parts.

The new story in the Free Press, entitled "Jones and I," opens with the true ring. Luke Sharp has made another hit.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Graves and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Todd were among the Adrian parties who attended the Old Folks Dance.

A. W. Slayton wants to buy for Cash 100,000 1 in. basswood lumber, 100,000 1 in. red oak, 100 carloads of good timothy hay.

The tickets for the special local option election will be furnished by the county clerk at the expense of the county.

D. M. Zellers has opened rooms over A. W. Mills' office in the Mills block, where he will be prepared to clean, repair and renovate clothes. Give him a call.

Any voter not already registered can apply for registration to the supervisor, township treasurer, or township clerk on any day preceeding the election, except Sunday.

There will be no dinner served at the Opera House during the Institute, but, as it is expected people will provide their dinner in baskets, the committee have made arrangements to furnish hot coffee to all, so please remember to bring along your cups.

Two citizens meetings will be held in the interests of temperance, one at the M. E. church Sunday evening, Feb. 12th, and one at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, Feb. 19th. These meetings will be addressed by the citizens of Tecumseh.
BY ORDER OF COM.

J. R. Miller sends us a copy of the Granada Times, published at Granada, Col. It contains an account of a business men's meeting at which a committee was appointed to raise funds to advertise the city. Mr. Miller was chosen chairman of the committee and he proposes to push the scheme. This is the way they boom western towns.

The ladies of St. Peter's church will give a Valentine entertainment at the Rink on the evening of Feb. 14, 1888. Supper will be served from half past five to eight o'clock. Ice cream and cake throughout the evening. A nice variety of valentines have been manufactured by the ladies, the sale of which by St. Valentine will be one of the features of the entertainment. Supper tickets, ten cents. Ice cream extra.

The attention of the readers of the HERALD is especially called to the notice of "Many Citizens" of Ridgeway, found in another column in this week's issue. We hope there will be a large, earnest and hearty response to this call, for it is evident to all that a hotel and hall would be a very desirable addition to the business interests of that village. With its fine church and library, its railroad facilities and "beautiful situation" it should awake from the sleep of years and come forth in the greatness of a genuine western boom.

Tecumseh Lodge F. and A. M. held a special communication last Friday evening for work in the 3rd degree. About 40 brethren were over from Adrian, and both Clinton and Manchester sent a number of visitors. The work was admirably handled. The candidate for degree honors proved himself fully equal to the occasion; he rode the goat like a veteran. But then he is a good horseman and good riding was expected of him. At the close of the degree work a hot lunch was served in the ante-room, and an hour was spent in social intercourse. It was the most successful and enjoyable meeting held by the Tecumseh brethren in a long time.

Burt Tate went to Adrian yesterday.

Miss Opeia Bowen is visiting at Toledo, O., this week.

John W. Bowen of Palmyra was in town last Tuesday.

A new time card went into force on [illegible]

Frank Snedicor arrived home from Ypsilanti last Monday and is again on the sick list.

Rev. F. Adkins is able to be out again and expects to preach in his own church next Sabbath morning.

Miss Ella Warner returned to her home in Brooklyn this morning, after an extended visit with relatives here.

A slight panic was caused yesterday morning by a burning chimney on Wright's block but no damage was done.

Remember the dance at Armory Hall Feb. 21, given by the members of Co. C. Good music will be in attendance.

The Board of Registration meets at C. A. Slayton's office Saturday, Feb. 18. Persons not registered may at any time hand name to township clerk.

The Ladies Library Association have added a large lot of new books to their library. They were bought with the proceeds of their recent entertainments.

Charlie and Stella Anthony were surprised by a sleigh load of their young friends last Tuesday evening. The affair was conducted on the leap year plan.

Miss Clara Waldron returned from Ypsilanti last Saturday, and on Monday she was engaged to teach school in the Cairnes district, south of the village.

The old folks have had their dance and now the colored gentlemen of the village are arranging for a hop of their own. It will come off the 15th at Armory Hall.

Reserved seats for the Band concert next Wednesday evening are now on sale at Adamson's jewelry store. Secure them early and give them a rousing benefit.

Miss Corinne Sheldon has resigned her position in the telephone office and is succeeded by Miss Nellie Cole. Miss Sheldon's many friends will regret her leaving.

The school board has decided to order a three-globe instrument, which will show the different phases of the sun, moon and earth. It will be put in the village schools.

Where does Bro. Applegate, of the Adrian Times, stand on the local option question? A good many voters in these parts are patiently waiting for some sign from him.

On account of the accident to Mr. W. C. Heck this week, the ladies Aid society of the M. E. church will postpone the regular meeting one week, and will convene Wednesday, Feb. 22.

We have received from Geo. W. Myers of Detroit, No. 3 Moffatt Block, a copy of his new work, entitled "Artistic Homes." It is the neatest thing of that character we have ever seen. Any one designing to build should have a copy.

As Miss Molly Gray, daughter of Elliott Gray, was driving on Chicago St. last Monday, the cutter ran into the horse's heels and frightened the animal when near Bidwell's corner, causing it to run away. The young lady was thrown out but fortunately was not hurt. The cutter fared worse as it was badly smashed.

At the annual meeting of the Commercial Telegraph Co. held Monday, Feb. 5, at Grand Army Hall, the following officers were elected:
Pres.—O. B. Finch.
Vice Pres.—W. B. Keyser.
Sec.—L. G. North.
Treas.—O. P. Bills.
Manager—R. J. W. Bowen.
The directors of the company were re-elected for another term.

Herning & Son had a number of hams hanging in Bates & Wooden's smoke house last Friday, undergoing the process of smoking, when the fire blazed up a little high and burnt a string and let one of them fall. The fat made the fire burn still more and when the firm went to look they found that $25 worth of hams had gone up in smoke.

Miss Jesse Bonstelle appeared at the Palace opera house Monday evening in "Trixie, the Romp Heiress," and was greeted with a fair house. The performance was first class in every respect and drew forth rounds of applause. Miss Bonstelle is certainly an actress of unusual ability and is supported by a first-class company. She is sure of a full house whenever she returns.—Bellevue News.

Jas. O'Riley and Bud Hall had the misfortune to get into an altercation on the street last Saturday evening and Jas. called Bud some hard names, whereupon he responded by giving Jas. a rap on the nose and other prominent features, after which he was "run in" by the marshal. Monday evening Bud was brought before Justice Davidson on a charge preferred against him by O'Riley of assault and battery, and plead guilty of battering complainant's nose and was given the choice of $6.55 fine or 15 days in the county jail. He took the former.

Abijah Packard of this village has received a pension.

Go and hear Trixie at the opera house this evening.

Mrs. Chas. Blanchard, of Chicago, is spending a week or so with Tecumseh friends.

Next Wednesday evening, Feb. 14, has been fixed upon as the date of the Band Concert.

The Lenawee County Teachers' Association will hold a meeting at Adrian on Saturday the 25th.

The Adrian Times is improving. It published the full text of the local option law last week—an advertisement.

Winchell & Son fool to consolidate the local telegraph lines and establish a central office in this village. It caught the people asleep.

Miss Jesse is a host in herself and always wins the hearts of her audience. The play is very catchy and all should see it. Eaton Herald.

One of the attractions of the Valentine entertainment next Tuesday evening will be a sale of fancy articles by the Girl Aid Society of St. Peter's church.

C. E. Williamson went to Battle Creek yesterday as delegate from Raisin Valley Encampment to State Grand Encampment. He will be gone two or three days.

The convocation at St. Peter's church proved to be quite an interesting series of meetings. The program was presented substantially as given in last week's HERALD.

About 40 of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Will Chiverall gathered at their home last Thursday evening intending to surprise the host. It is needless to say that all enjoyed themselves.

Hon. Witter J. Baxter died at his home in Jonesville last Monday. He lived in Tecumseh at an early day for a few years and afterwards moved to Jonesville. He was a brother of Benj. L. Baxter of this village.

Are the friends of local option aware that the saloon interests in this county are well organized, have a good campaign fund in hand, are making a careful canvas of the voters and intend to capture the special election on the 20th. Forewarned is forearmed.

The Adrian Press offers itself for sale to the "Prohibs;" that is, Bro. Stearns says he is willing to sell for the amount of his investment. This offer contains the nucleus of grand possibilities. Let the Republicans go in and help the "Prohibs" buy Stearns out. A good prohibitionist of Tecumseh would be glad to accommodate Bro. Stearns, if he will take a brick store in exchange located next door to a saloon. To turn the Press into a prohibition paper would knock its list higher than a kite. This would double up the lists of the HERALD and Hudson Gazette, the two leading temperance papers of the County. Pretty good scheme. Does Bro. Schermerhorn second the motion?

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

About three o'clock Tuesday afternoon Mr. Wm. Heck went down into the basement of Heck Bros.' flouring mill to oil the shafting. A few minutes after his son, Chas. Heck, who was alone in the mill, heard a strange jar in the machinery. He immediately went to the trap door which leads to the basement and looked down, and as he did so he saw a jack knife fall to the floor. Going further down the stairs he looked up and saw a sight, the like of which he does not want to see again. Mr. Heck had stood upon a high bench in order to reach the shaft handily and a bolt projecting from a burr attached to the shaft caught into a knit blouse he wore and instantly wound him around between the ceiling and shaft and when found the blouse and two shirts had wound up into a roll around his neck and was choking him to death. His eyes were protruding from their sockets, his face was black, and he was insensible. Charlie immediately shut down the machinery and called for help and the body was cut down, medical aid summoned and he was revived and taken home. No bones were broken but he was bruised considerably about the head and shoulders. The most serious cause for alarm was the choking and had it not been for the falling of the knife attracting his son's attention a few minutes more would have put an end to Mr. Heck's earthly career. Dr. Woodward has charge of the case and is quite confident that Mr. Heck will ultimately recover. At nine o'clock this morning he was resting easily and his symptoms were very favorable.

Persons desirous of obtaining life insurance at actual cost, should write for circulars to the SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY, No. 233 Broadway, New York.

HOW SHALL WE VOTE?

The Presbyterian Church was filled Sunday morning with an appreciative congregation to listen to Rev. W. H. Babbit's sermon on the Local Option question. It was a strong sermon, [illegible] and produced an excellent impression. As we have not room to publish it entire, we give a brief, abstract of the same which will give the salient points:

Psalm 94:20. "Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee which frameth mischief by a law?"

Liberty consists in having ones choice free from the interference of others. It is good for those who are prepared to use it well; evil for those who are not. In the formation of Civil Goverment certain rational rights are yielded for the sake of the advantages to be derived from an organized Society. The true object of Goverment is the welfare of the governed. The design of Civil Constitutions and statents should be the greatest good of the greatest number. To have too many laws and too strict ones is oppressive. To have too few, is dangerous. One extreme to be avoided is tyranny; another is Anarchy.

The province of government, is to encourage industry, to stimulate enterprize, to quell disorder, to punish criminals, to shield society against nuisances and pestilences, both moral and physical. It should make much of the family and foster morality and intelligence. These are conceded principles lying at the foundation of human government. Let us apply these principles to the case before us: the question of prohibiting the sale of intoxicants.

We have many forms of business against the pursuit of which no word of objection can be made. They are lawful in the highest sense, being useful and necessary. One form of business has arisen however, and outstripped all others in magnitude concerning which objection is made. As a rule, it is the best class of people rather than the worst who object to it. The mothers of our land who have sons growing up to manhood regard it with special dread and disapproval. Under the influence of this growing opposition to this growing business, goverment has been led to offer our citizens' the opportunity of prohibiting it and of having the support of the law in its prohibition. The vote of the sober, the sensible, the reflective is looked for in favor of this prohibition.

What are the arguments in favor of such prohibition?

It can hardly be denied that our country and the world would be better off without the sale of Alcoholic Liquors as a beverage than with it. We must have bread, meat, clothes, houses, schools, and churches, but we can do without strong drink. Our youth would do better not to grow up with expensive and dangerous habits. And this habit of drinking is at once expensive and dangerous. How expensive it is let the fact that the liquor bill for the country for a single year is 900 millions of dollars testify. And that it is dangerous let the fact that we have an army of more than 300,000 drunkards in our borders, with more to follow; testify. Luxuries are not wholly to be condemned if they are harmless, but this is not. Government ought in its enactments to favor and encourage economy and not waste. Our Lord said after the miracle of feeding 5000 "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost."

How many beautiful homes would 900 millions of dollars build and furnish, and how many sweet charities would it support? We have vast resources in our land but this does not justify waste. And this is a wasteful business. It prevents the hungry from eating and the naked from being clothed.

But there is a far heavier charge against it than wastefulness. It is injurious to virtue and good morals, it is promotive of disorder and suffering and crime. If this has not been clearly proven then nothing in the world has ever been proven. We have the testimony of witnesses the most reliable. It comes to us from physicians, judges, statesmen, philanthropists, men of letters, as well as clergymen. Statistics have been piled up mount on high, showing the evils wrought by this business. There is no need of repeating these proofs. They have become familiar as household words.

The question is now 1st. Where does the blame for this business lie? 2. Where is the remedy for its evils to be found?

In answer to the question, where does the blame of this traffic rest, we may say

1st. With the liquor drinker. Every person who forms this habit of drinking is accountable for the injury it does himself and others. He is not excusable for yielding to the temptation to form it. He was warned against it by his Bible, his friends and his own conscience. The law is right in punishing him for the crimes he commits when under the craze of strong drink. Though the law is inconsistent in permitting him to be so strongly tempted as he is by the legalization of this traffic.

2. The liquor seller is to blame. He puts a stumbling block in his brothers way. He tempts the weak. He acts the part of the "Spider to the fly." He uses the [illegible] of his business. In his heart he acknowledges them. But his greed for gain is so great that he will not listen to the voice of his own conscience or admit that he does wrong.

3. But the goverment that throws the aegis of its protection over the business is to blame. It is carried on by the consent and connivance of the government. It is iniquity framed by a law. And the appeal to heaven in favor of its continuance is impious. Our legislators are responsible for the laws they enact and for not unmaking those they know to be evil in their effects.

But last of all the citizens of our government are to blame. They can either vote this traffic up, or vote it down, they can put the stigma of their disapproval on it in many ways. If the citizens of this state and this county did their duty, in the face of admitted facts, prohibition would not only be passed. It would be enforced. Such a flood of light is poured on the duty of every well meaning citizen in reference to this business that he cannot neglect that duty and be innocent. The time will come when we will look on this Saloon system as a barbarous one, and when a proposition to revert to this traffic will be looked upon almost as a proposition would be looked upon to revive the African Slave trade. Let each lover of his country and of his kind put his pry under this lofty throne of iniquity and make it totter to its fall.

THE OLD FOLKS DANCE

Rarely has the Opera House been the scene of a more enjoyable party than occurred there last Thursday night. The "Old Folks" got up the party, but the young folks were all invited and many of them graced the party by their presence. The Old Folks themselves were there in force also. It was not a kid glove, swallow-tailed coat party, that is true, but a real old fashioned, jolly affair, where all felt at home, and young and old vied with each other to see who would have the most fun. Over 60 dance tickets were sold and the galleries were crowded with spectators. Hunt's orchestra never made better music, which is all that need be said on that point. There were 30 numbers on the program, and it was carried out to the letter. The first quadrille was called at eight o'clock, and the last French Four left the floor at four o'clock, A. M. Between twelve o'clock and two refreshments were served at Marsden's and VanAntwerp's, and most of the company took supper at one or the other of these restaurants. A fine lay out was served at both places. A number of Adrian parties were in attendance, and all the adjoining towns were well represented. The program contained all the old-fashioned figures, such as Cecillian Circle, Opera Reel, Tempest, French Four, Money Musk, Fisher's Hornpipe, Virginia Reel, etc. The zest with which the older persons entered into the sport held the crowd of spectators until nearly midnight. Met Conklin danced the first set and the last one—during the interim he busied himself in ministering to the enjoyment of the guests. P. J. Farley unwound the Opera Reel as gracefully as a young man of twenty. John VanVleet did the French Four as well as he did twenty-five years ago. Ex-Sheriff Bidwell—oh, my! Although his wife does not dance, she was there to watch him. P. W. Adams danced with his granddaughter, and it was her maiden effort at dancing. Dick Gillespie went through with the Tempest like a house on fire. Lester Tribon cut the pigeon wing in Money Musk as accurately as though he had been a grandfather. Geo. Swartz made himself especially numerous in all the round dances. Charley Patterson took to French Four as kindly as an old landlord to quail on toast. Ben and Bert both danced all night and went home with the girls in the morning. But we must curtail these reflections or some one will be accusing us of personality. The party was a success financially as well as socially, as the receipts paid all expenses and left a sufficient surplus to buy the cigars for the committee.

CRUEL TREATMENT OF THE INSANE.

Serious Charges Preferred Against the Management of the Michigan Asylum.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Feb. 4.—Charges of inhumanity toward certain patients on the part of the management of the Michigan Asylum for the Insane, located here, have been made public. They are put on foot by three attendants recently discharged from the institution, the management say, of cause. Oscar F. Tempe charges that two patients on hall J, Myron Van Buren and E. A. Fowler, having refused to eat, were neglected, although their condition was repeatedly brought to the attention of the physicians, and that, after lingering without nourishment several days, they literally died of starvation. In Mr Van Buren's case an attempt was made, after he had been neglected four or five days to force milk down his throat, but it was too late and death ensued in a few hours. These patients belonged to that class who refuse to partake of food either as a result of some delusion or because of suicidal tendency. In such cases it is customary to force food down their throats, appliances being provided for this purpose. Ex-Attendant Lannis swears that while he was an attendant on hall E of the male department, a patient, Michael Madigan, was kept without bedclothing for two weeks during the severe November weather, as a penalty for tearing up, under an insane destructive impulse, the covering provided for him, and that his sufferings were intense.

Charles Lewis makes affidavit that A. Edwards was kept without food for several days because he refused to work when ordered by the physician. Lewis affidavit as to starving Edwards is corroborated by T. Harzell of this county, and B. J. Robinson, a Barry county teacher.

Affidavits are also made to the effect that Edward Cable was deprived of food for many hours because he refused to work out of doors, and that the physicians pulled a number of his front teeth out as a punishishment for the vicious habit of biting people. Another sworn statement charges physicians with pulling out the teeth of Johnny Blaine for the same reason.

The management will deny every allegation, and demand a searching investigation. The affidavits in the case were filed in a suit brought by the discharged attendants for the recovery of a month's pay forfeited by the institution.

A MOST HORRIBLE SIGHT.

A Female Lion Tamer Frightfully Mangled by the King of Beasts.

DETROIT, Feb. 4.—Saturday night, after the performance was finished at Lowry's Music hall, Belle Searle, the lion tamer, placed her head in the mouth of one of the lions, for the purpose of having a photograph taken in that position. A sudden flash of light frightened the beast and he closed his jaws on the head of the helpless woman, and retired, growling savagely, to a corner of his cage, dragging his victim with him. Hardly a little girl, tearing her bare breast and arms with his claws, and for a few minutes every one stood struck with horror not knowing how to render aid. Suddenly the attendants sprang into the cage and made a fierce attack upon the lion with sharp iron poles, and after a terrible struggle succeeded in driving him to release the girl and crawl in a corner with fear. Miss Searle was carried away, rendered to her dressing room and physicians summoned. Her neck and shoulders and her breast and one arm were terribly lacerated, and although she is still alive the doctors fear that she can not recover from the wounds which she received.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Feb. 4.—Calvin Cook, editor and publisher of the combination village paper, The Frankfort Crisis and Dragonic News, left home on Monday, and his whereabouts are now unknown. He is about 40 years old and married. He had written a drama, and had organized the young people of the village into a dramatic company for the purpose of giving it, both himself and wife taking active parts. It is thought he tired of editorial drudgery, and he is said to have written his wife a letter on leaving saying that she would never see him again, which tends to create the impression that all was not lovely at home.

A Detroit Newspaper in Luck.

DETROIT, Feb. 4.—A libel suit for $10,000 was instituted Tuesday afternoon against The Evening News by Maxwell M. Fisher, a prominent and wealthy business man. The News recently published a sensational article about alleged scandal, that it said was soon to be aired to the public through the courts. No names were given, but Fisher claims the only basis for the article is the fact that he will soon begin divorce proceedings against his wife, formerly Mrs. John J. Garrigan.

A $50,000 Fire at Cleveland, Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 4.—While experimenting with a new system of pipes for conducting the heavy oil from the tanks to the boilers in the rolling mill department of the Brotton Iron and Steel works, late last morning, a leak in the pipes allowed the oil to escape, which ignited, enveloping the whole building in a very few minutes. The structure with machinery will be a total loss, amounting to $50,000; insurance, $45,000.

ADRIAN, Mich., Sept. 1, 1886.

Messrs. Wagner & Shepard:

Both myself and my husband are using that medicine, "Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup," which you advised yesterday. I used it for neuralgia and my husband took it for rheumatism. It has entirely cured both of us so that we are now able to do our far n work and are in the best of health. We have recommended it to our neighbors, and they are using it with equally good results. It is one of the greatest remedies for the blood in the world, and for a lost appetite or a disordered stomach we don t believe there is anything equal to it.

INVENTION has revolutionized the world during the past half century. Not least among the wonders of inventive progress is a method and system of work that can be performed all over the country with the separating the workers from their homes. Part special, and one can do the work either as a full or all one's spare time only required. Capital not needed; you are started free. Cut this out and return to us and we will send you free, something of great value and importance to you, that will start you in business, which will bring you in more money right away than anything else in the world. Great success for all who begin at once. Address True & Co., Augusta, Maine.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medium of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it cures readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HERALD.

TWO PAPERS FOR PRICE OF ONE

The Publishers of The Farm and Garden have arranged with the publisher of the Herald to send both papers for a year to any one who will send the price of one paper, namely, $1.50, in advance. The regular price of The Farm and Garden is $1.00 per year, and it is worth much more to any person who is interested in farming or gardening. It is not a cheap, trashy sheet, but is a large, handsome, 16-page paper, filled with valuable matter, and is well worth the price when you can get it at the regular rate. It is not a partisan political paper, but discusses the topics of the day from the standpoint of the farmer, and is ably edited and well printed. It is just such a paper as every farmer should take, and we feel sure that if our readers will only see a copy they will be anxious to have it. We can only do this by making the special offer above, which we can do because we have a large number of subscribers, and can afford to make a little less money on this than on other business. Remember that we must have your order at our office before we can make the club rate. Address

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Issued by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

A FRIENDLY LETTER TO A PROMINENT DIVINE, REV. DR. McARTHUR.

BY REV. GEORGE H. VIBBERT

[illegible] Dr. McArthur. I find in the Lakewood Times and Journal a quotation from the Tribune of answers you gave a reporter concerning the Prohibition party.

You spoke of "intolerance towards temperance men." Is there no "intolerance" shown in your severe criticism of Prohibitionists? Why should you call it "dictation" when we object to some things the Rev. Dr. Cuyler has written? We do not doubt Dr. Cuyler's devotion, but we do sometimes question his wisdom, and we have exercised our plain right and duty in criticising utterances of his that we thought were neither wise nor helpful. We are willing to labor with all people whom we think are helping the cause, but when we think they are mistaken we plainly say so, and keep on in what we believe is the better way. You have no right to insinuate that we formed an "alliance" with the saloons to defeat Judge Maynard. You know, if you know anything about it, that the Prohibitionists never formed an "alliance" with the saloon for any purpose.

Did your G. O. P. nominate a thorough temperance man in opposition to Judge Maynard? Would you have advised us to vote then with the Republican party?

We do nominate men always whom we know can be depended upon to be true to prohibition. We are not sure that Republican or Democratic Prohibitionists can be trusted to always serve Prohibition rather than their party. Henry Wilson, United States Senator and Vice-President, was a total abstainer and Prohibitionist, yet he persuaded the Republicans of Massachusetts to let up on the beer law to gain votes, and Massachusetts has never recovered from the inevitable demoralization.

We care for our party because we believe that prohibition will not be had everywhere and thoroughly enforced until officials are elected who are pledged to prohibition. What evidence have you that we are more desirous to "claim something" for ourselves "than to save men from the curse of rum?" It is a grave charge, yet you do not substantiate it. What shadow of proof have you that we are trying to "gratify personal or political ambitions?" You know there is not one prominent Prohibitionist who does not lose far more than he gains by advocacy of the cause everywhere spoken against by men who care more for party than principle.

We are not going to the liquor men nor their allies in both parties for tactics.

We have voted with either Republican or Democratic party for twenty years, and have done all we could to persuade each party to help prohibition. We are convinced that both parties care more for the liquor vote than for the Prohibition vote. We are not organized to "smash" either party, we are organized to destroy the liquor traffic. If either party gets in the way the worse for that party. We shall go on if both parties are "smashed." Your pretended analysis of our platform seems to me to be neither wise nor just, and is unworthy any man who pretends to be even a fair minded partisan. I hope for the sake of your reputation as an intelligent and fair-dealing man, that the report was not correct. No "unprejudiced man" would say such unjust and bitter things of his brethren as this report ascribes to you. Ask the New York State Republican managers if they think that 30,000 votes for Rev. Dr. Huntington, the Prohibitionist, last Tuesday, indicated a "far distant" building up of a third party. When you join us, as you surely will if you continue to desire to serve the temperance cause, you will be ashamed of the "intolerance" that led you to say such bitterly unfair things of Prohibitionists. I cannot believe that you intended to be unfair and harsh, but your partisan feelings ran away with your kindness and sense of justice.

What "noble work" has the Republican party done for temperance in the State of New York or New Jersey? If you have studied it you know that its record is shameful. In 1882 and 1883 the New York Republican platform declared in favor of submitting constitutional prohibition to popular vote. More than once since the party has had majority enough in the Legislature, but it has not yet redeemed its pledge. In 1887 the Republican party had a majority in the Legislature that passed the Crosby High License bill and the Vedder Tax Bill—bills protested against by every prohibition and total abstinence organization in the State—and refused to pass the resolution for the submission of a Prohibition amendment, the bill to repeal the Mandamus act, and the bill to prohibit the sale of liquors at county fairs; passed the Ives' Pool bill, licensing gambling, the State to get 5 per cent. of the gross receipts, and passed the Cantor Concert Saloon bill. The Republican party, if it had wanted to, could have defeated all this infamous legislation. To a letter [illegible] I wrote you some time ago, I think I told you of the Republican primaries held in liquor saloons, the twenty liquor dealers on King's County Republican Committee, the fifty liquor dealers on New York County Republican Committee, the liquor dealers sent as delegates to the last Republican State Convention in Saratoga, the liquor dealers nominated by Republicans for Senate and Assembly and for Aldermen, and Republican liquor advocates nominated for office, or prominent in party councils. Not a nominee on the New York State Republican ticket this year was known to be a Prohibitionist, nor is either New York Republican United States Senator.

In New Jersey the record of the Republicans is worse, if possible, than in New York. In 1884 and 1885 Republicans had a majority in the Legislature and voted down every temperance measure presented to it, viz., Resolution for Submission of Constitutional Prohibition, a scientific temperance educational bill, a local option bill with a Sunday Closing clause, and at a special session again defeated the local option bill.

I can learn of nothing the Republican party of New Jersey has ever done [illegible] though the State has had for years one of the worst license laws ever on a statute book.

The Tribune since election has declared that Republicans must strenuously oppose both Prohibitionists and saloon advocates. Time and space would fail me to tell more of the wicked recreancy of the Republican party in other states to prohibition, and of the Raster resolution adopted in 1872 by the National Republican Convention, aimed at temperance and Sunday laws. The Republicans of Ohio passed the Dow law that legalized Sunday liquor selling in Cincinnati, Columbus, Toledo and Sandusky. The leader of the Republican party in Hamilton County, Ohio, and its candidate two years ago for county clerk was George Cox, a saloon-keeper, in whose saloon five murders have been committed, one of them the night he was nominated, serenaded after last election by the Blaine club; and the chairman of the State Finance committee of the Pennsylvania Republicans last year was D. C. Kellar, chairman of the State liquor league. Seven other liquor sellers were on the same committee, and the party nominated fifty-seven liquor dealers in seven counties, and while posing as a "temperance" party the chairman of its State committee was sending articles in favor of license to Republican editors!

All this shameful record of the Republican party, and more, must be known to you, and yet you berate the Prohibitionists because they refuse to longer vote with such a party!—a party whose last deliverance, in New York at its State Convention, on the temperance question, pleases Sheridan Shook and other brewers and beer sellers and saloonists, and thousands of professional politicians who have never even pretended to be temperance men. Prohibitionists may well wonder how you, voting with such a party, could have the affrontery to lecture them about caring more for their own party than for restriction of liquor selling! They might retort, using terms you use in your criticism of Prohibitionists, that one who supports a party so shameless on the temperance question had better not talk about his neighbor who votes as he prays for the destruction of the liquor traffic, being a "bad citizen and a bad Christian."

Prohibitionists believe that license and taxation practically, if not technically, do protect liquor-selling. If the Republican party of New York meant to restrict and destroy the liquor traffic, and took any practical and immediate action, the brewers and liquor-sellers would leave it.

The Republican party for twenty-four years fostered and protected the brewing interest that now clamors openly for legal recognition of what it has always done secretly in defying the Sabbath. The party has never once rebuked the brewers and liquor-sellers who all these years, by selling liquor, have defied Divine and human laws for Sabbath observance.

If Prohibitionists leave such a party and nominate men who have always believed in shutting liquor shops, not only Sundays, but all days, it is surely a "disgrace" that others who claim to be temperance men "stand apart when they might unite" to destroy the drink curse and to preserve Sunday and civilization and Christianity.

You may prefer to stay with Sheridan Shook, the brewer, and Charles Smith, the "Silver Dollar" saloon-keeper," and the other Republican brewers and grog-sellers of high and low degree in the party that they, not you, control, but Prohibitionists think it a "disgrace" to be in "alliance" with such a party and such men, taking "part with the rumseller" and sharing "with him in his guilt." A party that elects delegates and legislators and aldermen and bosses of liquor-sellers, and refuses in New York and Massachusetts and New Jersey and Wisconsin and Illinois and Nebraska to permit the people to vote [illegible] that in Ohio and Michigan refused to investigate the frauds that counted out prohibition majorities, and in Texas and Tennessee threw its influence against Constitutional Prohibition [illegible] the party for intelligent temperance men to support. A vote with it "tends to retain the saloon on a firmer basis than ever before."

OTIS P. D. CLARKE DEAD.

The Ex-Commissioner of Pensions Succumbs to an Attack of Paralysis.

WASHINGTON CITY, Feb. 4.—Otis P. D. Clarke, ex-commissioner of pensions, who was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday evening, died Saturday morning. Mr. Clarke succeeded Commissioner Dudley and and was succeeded by Gen. Black. He entered the army from Rhode Island, and came then to the pension office, where he was promoted [illegible] until he was made chief.

Woman's Modesty.

Many women are prevented by feelings of delicacy from consulting a physician in those disorders arising from functional derangement of her peculiarly delicate organism, and the most serious results are often caused by this neglect. To such persons Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an especial boon, as it offers a sure and safe cure for all those distressing disorders to which women are peculiarly subject, while it saves a modest girl or woman from the embarrassment of a personal consultation with a physician. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

Wisconsin Fish Industry.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 3.—The reports of the Wisconsin fish wardens show that in 1887 the number of pounds of fish caught in lakes Michigan and Superior was 7,556,746; value, $252,270; number of nets employed, 16,502; value, $15,079; number of men engaged, 959; boats, 550; value of boats, $115,073; value of docks, etc., $176,345; total value of the fishing interests on the lakes named, $458,760. This would be increased to $1,000,000 if the rivers and inland lakes were taken into consideration.

Call For Illinois Republican Clubs.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—A call has been issued, signed by D. H. Hammer, of this city, vice-president of the National Republican league for Illinois, W. W. Tracy, of the executive committee, and forty-one other persons and Republican clubs of this state, for a state convention of clubs to be held at Springfield, March 8. Each club will be entitled to six delegates, but only one vote. The object is organization.

The St. Paul Carnival Closed.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 6.—The third winter carnival closed Friday. It has been a success beyond expectation and far ahead of the last in point of crowds and amusements. The curling prizes were won by the rinks as follows: First prize, Winnipeg; second, St. Paul; third, Winnipeg.

To Move Libby Prison to Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—An organization is being perfected here, the object of which is the removal of the historic Libby prison to this city. Nearly the whole capital—$40,000—has been subscribed. It is proposed to make it a museum of war relics, etc.

The Stove Trust Is Next.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 6.—It is announced here that the stove manufacturers of the United States are in secret session in Cincinnati. It is understood that they are trying to form a stove trust to restrict the production of stoves.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Since the beginning of the Reading strike nineteen of the forty-three furnaces in the district have gone out of blast, and others will close down this week.

John Trundt, a retired merchant of Milwaukee, has erected a dry goods store for his two sons, George and Albert. The deals aggregate $14,000.

The sugar trust is getting in its work. Thousands of tons of sugar are being shipped from New York to London because the trust has stopped the refinery, and no refts can be got for the product.

A quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., payable March 1, has been declared by the Chicago & Alton road.

The Homeliest Man in Tecumseh

As well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on Baker & Hall, and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed to cure and relieve all Chronic and Acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.

Now is the time to subscribe.

Professional Ignorance

Nothing is more common, and less true, than for physicians to tell patients in the first stages of heart disease that the trouble is only nervous, etc., and of no account. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing as shown by the great number of people who die of heart disease when its existence is not expected. Take warning. Don't neglect the first symptoms, and if you would avoid sudden death, angina pectoris, etc., take Dr. Miles' New Cure before it is to late. Sold at Baker & Hall's drug store.

THE AVERTED DUEL.

Charlie Knickerbocker and Gus Snoberly are two New York dudes. They live on Fifth avenue and belong to several fashionable clubs. They are just as dudey as it is possible for a dude to be.

Cornelia Highkicker was an actress. She occupied an elegant flat. She dressed very elegantly and elaborately when she was off the stage.

An elderly lady, a sort of duenna, lived with Cornelia. This female companion was a highly respectable personage to look at. When several gentlemen called she was always present in the parlor to protect Cornelia and her reputation. When there was only one gentleman in the parlor Cornelia did not require any protection. She herself was equal to the emergency, so the duenna kept herself out of sight. What was Cornelia to care from one man and he a dude like Snoberly or Charlie Knickerbocker?

Both Charlie Knickerbocker and Snoberly loved Cornelia and each believed that his love was loved by the fair Cornelia.

One day Charlie Knickerbocker sauntered unexpectedly in the boudoir of Cornelia. Then he did something recalling with horror. She was sitting on a chair. So was Snoberly. It was the same case. They did not invite the intruder to take a seat.

"Hi, fellah, executive," said Snoberly, gaudily.

"You get out of mesh or I'll telephone for a policeman," replied Knickerbocker, glaring at Snoberly as if he were [illegible]

"Perhaps I'd better go," said Snoberly, excitedly.

Cornelia revived giggled and then went off into a fresh swoon.

"Perhaps I'd better go, if the Bowery is in Central park," said Snoberly, remembering there was always a policeman in that vicinity.

"I'll be there," replied Knickerbocker.

They rushed out into the frosty air. Cornelia came to and giggled profusely.

That evening Snoberly and Charlie were in the same box at the theatre and gazed at Miss Highkicker on the stage. They did not betray any emotion. Good society in New York has its rules and regulations which no true gentleman violates. They did not make a scene. The performance was over. An hour later Snoberly was strolling up Broadway. He took a gentleman. It was Charlie Knickerbocker. The former Damon and Pythias of New York dude society walked side by side for some moments without saying anything. Neither dared. They were thinking about pistols next morning in Central park at the fearsome dem. Finally Knickerbocker remarked:

"It's a cold evening."

"Yes," replied Snoberly; "the western cyclone moved yesterday, as the Herald forecasts intimated it would do to the lakes, with high southeasterly winds off the Atlantic coast. The storm is now central north of Lake Ontario where it will move to the northeast. The temperature rose yesterday in the Gulf States with a minimum of six degrees below zero at Lacrosse, Wis., and a maximum of 70 at Key West. In Missouri and adjacent districts today a cooler [illegible] will probably prevail, preceded by light rain near the [illegible] and followed in the afternoon by clearing conditions and a slight fall of temperature. In the middle states and New England warmer, cloudy to partly cloudy weather will prevail, preceded by light rain and followed by clearing conditions in the morning by sunlight shows near the lakes. On Friday in this district [illegible] from the Northwest partly cloudy, partly cloudy in the northwest portion, followed by light rain and snow in the northwest portion. In New England [illegible] weather

BIRTH DAY REUNION.

A goodly number of children, grandchildren, great grandchildren and friends assembled at the house of Allen Kelly, the 27th of January to celebrate the 80th birthday of our Uncle, who is the father of 10 children, only three of whom were present at the time. Some are in the far west among the blizzards and some have gone home to God.

At the hour of two dinner was announced. Uncle and aunt headed the procession, and as many as could sit around their [illegible] dining table, of those whose whose heads were sprinkled with gray, partook of the bounti[illegible] and wife of Allen had prepar[illegible] em. The beautiful and fragr[illegible] which adorned the table came from Mrs. Benjamin Kelley's conservatory. After all had young had lightened the tables which were burdened with good things, and assembled in the sitting room, a[illegible] always their custom [illegible] gatherings, for song, prayer, etc., as follows.

Singing "Shall we meet beyond the river," by W. R. Wilson, Mrs. Allen Kelley and Mrs. Celia Allen, after which Mrs. W. R. Wilson read a poem [illegible]

UNCLE'S BIRTH

It is the year of our Lord
Eighteen hundred and eighty-eight,
At Uncle's and Aunt's at the word
We are here and each with his mate.

Now why are we here [illegible] all know very well
It is Uncle's birthday [illegible] is you see,
You know once a year [illegible] such a spell
As is that will bring us here to be.

We love the names of Uncle and Aunt,
And grandfather and grandmother too,
Some times in our blessed dreams they haunt
Us with love th[illegible] we ever knew.

Here's children, a[illegible] children, and grandchildren,
Boys and girls [illegible] and mothers,
Sisters and brothers who are not too late
To join with this day [illegible] many others.

The good things they always have,
When [illegible] appetites keen
Which can't [illegible] in remove
The buscuit [illegible] cake and tart.

Then all gather round [illegible] old fireside
Where uncle and aunt won't to sit,
And each with their thoughts to gently glide
In song and prayer as they see fit.

And all do have thankful hearts we trust,
For this pleasant 80th birthday
Of our uncle, which is not the first
Which has been spent in this happy way.

God is our Keeper as we all do know,
In him we trust for pleasures like this,
And all other blessings that still flow,
From Him to us, in this land of his.

Uncle has lived past the age of man,
And he now lives upon borrowed time,
His eyes are dim and his steps are slow
But his heart can be young from time to time.

He loves his children, and grandchildren too,
And all the rest that cluster around
The throne of God's grace, as all the good do,
That in Heaven we all may be found.

For we all have ties to beckon us on,
To that home above where sin is love,
Where we will meet loved ones who have gone
A short time before us crowned above.

These eighty and nine such eventful years
The web of life you have bravely wove,
And watched with smiles of with sorrowing tears,
The mingled threads of young grief and love.

Those have crossed each other here and there
With now a red or blue line of pain
And then that of faith, and patience so fair
That seemed to make the pattern so plain.

And sometimes in your life a thread would break
The shuttle of time sped swiftly and dew,
But the tangled ends they did soon make,
The web of life so straight and good, and true.

Now as you look back and with wonder meet
You see what you then so dimly knew,
Each thread you pented to make it complete,
Your web of life with its varied hue.

And now in your life's pleasant twilight hour,
Your heart full of love and joy, remain,
While memories rise with such wonderous power,
As you in the past do live again.

And though long years in their course have rolled,
With you and aunt too, so good and kind,
To her neighbors all, to young and old,
The sick and weary she seeks to find.

We think of those already in the skies
Led by your teaching to entrust their all,
To Him whose heart is infinitely wise,
And who'll not even "let sparrow fall."

Praise to the everlasting Father be, and some
To day, to morrow, and forevermore
And to the Holy Spirit three in one,
For all the blessings which you have in store.

And if at last we too the land shall find,
Where death, and sin, no more can come,
To Christ we'll give, with soul, and heart and mind,
[illegible] Home.

After which, singing, "All the way my Saviour leads me". Then Mrs. Celia Allen, a grand daughter, read as follows:

No snow falls lighter than the snow of age, but none is heavier for it never melts, it never melts, no never. We may look backward over our happy days of childhood and wish that we might live them over again, but every moment is carrying us farther and farther from them. The snow of winter [illegible] white blessings over hill and plain, mountains, valley, and soon spring comes and scatters these all away. Not so with age, it comes to stay as long here as life shall last, but when we have passed over the bridge "death," then shall we find one long eternal spring. Dear Grandfather, again this 27th day of January 1888, the children, grandchildren, relatives and friends have gathered to commemorate thy 80th birthday. We are glad that God in his great love and mercy hath spared thee another year. It has been one of sadness and loneliness to many of us. God only knows the heart ache, with father and mother and home gone, and brothers and sisters scattered, scattered. But this is life only repeated over again. Life is grand where we fulfill God's plan for us, when we have sought after those things which do not perish with the handling, those things which "make life, death and that vast forever one grand sweet song."

As we look back to 1799, and come along down with these 89 years, we think of the many changes thou hast seen, and the great and many experiences thou has passed through, and whose too that thee have helped to build a strong character.

We can see the results of thoughts and acts that have never been expressed or acted for not only those which are heard and seen, but those which are not heard and not seen help to build us for eternity. Thou hast learned to see God in everything and this completes our lives. We find in thee patience, contentment, cheerfulness, charity and hope of life everlasting; may each child and grandchild strive to follow the examples thou has set. May we make the many virtues that thou hast attained to ours. May God spare thee to us many years, even though thou, as the poet has said:

Only waiting till the angels
Open wide the mystic gate
At whose feet thou long has lingered,
Weary, poor and desolate.
Even now thou hear their footsteps,
And their voices far away;
If they call thee thou art waiting
Only waiting to obey.

Only waiting till the shadows
Are a little longer grown,
Only waiting till the glimmer
Of the days last beam is flown.
Then from out the gathered darkness,
Holy deathless stars shall rise,
By whose light thy soul shall gladly
Tread its pathway to the skies.

Then prayer and exortations given by B. Kelley and wife, and testimonies by others, closing with singing, "O think of a home over there." This ended a very profitable, pleasant and happy birthday.

MRS. W. R. WILSON

TIPTON TOPICS.

Invited guests to the number of over eighty, from Tecumseh, Clinton, Brooklyn, Springville, Cambridge, Manchester and Franklin, assembled at the residence of Alonzo Welch, near Evans lake, last Monday, to celebrate their 20th wedding anniversary. The guests began to arrive about 10 o'clock, and by noon they had all assembled. Shortly after noon the tables were spread and all partook of a sumptuous repast. After dinner was over came the presentation of the many fine presents, which were formally presented by W. B. Keyser; Mr. R. Mills accepting the presents by a neat speech in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Welch. Then followed a poem by Mrs. Mostitt which will be given next week, and which reads something like a romance. But as the host and hostess say they could not have related the circumstances any more perfectly, it made the poem doubly interesting. In justice to the author we would say that she was very much opposed to having it appear in print. The remaining part of the day was spent in visiting, music, both instrumental and vocal, Mr. Mart Grey and Mrs. William Witheral playing some fine music on the violin and organ.

The undersigned are making up a party to visit Knoxville and expect now to leave Tecumseh Monday evening February 20th, 1888, at 11 o'clock P. M., over the [illegible] are promised us over the various Railroads.

It will be a rare opportunity for the farmer, the speculator, the manufacturer, the capitalist and the tourist to visit the finest section of country in whole south and the handsomest city, between the great lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. The country around Knoxville is rich in minerals and abounds in large tracts of excellent timber lands, which are being rapidly bought up by northern capital. There is no better investment to-day than such rich mineral and timber lands of the South.

Our party expect to be gone about ten days and if you will join it we promise you a royal trip at very moderate expense and pledge ourselves to furnish all the information possible and in every way to contribute to your enjoyment. THE RECORD OF CRIME.

Mrs. Minnie Franklin, of Walhalla, S. C., got permission to visit her husband in jail, and the result was that the husband and several other prisoners were missing next morning. She had conveyed the prisoner a brace and bit concealed in her bustle.

Ten prisoners escaped from the Uniontown (Pa.) jail Thursday evening by breaking a rotten floor and opening a hole in the wall.

Tired of a life made unhappy by loss of property and domestic troubles Mrs. George Edwards, of Erie, Pa., cut her throat Thursday, dying of the wound, and leaving a husband and two children.

At Goshen, Ind., Friday, George Chrisman was convicted of stealing a watch. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and disfranchised for three years.

Two alleged American dynamiters, named Callan and Hawkins, were convicted Friday of participation in a murderous conspiracy in London, Eng., and each was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR GRAY.

The Eminent Botanist Dies of Paralysis at Cambridge.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—Professor Asa Gray, the eminent botanist and professor of botany at Harvard college, died of paralysis in Cambridge Monday evening, aged 77. Asa Gray, M. D., LL. D., was born at Paris, N. Y., Nov. 18, 1810. He graduated from the Fairfield Medical college in 1834, but soon relinquished the practice of medicine and devoted himself under Professor Torrey of New York, to the study of botany. In 1842 he received the appointment of botanist of the United States exploring expedition, but he declined it. In 1842 he was elected fisher professor of natural history in Harvard college. In addition to his lectures at Cambridge, he delivered three courses of lectures before the Lowell institute in Boston. He is the author of numerous books. He visited Europe in 1838-39 and again in 1850-51, and had contributed numerous papers to scientific periodicals and to the transactions of learned societies. In 1864 he was chosen one of the regents of the Smithsonian institution, and in 187[illegible] the Academie des Sciences of Paris elected him a corresponding member in the section of botany.

THE BEST PHYSICIAN OUTDONE.

J. A. Crawford says; "I have had the worst form of Eczema two years, and found no relief from some of our best physicians who have made this disease a specialty. PERSONAL CHARMS.

How the Delsartian Theory of Development Beautifies Women.

What is the Delsartian method?

If ladies can secure cultivation of the voice so as to read and converse in sweetly modulated yet strong and deep tones, and by the same course of training acquire grace of carriage and the development of chest and lungs that ensures health and adds to personal charms, the methods employed are worthy investigation.

So thought our reporter, who called upon Mme. Gray, the noted teacher of Oratory and Physical Culture, at one of our leading hotels.

As he entered the room a lady rose with graceful movement toward him. A well shaped [illegible] a wealth of iron gray hair, dark brilliant eyes, beneath finely arched brows, were noted as she approached. When she spoke it was with a voice sweet and low, yet with a wonderful compass.

"What is the secret of this power of vocal expression you seem to have?"

"Secret? there is no secret," laughed Mme. Gray. "Time was when I had one of the weakest and thinnest of voices. Any one can accomplish what I have done. It is so easy to acquire a full resonant voice that will never tire or grow hoarse. All vocal disabilities may be overcome, hesitation, stammering, stuttering, soon disappear under proper training."

"Does this training affect the physical system?"

"Yes, it will develop the bust to almost ideal proportion. Gentlemen will add four or five inches chest measurement in as many months."

"It is valuable from a point of beauty, then?"

"Yes, ladies gain the roundness of waist, taper of arm and hand, and the perfect poise, ease and grace in movement, that add so much to personal charms."

"Health I should think, would be benefited, also?"

"Indeed it is. Lung and throat troubles decrease, narrow chests and thin arms are developed, and female weaknesses largely overcome."

"It seems to be a regular panacea?"

"No; I am sorry to say that some organs cannot be made good in this way after they have been injured as mine were by a sojourn near a Southern swamp. Before I tried physical culture and Warner's safe cure I was a confirmed invalid. I was consumptive in early life, and it is only a few years since I overcame a serious liver trouble. I owe much to Warner's safe cure, and I do not hesitate to acknowledge it."

"And the consumptive tendency?"

"Disappeared after the use of this remedy, and when I had learned how to breathe. Not one in twenty breathe in such a way as to fill the air cells, to expand the strong muscles at the base of the lungs, which should do the labor of expelling air. Hence, if kidney disease prevails, the lungs affected by the kidney poisoned blood soon give way."

"Is not your system the Delsartian system?"

"Yes, and I greatly rejoiced when this grand teacher gave to the world his ideas. They corresponded to those I had long taught, for I am a pioneer in this work and have devoted life and energy to teaching the world that women may gain vocal accomplishments, healthy grace and beauty all at the same time by these methods of cultivation."

"You are yet teaching?"

"Yes, at the School of Oratory and Physical Culture at Syracuse, N. Y., a permanent institution, now in very successful progress."

WOOLSON SPICE CO., TOLEDO, O.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Special Pension Examiner Waite was in town the last of the week looking up testimony in several cases.

Will cutting returned home the last of the week from Hanover, Ill, where he has been employed in the woolen mill as machinist.

Mel Coffin has so far recovered from his long and severe illness as to be out pleasant days.

Guess postmaster Keyes is glad that Valentine day comes but once a year.

Dewitt Hendershot is gradually failing and but slight hopes are entertained for his recovery.

C. D. Keyes and J. L. Kishpaugh are in Detroit this week attending the poultry show. They have several fowls on exhibition.

Kies & Kishpaugh captured fully their share of premiums at the poultry show at Ypsilanti last week. They took over 24 fowls, 21 were entered for premiums. They won 8 first premiums, 6 second and 2 third; also, 2 specials. Got 2d. on breeding pens and lost the sweepstakes by one-half a point. Their birds scored high.

Ed. Rose was here over Sunday—he left Monday noon for one of his long trips.

Leb Pomeroy was at his mother's over Sunday.

Alonzo Clark is at the Sanitarium at Battle Creek.

Mr. Bancroft and wife of Norvell, visited at Dr. E. Palmer's over Sunday.

C. D. Keyes attended a meeting of the executive boards of Agricultural and Poultry associations at Adrian, Wednesday.

Miss Cora Beckwith and a friend from Fowlerville, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bigham.

Mrs. Jas. B. Hause spent several days the past week with her son Dwight, and we understand visited Mr. and Mrs John T. Clark at Clairemont.

Thos. Ward of Morenci, visited his parents and friends here over Sunday.

The Misses Maybee of Canada, are visiting their sister, Mrs. Dr. Blatchford. Being artists of fine ability they will take a limited number of pupils.

Ed. VanDeMark returned the last of the week from his visit to the seat of government.

Miss Lou McDermott, whom we all hoped had come to remain, has returned to Detroit. The firm with whom she has been with having made her a flattering offer which she considered her duty to accept.

The return party given by the gentlemen at the Town Hall last week Wednesday, was one of the finest ever given here. It was so complete in all its arrangements and moved as if by magic. Hunt's orchestra seemed to outdo themselves, and the supper furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Somark was very fine.

The society season practically closed in this community, Tuesday evening, and for a time weightier matters will engross the attention of its votaries. The holy season of Lent is upon us, beginning the 15th, Ash Wednesday. A season (if properly observed) given to self-examination and works of kindness; and is a season that is generally observed by all religious bodies.

Mrs. Kerman of North Adams, is visiting her friend Mrs. E. P. Felton.

The social given by the ladies of St. John's church, Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Louise Clark, on Locust street, though not largely attended, on account of the weather, was a very pleasant one and a goodly amount realized.

The entertainment given the progressive euchre club by Lizzie Brooks and Lucretia Reynolds, Tuesday evening at the residence of the latter, proved most enjoyable although the weather was inclement, all determined on having a good time.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Curt. Foot is spending a few days with his father, O. H. Foot.

Michael and Ed. Kelley will take charge of Peter Desernub's farm the coming year.

Chas. D. Smith is expected home from Ithica, Mich. where he and his wife have been visiting relatives for the past few weeks.

Fred Groger has in front of his mill timber for, we should think, 50,000 pickets, and is sawing every day.

The many friends and relatives of this locality, will learn with deep regret of the severe attack with the measels of T. J. Hatchcastle and little daughter, Lottie of Adrian township. We sincerely hope they may speedily recover.

School Dist. No. 8, Miss Cynthia Monaghan teacher, will hold a school social at Joseph Marsh's on Thursday evening.

School Dist. No. 1, M. F. Tarrell teacher, will follow suit on the following eve. at G. E. Jessup's Hall.

The citizens of this place intended to keep [illegible] next summer and convert [illegible] into a week ago last Saturday, by putting in 11 loads of [illegible].

The members of Springville Club Dance Association concluded to have a masque [illegible] on Friday eve. Feb. 17.

The Dances here this winter are a success [illegible] socially and financially and a large attendance may be looked for on the 17th.

The new voters of the township who wish to vote on Local Option issue, should see that their names are registered on the 18th inst.

We understand that the dwelling house of Mr. Bert Short of Rome 1½ miles south of Clayton was destroyed by fire on 7th inst.

We regret to learn of an attack of paralysis on Henry Reed on Monday last. He is slowly improving at the present writing.

On the evening of Jan 27th, a number of the young people of Cambridge Junction gave a party at Jessup's hall. It was a leap year party and the ladies even furnished the music. They partook of Oysters at Mrs. Grogers and enjoyed themselves in such a manner as to make us sorry we had no invitation.

Our tooth extractor left us some time ago, but we have corn-extractors left, or at least some one extracted some from the crib of Samuel White, a short time ago. The person or persons were perhaps only prospecting a little and with an "eye for business, took up a claim, but did not settle it," and therefore constable Silvernail arrested a party under suspicion and an Adrian Justice will inquire into the facts of the case.

Quarterly meeting at the M. E. church next Saturday and Sunday.

Preaching on Saturday at 2 o'clock by Rev Pierce and in the evening by Rev. Winton of Addison. Love Feast Sunday 9 A. M. Preaching at half past ten.

One of the most enjoyable parties that we have had the pleasure of attending, took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White's, on Saturday evening last. It was a Leap Year Party and we wish to congratulate the young ladies on the success of their enterprise. The program which was splendidly composed and executed was as follows:

Inst. Music—Cyclone Gallop—Hattie Daniels.
Rec.—The Abandoned Troop Horse—Bertha Monagin.
Vocal Solo—The Cows are in the Corn—Lutie Billmeyer.
Select Reading—Lena Read.
Burlesque on Maud Miller—Anna White.
Vocal Duet—Come o'er the Moonlit Sea—Lutie Billmeyer and A. J. Monagin.
Prophecy—Mary Monagin.
Vocal Duet—Shells of the Ocean.—Lutie Billmeyer and A. J. Monagin.

MACON MUSIC.

Quarterly meeting at the M. E. church next Saturday and Sunday.

Morris Howell of Lansing, is visiting relatives here.

Lyman Ames of Ypsilanti, attended services here Sunday afternoon at the M. E. church.

Hebron Camburn purchased the Wilkins farm that was sold at auction last Friday.

Wal. Ames of Ridgeway, was seen on the street here last Sunday with his best girl.

The ladies of the Reform church held their aid society at the residence of Mrs. Will Richart last Wednesday afternoon. They presented to the families of Mrs. Snedicor and Kriedler the sum of $5.00 each. May the society be rewarded for their benevolence.

Emerson Sage solicited aid for the benefit of John Winchell, who is at Ann Arbor having his foot treated. He raised the sum of $70 and took it to him last Saturday.

CARD OF THANKS.

To my kind friends of Macon and vicinity. I take this means of expressing my sincere and heartfelt thanks for your kindness and liberality to me, in this, my hour of great need, and especially do I wish to thank my friend J. E. Sage, for the interest he has taken in my welfare. Again thanking you all, I remain,

Very Sincerely Yours,
JOHN A. WINCHELL.

ONSLEDODDS.

Mrs. Frank Brooks has been very sick with neuralgia in the stomach but is getting better at last accounts.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarance Stearns of Wexford county, is visiting relatives and friends in this locality at present.

John Brooks has his new house all completed and it is a daisy, and now the next thing is to get some one that he is willing to share it with him.

Hewes's mill yard is piled up high with saw logs at present.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 4, 1888.

Elsworth Wilson has been on the employ of G. P. Waring of Ridgeway, for the past season, and about whom bad reports have been circulated. We are pleased to state that the reports are not true. I do not dispute the Mr. Paxson, although the facts were not known to me until this date, and did not know that any feed or bran was purchased at Mr. Hayden's mill.

G. P. WARING.

In response to the call of "Many Citizens" the meeting Monday evening was well attended. H. J. Williams was elected chairman and G. P. Waring secretary. The following resolution was introduced and after considerable discussion prevailed unanimously. Resolved, That the meeting take into consideration the proposition of Mr. Bush relative to erecting a hotel in Ridgeway, and elect a committee of five to decide upon some feasible and practical plan by which the same may be constructed. The committee as elected is G. P. Waring, T. H. Temple, R. H. Nelson, D. W. Loree and H. J. Williams. After farther discussion an adjournment was taken for two weeks, at which time the committee will report.

SECRETARY.

LAKE RIDGE

School resumed again this week Monday, there being no new cases of scarlet fever.

Edward Pilbeam has returned to Nashville.

W. D. Easlick went to Adrian Wednesday on business.

Al. Kelly drew three tons of tile at one load from Easlick's yard, Thursday of last week.

Those favored with surprise socials last week were as follows; C. V. Skinner, Geo. Fulkerson, T. B. Gould, J. Mellon, C. Shaler, J. Southwick and J. Patterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Len Mangas visited at A. Easlick's Sunday.

The neighbors turned out to the number of fifteen, with saws and axes, and worked up a nice pile of stove wood for Mrs. J. Stewart Wednesday afternoon of last week. She wishes us to say she is greatly pleased and very thankful

Abe Harrington's straw stack tipped over last Tuesday, killing one cow and breaking the hind legs of another. C. Waldron was called by telegraph to reduce the fracture.

A. Easlick is baling hay with his home-made baler, and it works like a charm.

Mrs. J. Dibble died Saturday night.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

The new church was dedicated last Sunday, and, we are happy to say, is free from debt. The members were about $200 back on the church, which was raised by the congregation in a very short time. A large crowd was in attendance both in the morning and evening.

A frog was broken on the railroad at this station last Sunday, which caused the section hands to exercise their muscle. You wicked villians! You should be arrested and given six years without work and plenty of spending money.

Miss Alice Luther of Raisin Valley, spent the fore part of the week with her cousin, Aggie Still.

Seymour Barrett and John Campbell went to Adrian Monday evening to attend a show. They arrived home O. K. and the next morning Seymour was singing "I'm the father of a little black coon!" Glad to hear it, Sey'm.: cigars.

Mary Chatfield is on the sick list, but nothing serious is anticipated.

Sandy Miller came down to Holloway last Saturday and closed out his business in the jewelry trade to R. McWilliams, price, $9 876.39. He made a great sacrifice in the sale, but as it was so far from his home he concluded to dispose of it.

Abe Whitbeck thinks it better to have been born lucky than rich. He has been granted a pension amounting to $1,081.07. Good for Abe; he says he isn't going to kill himself with work, as he has heretofore done.

We are pained to inform our readers of the critical condition of Robert Mitchell, Jr. The Drs. Stevenson performed an operation upon his leg Jan. 21st, which terminated in lock jaw. At the present writing but little hope is entertained of his recovery.

Will Beigel has a new watch which might well cause any common person to be proud. Now when the boys want to swap a good sized pocket book may induce Will to trade.

Later news brings the report that Robert Mitchell died Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He leaves a widow and three small children; and we are happy to say in fine circumstances. The family has the sympathy of the community.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The second quarterly meeting for the present conference year will be held next Sunday morning.

Quite a good many from the village attended the meeting of the Farmers' Union, held at John VanVleet's last Friday evening. There was a large attendance and a very interesting and instructive programme carried out.—Their next meeting will be held at the home of Michael Smelser on the 24th.

Jesse Potter has bought the house and lot on North street formerly owned by George Boss.

The mothers' W. C. T. U. meeting that was postponed will be held at the home of Mrs. Winders, next week Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The superintendent, Mrs. Mary Sutton, is having several readings prepared for the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. Nellie McRoberts, of Mason, is visiting her relatives here at present.

Adah Potter, of Tecumseh, Sundayed at the home of her brother in this village.

Marion Hathaway, of Addison, who is attending school at the Raisin Valley seminary, was the guest of Ida Pocklington over Sunday.

It is hoped the sidewalk boom will take a new start as soon as the weather will permit.

Daniel Allen, who was drawn as juror for this term of circuit court, left for Adrian Tuesday.

Nearly one hundred friends took Charles Gove and wife by surprise on Saturday evening last, and enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

The W. F. M. S. held its regular monthly meeting at the residence of Mrs. D. W. Loree, on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year

Pres.—Mrs. Lester Osgood.
1st Vice pres.—Mrs. Chas. M. Gove.
2d Vice pres.—Mrs. W. H. Burton.
3d Vice pres.—Mrs. Susan Clark.
Sec.—Mrs. J. W. Osborne.
Asst. Sec.—Mrs. T. H. Temple.
Cor. Sec.—Miss Mary Osgood.
Treas.—Mrs. C. A. Pocklington.
Asst. Treas.—Mrs. D. W. Loree.
Executive Com.—Mrs. J. F. Templ Mrs. David Coryell, Mrs. W. Barrett.

Some physicians assert that a hearty meal at midday is injurious to the health. A five-dollar dinner, eaten slowly with the members of his own family, is far healthier. A hearty midday meal unfits professional men for arguing on any business in the afternoon, as it makes them heavy and sleepy, for nature requires some rest of repose to aid digestion. Our digestive system ... eating is wrong. The meals into which we load the body without a fresh supply of food for the remaining fourteen hours of the day and night. DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy; the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp; the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition, in the daring of its inception, had the wildness of a romance, while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it sought and was likely to obtain it was absolutely sublime.—JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1862.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could undertake in America.—COMTE DE PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,

A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

Here our pursuers were greatly startled. Their story had been swiftly told when they reached Calhoun, and the engine and tender of the passenger car, with a re-enforcement of armed men, followed them up the road. Fuller stood on the tender of his own train, which was in front, gazing intently forward to see if there was any dangerous obstacle or break in the track, such as they had already many times encountered. Soon he beheld us at work with feelings which cannot be described. Before getting near enough to see our number, we had mounted and sped away, and he saw with exhilaration that we had not broken the track, and that there seemed to be no obstruction. With full speed he ran on till too close to stop, and then beheld what he believed, at first, to be a broken rail and gave himself up for lost; but it was on the inside of a curve, and as an engine running rapidly throws most of its weight on the outside when he ran on it the bent rail was only straitened down, and they were safely on the other side of this danger. The next train, which followed almost immediately after, did not notice the obstruction at all. There is scarcely a doubt that two minutes more, enabling us to finish getting a rail up at this point, would have given the control of the day into our hands, for there were no more trains on the road either to delay us or to be turned back after us. But as it was, the Texas pressed on after us without the slightest loss of headway.

The coming of this train before the track was torn up was by far the most serious misfortune that we had yet encountered. But might it not still be overcome? The plan which first presented itself to the undismayed spirit of Andrews was to use two of our cars as projectiles and hurl them back at the enemy. This was more in accordance with his genius, which delighted in strategy, than the plain course which most of the soldiers would have preferred, that is, a straight out and out fight with the pursuing train. Accordingly our engine was reversed—could we have selected a down grade the chance of success would have been better, but we were coming so near the bridge that we could not delay to choose—and when the speed in this way had been checked and the pursuing train was quite close and still going fast, we uncoupled and bounded on again. But the skillful pursuers were not thus to be beaten. They saw what they were about, and checking their headway when the car was dropped, they also reversed, and coming up to it with moderate force, coupled on, which was easier because the tender was in front.

CHAPTER X.

ON TENALLA BRIDGE.

The bridge was now just at hand. What should we do? To leave it intact was to be thought of only in the direst necessity. We had carried our ammunition—the fuel we had gathered—into our last car, and while it was not as good as we would have liked, yet in a little time we could make a fire. We now punched a hole in the back end of our car—in fact we had done this in passing from one car to another previous to dropping the last one—and now began to let ties fall out on the track while we ran. They followed us "end over end," and showed a most perverse disposition to get off the track, but a few remained. This moderated the speed of the pursuing engine, which was a help that we sorely needed, for it was now evident that they either had a faster engine than ours or better fuel. The latter was certainly the case, for we had been using wood very rapidly without any opportunity for a long time past to replenish it.

The first feeling of despondency of the whole route took possession of us as we approached the bridge, with our pursuer close behind. The situation was in every way unfavorable for us. If we passed by without leaving it in ashes we felt that one important part of our business would be undone, even if we were completely successful afterward in evading pursuit and destroying the Chickamauga bridges.

Murphy expresses the opinion that we made a great mistake at this point. There was at this time a long and high wooden trestle by which the Resaca bridge is approached. As we came near we "slowed up," and right in the middle of this trestle we dropped our last car. Murphy says that if we had kept it we might have kept our track the bridge would have been at our mercy, as [illegible] above. He is right, [illegible] is greater than he thinks [illegible] push the car off by means of the locomotive [illegible] We would have had to leave the road [illegible] any other way, and the [illegible] was all up. [illegible] light [illegible] have fired on us [illegible] could [illegible] We [illegible] It is clear [illegible] been [illegible] the [illegible] The [illegible] opportunity [illegible] fight at a disadvantage. The fuel was within a few hundred yards of the bridge and we had a supply [illegible] from this quarter. Besides [illegible] were armed with guns, and [illegible] chance of getting at close quarters was by an ambuscade. Had the day been dry, we could have flung fagots from the engine upon the roof, but now a fire even on the inside of the large frame bridge would require careful burning. [illegible] station only a few hundred feet ahead, where the track might be so easily obstructed, and while the guns of the pursuers behind, we could not give time for this; so we slowly and reluctantly passed over the bridge, after dropping the car, and on through the village of Resaca.

ON TENALLA BRIDGE.

The pursuers took up this car as they had done the other, and pushed them both through the bridge, and left them on the Resaca side track.

It may be well to notice here how our ignorance of the enemy and his ignorance of us had figured to his advantage. There had been already many intimations among us that it would be well to turn and fight rather than to be chased any further. Had the real weakness of the enemy on the first train been known, Andrews would have certainly ordered the attack. On the other hand, if Fuller's party had known how strong we were he could not have induced them to continue the chase, even if the resolute conductor himself had not been willing to wait for help. It was believed at first that we were but four—the number on the engine. The estimate was never raised higher than eight. Murphy suggesting to Fuller even then that it would be better to wait for the train behind and take on more men. But Fuller resolved to persevere and at least delay us at the risk of his own life. Had it been known that we were twenty, he and his slender band would not have been guilty of the madness of crowding on nearly twice their number, even if better armed, and sure of help at every station. But this madness, this unreasonable pursuit, the result of imperfect knowledge, served them well.

After passing Resaca, we again forced our pursuers back by dropping ties on the track, and not knowing whether it was a telegraph station or not, we again cut the wires. No obstructions were placed on the track at this point, but it was on a curve, and taking a rail which had been bent in lifting it I placed one end under the rail at one side and the other projecting diagonally toward the train on the other side. The pursuers saw us start, but seeing no obstructions they ran at a good rate of speed right over this rail! Their escape was marvelous. Persons on the tender jumped a foot high, and one of Fuller's stanchest helpers demanded that the train be stopped to let him off! he wanted no more such running as that! But Fuller, though considering this the greatest of their dangers, would not stop; and it was impossible for him to keep a closer lookout than he had done.

But what conjectures did we form to account for the unexpected appearance of this pursuing train? The story as given to the cadet was totally unknown then and we were greatly perplexed. The matter had great practical importance. Was the engine started after us by an authority which had also alarmed the whole road ahead of us? If so, we would do well to abandon our efforts for the destruction of bridges and seek our own safety. Of one thing we felt sure, it must have been one of the trains we had passed at Calhoun or Adairsville that was following, but why? There were three possibilities only to choose from. The first and less serious was that the suspicious conductor at Calhoun, who had been so unwilling to let us pass, had determined that we were impostors, and at his own motion had set out to follow us. If so, we would have to deal only with him, and might yet accomplish a part of our work. Or it might be that the freight had run to where we had broken up the track, had escaped wreck, and, turning back, had telegraphed ahead before we had cut the wire. In this case all the road ahead would be alarmed, and this was probable indeed. Or, once more, a messenger might have been sent down to Marietta from Big Shanty, and a dispatch sent to Atlanta and around the whole circuit of the Confederacy back to Chattanooga, and before the wires had been cut, to one of the trains we had passed, with orders to follow us closely and prevent us from damaging the road until a larger force could be sent out from Chattanooga [illegible] our capture. If either of these latter conjectures were true and the latter the most probable one, there was [illegible] We would be forced to leave the road [illegible] essay [illegible] escaping on foot. If Andrews [illegible] called of these probabilities [illegible] was all up [illegible] light [illegible] have fired on us [illegible] could [illegible] We [illegible] It is clear [illegible] been [illegible] the [illegible] The [illegible] opportunity [illegible] fight at a disadvantage. The fuel was within a few hundred yards of the bridge and we had a supply [illegible] from this quarter. Besides [illegible] were armed with guns, and [illegible] train started from Marietta, and loaded with soldiers.

For a time after leaving Resaca we did not run very fast. It was evident that we could not get away from the engine, behind which we were speeding, and we must resort to some way to disable them, or to obstruct the track; and we were obliged to be saving of our fuel. But now we were approaching Green's, a wood station near Tilton, and we were determined to have a fresh supply at any [illegible] in the box, with a little of our precious oil, was shoved into the furnace, and Brown, who had now taken the throttle, turned on a full head of steam, and we once more flew along the track. At the same time we who were in the box car put a line of ties along the floor and kept them moving to the hole in the end, and let them drop as fast as possible on the track. This was rapidly exhausting our ammunition, but it was effecting in enforcing slowness and caution upon our pursuers. Fuller could not run rapidly in the face of such a succession of obstacles. He did the best he could, giving the signal to reverse whenever he saw a tie on fire and on again, when the engineer would start with a full head of steam, and reduce speed, as the engine gathered headway to such a rate as would admit of stopping in time when another tie was seen. It was fearfully perilous, and the only wonder is that he was not wrecked long before the chase was done. But he probably understood that we were racing for the wood yard ahead.

When we reached it there was no lingering in the work of loading up. The wood was piled in frantically by men working for life; but before we had half filled the tender we again heard our relentless follower. So eager were we to get the largest possible supply of wood that we did not take their first whistle as a sufficient intimation to start. Then came a scream after scream of the most unearthly character, obviously designed to alarm the keeper of the woodyard that he might hinder us from getting a full supply. But this did not discourage us, for even when Andrews reluctantly gave the word to come on board, Wilson, who as fireman had a great appreciation of the need of fuel, lingered still to get a huge armload more, and the enemy, seeing our engine standing there, were actually obliged to "slow up" to avoid the collision that seemed inevitable. However we did not wait for them to get close enough to use their shotguns—at least not to any effect, though Wilson is quite positive that some guns were fired. He says:

"We had, however, secured only a partial supply when the chasing train came in sight, loaded with armed soldiers. Our pursuers were worked up to an infuriated pitch of excitement, and rent the very air with their screeches and yells as they came in sight of us, like dogs when the quarry is sprung. They opened on us at long range with musketry. The bullets rattled around us like hail, but fortunately none of our party was hit."

CHAPTER XI.

A DIRECT RAILROAD CHASE.

But we now had a good head of steam, and with a joyful bound our engine, as if refreshed from its rest, sped on again. We had been careful to so obstruct the track that the enemy was obliged to come to a full halt, and thus give us time to once more get out of sight.

We passed Tilton in safety, and the water station, which at that time was at a different place from the wood yard, was soon reached. Our supply of this necessity was low, and without it our progress would be at once arrested. We stopped, adjusted the pipes, told the powder story—although from the battered appearance of our "only car, with a hole knocked in each end, that story was no longer plausible, but it answered for the moment and we succeeded in getting all the water we needed. Had any objection been made we would have taken it by force, and the assurance with which we went to work aided in securing confidence. Before the tank was full the pursuers came in sight, but seeing us they ran slowly, and as a party of our men had run back and put some obstructions on the track, out of gun shot, they were obliged to come to a full stop there, thus giving us the time needed. Then we mounted and sped on toward Dalton.

It was advisable at once to get decisively ahead of the pursuers before reaching this town, which might present serious difficulties. As there were no ridges to burn now for a considerable distance, the only other way was to try once more to tear up the track. The engine was again in good running condition, and we rushed rapidly forward, putting frequent obstructions on the track—mostly by dropping ties or sticks of firewood, but in one or two instances by reversing the engine, jumping out and piling up obstructions. At a favorable place we stopped again for a more permanent break.

Long practice had made us skillful in this direction, and the last two [illegible] slowly, and the enemy [illegible] run upon us without warning. So we [illegible] Knight [illegible] Scott [illegible] back [illegible] through [illegible] was easy [illegible] let us put on some obstructions and hide; one of our engineers can run ahead a mile or two and come back after us; when the enemy stop to clear the track we will rush on them, and when we have captured their [illegible] engineer and [illegible] engine and send it in a hurry down the track to clear the road of any more trains that may be following."

Andrews said, in his quiet way, "It is a good plan. It is worth trying," and [illegible] it, we [illegible] the chances. Then the engine's whistle sounded, we saw them rush up to the obstructions we had placed on the track, stop by reversing, and labor as frantically to clear the rails as we were doing in trying to raise the rail.

But our efforts were in vain. The spikes still held, and as they were ready to move, again, Andrews called out, "All aboard," and we dashed away. That was not the place to make a stand, as small arms would have had no chance at the engineers. But from an ambush we could have been firing into their engine and cars before they could not have been many minutes doubtful. This was the nearest we came to what a southern account called "open mutiny"—a mere respectful suggestion in the line of our work. No officer was ever more heartily obeyed than was Andrews during the whole of this day, and none of us said anything more about this plan for the time, partly because we felt that our leader was better able to judge what was to be done than we, and partly also, I must confess, because we thought he was only waiting for the best place to turn on our foes, and that we would soon have all the fighting we wanted.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds.

The Leading-Strings Fallacy.

From the moment a child is born, he is treated on the principle that all his instincts are essentially wrong, that nature must be thwarted and counteracted in every possible way. He is strapped up in a contrivance that he would be glad to exchange for a straight-jacket, kept for hours in a position that prevents him from moving any limb of his body. His first attempts at locomotion are checked; he is put in leading-strings, he is carefully guarded from the out-door world, from the air that would invigorate his lungs; from the sports that would develop his muscles. Hence, the peevishness, awkwardness, and sickliness of our young aristocrats. Poor people have no time to imitate the absurdities of their wealthy neighbors, and their children profit by what the model nurse would undoubtedly call neglect. Indian babies are still better off. They are fed on bull-beef, and kicked around like young dogs; but they are not swaddled, they are not cradled, and not dosed with paregoric; they crawl around naked, and soon learn to keep out of the way; they are happy, they never cry. If we would treat our youngsters in the same way, only substituting kisses and bread for kicks and beef, they would be as happy as kids in a clover field, and moreover they would afterward be hardier and stronger. Every week the newspapers tell us about ladies tumbling down stairs and breaking both arms; boys falling from a fence and fracturing their collar-bones. From what height would a young Comanche have to fall to break such bones—not to mention South-sea Island children and young monkeys? The bones of an infant are plastic; letting it tumble and roll about would harden the bony tissue; guarding it like a piece of brittle crockery makes its limbs as fragile as glass. Christian mothers reproach themselves with neglecting their duty to their children if they do not constantly interfere with their movements, but they forget that in points of physical education Nature herself is such an excellent teacher that the apparent neglect is really a transfer of the pupil to a more efficient school.

The Latest Tornado

The surprising manner in which the country is being swept by the great discovery of Dr. Miles for curing the many diseases that originate in the nerves is astonishing all who know the facts. The Restorative Nervine a brain and nerve food, sold by Baker & Hall cures weakness, want of appetite, exhaustion, debility from overwork, care, worry and dissipation. It takes the place of stimulates, opiates, chloral, etc., and cures all nervous troubles. It contains no morphine, opium or dangerous drugs.

A bowl of good pea soup is as satisfying as a hearty dinner on a cold day. To make a gallon of it wash a pint of peas and soak them over night; then boil in five pints of water, gently simmering three hours or so, until thoroughly soft. With a potato-masher rub the soup through a colander or wire sieve. A pound of beef or ham bone may be boiled with the peas. The soup may be seasoned in various ways—with onions, cloves, pepper, etc.

Many People refuse to take Cod

Liver oil on account of its unpleasant taste. This difficulty has been overcome in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It is as palatable as milk, and the most valuable remedy known for the treatment of consumption, Scrofula and Bronchitis. Physicians report their patients take it with pleasure. FARMERS' CLUB

The club met on the evening of Feb. 8th, at A. VanValkenburg's Oak Ridge farm. The usual literary program was followed by the answering of several important questions.

First—What is the best way to make a grainery mouse proof. Also, can we build self-supporting hip roofs without infringing upon patents.

Mr. Pentecost said in making an out door grainery he would simply seal it up, then side it, but in a barn grainery it was more difficult to make mice out. The only sure way was to sheet iron it throughout. Norway pine was good to line a grainery with, and by lining the corners with 2x4 a grainery could be made practically mouse proof.

Mr. Hurry said rats and mice would not gnaw walnut lumber, but that it would cost as much as sheet iron.

Mr. Pentecost said he thought we could build barns with hip roofs without purlines and not infringe upon patents.

L. M. Waldron said th re were three patents on these rafters. One held by Gould & Stewart of New York on a self supporting rafter, which covered all hip roofs without purlines. Another on rafters halved together, and another on saw tooth joint in the rafter.

The packing of ice was then discussed but no new facts developed.

In answer to the question which was more profitable to fatten lambs or keep them till two or three years old, Mr. Swarts said he found more profit in fattening them.

In answer to the question can stock be injured by keeping them too closely housed, Mr. Wilson said they could be, since all stock needed exercise in order to perfectly develop.

Mr. Swartz thought stock should be housed most of the time in cold weather. His cows and sheep did better to keep them housed in cold weather. Horses could stand more cold than the rest of the stock.

The club adjourned to meet at A. K. Waldron's in two weeks with the following program.

Question—What shall we do with our cream? Led by A. VanValkenburg followed by Mrs. E. Howard and discussed by the ladies and gentlemen. In connection with the question the feasibility of starting a farmers co-operative creamery, will be discussed.

FARMERS UNION

The Farmers' Union met at John VanVleet's Friday evening, Feb. 10. The attendance was very large and a good program was presented. The question, "How are the farmers benefitted by the crop reports as taken by the Supervisors," was freely discussed, and the general opinion was that there was no benefit derived from them. There was a motion made and carried that every farmer present refuse to answer the questions asked by the supervisors, another year. The next meeting was appointed at Mr. M. Smeltzer's for Friday evening, Feb. 24. Program for that evening.

Music—Choir.
Rec.—Lillie Welliver.

Sel. Read.—Mrs. Chas. Blood
Song—Louisa Brown
Discussion—The best method of growing, feeding and caring for roots. By H. B. Eaton, E. W. Rappleye, B. VanNess and others.
Question for March 9th, "Is it practicable to dehorn cattle?"

EMMA BROWN, Sec.

The March Century will contain the story of "Colonel Rose's Tunnel at Libby Prison," told by one of the one hundred and nine Union officers who escaped on the night of February 9, 1864. The successful construction of this tunnel, dug from a dark corner of the cellar of the prison, through fifty feet of solid earth,—the only tools being two broken chisels and a wooden spittoon in which to carry out the dirt,—was one of the most remarkable incidents of the war. Colonel Rose, to whose indomitable will and perseverance the success of the scheme was due, is now a captain in the 16th United States Infantry, and of the fourteen men who assisted him in digging the tunnel, eleven are still living. The narrative in the March century, which is illustrated, forms one of the untechnical papers supplementing the War Series, and it is said to be one of the most romantic records that the Century has ever printed.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, Oh, it will wear away, but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free, at Baker & Hall.

LOCAL OPTION HELPS PROHIBITION

I find in quite a number of counties a move on foot under the local option law to drive out the saloons. The more I think about this movement, the more firmly I become convinced of Prohibition.

All teaching by public speaking all printed documents sent out, all effort put forth by way of argument or personal endeavor will tend to break down opposition to the Prohibition idea, and bring men into line for future work in the broader plane of State and National Prohibition. In no place will the clearing of a county from the saloon curse be accepted as the end of the fight, but simply as the winning of a victory on the skirmish line. The more victories won on the skirmish line of local option the better condition will our army be in for the big battle of constitutional Prohibition. The more you drill a soldier the more effective he becomes.

Use every advantage left open by the enemy in time of war. Capture and hold all territory possible. Cut off all depots of supplies, and by every way hinder his progress and break his power. All this as a means to help bring about the end we have in view. As a young trooper of Sherman's army I remember we captured one strong point at a time, not stopping the forward movement of the grand army, but always keeping the great object to be attained in view, rebellion's overthrow. We captured one position after another in the very heart of the Confederacy while Grant was knocking for admittance at the very doors of the Confederate capital.

So let us capture every individual, every family, every neighborhood, every town, every city, every state, every position now held by our enemy which we can. At the same time we must not stop our onward march. Let the grand army of believers in constitutional Prohibition keep enlisting men who have the courage of their convictions, and continue knocking at the very doors of the national capital until we reach the rebellious heart of American drunkard makers, break their power and scatter their forces. Only two ways are open for action on the part of good men. One is moral suasion, the other legal suasion. And I cannot see why we are not as much in duty bound to use both these powers given us by our Creator for his glory and for the cause of humanity as we are to use one of them. Moral suasion means the use of all our moral and religious powers to take men away from the saloon. Legal suasion means the use of all our legal and political powers to take the saloon away from the men. Combine these forces and we use our full power for God and humanity, and we shall win. Separate and divide them, and we shall and ought to be defeated.

I believe it will be quite easy for a man to cast a ballot for state and national Prohibition if he first passes through a local contest, and gets warmed up and thoroughly committed to the principle. It will be as a schoolmaster to bring him up to higher ideas, and he will always feel he owes both the moral and legal power of his nature to the cause of Christ and government.

What right has a man by the power of prayer to ask for one thing, and by the power of his ballot to ask for the very opposite? We pray, Lead us not into temptation. Will not every one help answer his own prayer? If we cannot abolish the national saloon or the state saloon just yet, let us do what we can to remove temptation and abolish the county saloons wherever possible.

E. B. SUTTON.

THY RIGHT TO MAKE CIDER.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—Will you kindly allow me space for a little talk as to the meaning of the "County Option Law." It was not passed by the legislature, as some seem to suppose, to suppress the manufacture or use of sweet cider, but to do away with the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

Laws are not made to punish the innocent but the guilty. There is nothing whatever in the law to prevent sale or use of sweet cider. Malt or brewed liquors are specified, but not cider. In no way can it be construed to mean cider until after fermentation takes place. The intent is what is contemplated in the law. A cider manufacturer, or any one else, may store cider until it ferments and makes vinegar, without violating the law. If he sells or gives it away while it is fermenting, or in an intoxicating condition then he violates the law. If you cannot make vinegar neither can a baker or housewife make buscuit yeast or anybody make or sell effervescent drinks, such as soda or root-beer.

Why did not the vinegar manufacturers in their recent State convention make a loud wail of dispair if the new law is going to injure their business? Simply because they have good sense enough to interpret the intent of the law. I was present when the bill was under discussion and passed, and I have also taken counsel in the matter, and believe my views are correct.

M. T. COLE.

Palmyra, Feb. 15, 1888.

MONDAY FEBRUARY 20th 1888.—THE HOME vs. THE SALOON.

CIDER AND LOCAL OPTION.

The subjoined letter, in reply to inquiries made by three gentlemen of Tecumseh, as to whether a farmer can manufacture cider under the local option act, is from one of the prominent attorneys of Detroit, and is published by request.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13th, 1888.

GENTLEMEN:—In response to your request for my opinion upon the question whether act No. 197 of the Session laws of 1887, commonly known as the local option act, includes within its prohibition the manufacture and sale of cider, I have to say as follows.

The statute in question, in express terms, provides that it shall be unlawful to manufacture, sell, give away, or furnish malt, brewed, fermented, vinous or intoxicating liquors of any kind, or in any quantity, or liquors any part of which is malt, brewed, fermented, vinous or intoxicating, or keep for sale, or keep a place where such liquors are manufactured or kept for sale, given away or furnished, within the limits of any county, etc.

These provisions are very broad and sweeping and were evidently intended to reach any liquor of an intoxicating character. Whether any liquor is malt, fermented, or brewed, depends upon the process of manufacture. Whether vinous, depends on its source. Whether intoxicating, depends upon its effect. It has been decided that cider is not a vinous liquor. It is certainly neither malt nor brewed. It may become a fermented liquor, or an intoxicating liquor, and when it reaches the point of being fermented or intoxicating it would fall within the prohibition of this statute. It is the common observation and experience of every intelligent person that the process of fermentation takes place in cider, imparting to it a manifestly intoxicating character. Whether cider at any time may be properly designated as fermented, or when it may be said to be intoxicating, are questions of fact to be determined upon the evidence. There is no doubt, however, of the truth of the general proposition, that cider may become or be an intoxicating liquor, and as such would be subject to the prohibition of the statute in question.

In expressing the foregoing I wish it understood that I do not express any opinion on the constitutionality of the act in question, but simply wish to be understood that if the act is valid, cider may fall within its terms, under the circumstances above indicated, and as the process of fermentation in cider commences very promptly the statute would ordinarily have a very early application to it.

EDWIN F. CONLEY

We call the attention of the young ladies of our place to the fact that we have engaged Miss May McDowell, national organizer of Young Women's Temperance Unions, to speak at this place soon. We have great hopes that we may secure more fully the help of the young women in our temperance work and that a local auxiliary may be organized.—W. C. T. U.

Peterson's Magazine for March comes among the earliest and brightest harbingers of spring periodical literature. Steel and wood engravings, mammoth fashion plates, illustrated articles in profusion and of the first order of merit, along with capital stories and poetry far above the average, make up a tempting list of contents. This magazine is all that it claims for itself: foremost in literary and artistic excellence, unsurpassed in its fashion and household departments, fitted in every way to be the guide for ladies, the friend of the family.

We publish this week considerable local option matter but, no more we believe than patrons will find time to read and digest. The only new point that has arisen during this discussion is the right to manufacture cider under the law. The letter of Edwin F. Conly is a shrewd presentation of that side of the controversy. The letter from Hon M. T. Cole, Representative from this district, although not written for that purpose, is a complete refutation of Mr. Conley's position. All legislative acts are construed by the courts according to the evident intent of the makers. A farmer might bring himself under the restriction of the law if he deliberately choose to do so, but the manufacture of cider as generally carried on among the farmers would not fall under the ban of the present local option law.

Prepare to vote next Monday, and vote right.

Next Sunday morning at 10:30 at the Universalist church the pastor will, by request, preach the sermon entitled, "The Rainbow Land." In the evening, at 7 o'clock, a discourse upon "The Discontented." Text: I. Samuel, 22:2.

Bud Hall had only just received his discharge from the assault and battery case of Jas. O'Riley, when Jas. O'Riley Jr. preferred a like charge against him and he was again in the clutches of the law. His trial was put down for last Monday, but was adjourned one week, and the unlucky Bud is out on bail.

The Band Concert last evening was an unqualified success musically considered. A finer program was never given in this town; the attendance however was not what it should have been, owing probably to the severe weather. Although the boys had a margin of surplus from the receipts, they were entitled to a much larger margin for such an entertainment.

THE LAND OF FLOWERS.

DEAR HERALD.—It may be of interest to your many readers to have a few words of news from this section. In the first place we are pleased to state the fact that the yellow fever is all gone, and the City of Tampa is again flourishing, after being thoroughly fumigated. Mr. Knapp and family have returned to their home there, from there, where his family took refuge while he remained to battle with the raging fever, and after a confinement of ten days came out victorious. Several that were exposed to the fever left Tampa to stop for a season with friends in other towns, some came down with the disease a few died, others got well but in no case out of 30 or more of such cases, did one of their friends and neighbors that took care of them and buried those that died, did one take the disease out side of Tampa; so that it proves not to be contagious only where the germ of the yellow fever is planted.

We have no fears of another case this season, and now while the Sub Tropicalis in full blast at Jacksonville where is displayed one of the best collections of Florida's productions, one will feel amply paid for the trouble of coming to Florida in February or March, and by coming soon can see orange trees loaded with orange. As an evidence of this would say that I went with Orren Howes of Hudson, Mich., last week to see the noted Speer grove at Sanford, Fla. This grove contains 7½ acres of orange trees, the oldest of which is 38 years, the youngest 12 years. We saw trees loaded to such an extent that limbs were broken beneath the great weight. We judged that one tree had not less than 10,000 oranges on it, and not only one tree, but several were loaded in this manner. We were informed that the crop was sold (but only a few as yet picked), for the sum of $8,000. Two years ago the owner of this grove told me that he sold the fruit on the trees that year for $6,000, and that the outlay for the year, for labor and fertilizer, on the grove was $300. "Don't this pay?"

In addition to these attractions one can enjoy a ride over the country, no mud, dust, or snow to impede travel, no cloudy days at this season of the years and a ride out a few miles from Sorrento to Seminole, Rock, or Clay, Springs, where a day can be most pleasantly passed in fishing, bathing, or gathering flowers. I say bathing for there has been scarcely a day this winter, but after ten o'clock A. M., it has been warm enough for that. To-day while I write with doors all open, the notes of the mocking bird is heard warbling forth sweet notes of praise to the Creator, (I think this is Sabbath.) The thermometer is 75° in the shade, although it was cool enough last night to blanket the moon. I noticed at 6:30 P. M. (total, at 7:15 she came forth so bright that the roses and other beautiful flowers, and even ripe strawberries on W. Coopers place, (where I board) could be seen as it were day time, this is one of the peculiarities of Florida. The moon shines more bright than at the North.

The hand of Providence seems to have held back the cold frowns of winter for while hundreds have perished with cold, at the North, we have had only slight frosts; 34° above is the coldest here this winter since we arrived in November last, while at River side, Cal., my cousin there writes that "a short time ago they had a Norther that blew down buildings and scattered the oranges, and froze ice ¼ inch in thickness." Florida has been favored thus far this winter, the orange trees have continued to grow all the time, some are now in bloom. I passed through Mr. F. Bumann's peach orchard to-day, where I saw trees quite full of fruit, and took the trouble to measure some of the young peaches and found several that were ¾ inch in diameter, which will be ripe in May; and by the way this orchard was only planted out two years ago. We have tomatos all the way from bloom to ripe fruit. Mr. Tremain has made his first shipment of strawberries this season and realized $1.00 per quart net. Friend Jas. Brown is progressing nicely with his winter gardening; this has been a favorable season for gardening and flower growing. Japan plums are now ripening, and Florida is now showing off to a good advantage to greet the multitudes that are now arriving daily from the North. Cheap rates will bring the people to this delightful climate. J. R. Swan reports Sanford as rising in her beauty with numerous brick blocks on the ashes of last summer's conflagration.

UNION TEMPERANCE MEETING.

Held at the M. E. Church Sunday Evening Extempore Speeches by Several of Our Citizens.

The M. E. Church was filled to overflowing last Sunday evening by the friends of temperance. The fact that speeches would be made by some of our prominent citizens brought out many who would otherwise have stayed at home. It was a very interesting meeting in every respect and will be repeated next Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church. After devotional exercises Rev. W. H. Babbitt read a letter from Rev. Frank P. Bailey of Portland, Maine, relative to the enforcement of the prohibition law in that city. While the law was not enforced in that city as effectually as it was in some others in that state, still it showed a better state of affairs than Detroit and some other cities of Michigan. While the saloons of Detroit were open on the principal streets and furnished up like a palace to attract the young men to them, those in Portland were on the back streets, with the liquor concealed under the floor or some other filthy place, and where a young man with any respect for himself would be ashamed to be seen.

The first speaker introduced was Dr. L. Barnes, who spoke as follows:

"Friends of temperance, in claiming your attention at the opening of this meeting, I will say that I tried very hard to beg off on speaking at all, but in this it seems that I have been unsuccessful. I am not so conceited as to think that I can say anything new on this question. The question of intemperance is as old as the hills. You and I can remember 25 or 30 years ago when the old-time temperance orators went thundering through this country on the subject of intemperance, telling of its being so great an evil. We know that in more recent years the speakers on the subject of intemperance have taken a somewhat different view of the question. They have spoken more of the legal aspect, and many of their arguments have been bright and full of logic. We have failed to read the signs of the times if we have not discovered that the next great social question to be settled in this land is the question of intemperance. But there is a difference of opinion in reference to the method of dealing with this curse, and we have a right to differ. The present issue before us is that of prohibition and I may say that I heartily agree with it. The question we have now to settle is local prohibition for this county. There are many and great obstacles in the way. There are lions in the way and they are not chained. Prohibition, to be effectual, should be thoroughly rooted and grounded into the people. I don't suppose that when we have gained local option that we shall have clear sailing. We shall then have to grapple with other difficulties, and when we have chained the lion we shall then have to care for his health. You ask, what do you propose to do with this drinking habit that has been formed, and so long fostered, if the saloons are closed? What do we consider drunkeness to be? Do we consider it a crime or a disease? The day is not far distant when that habit which leads to excess in drinking, will be regarded, at least by the medical profession, as a disease. We treat the drunkard as a criminal now and put him in jail. What do we do with the insane? You don't put him in the lockup, you put him in the asylum. We should treat the drunkard as a disease and provide an asylum for him. Has a man a moral right to be a drunkard? You say no. Has a drunkard a right to be the father of children, to be cursed and blighted by his depraved appetite? Is it not time then to do away with this great evil? I hope that when we vote on this question in Lenawee County we shall have a large and dry majority.

A. P. Coddington was called on next and delivered the following:

"This has taken me unawares and I don't know what to say to you, but I hate very much to refuse to say anything in opposition to the liquor traffic. I always want to show my colors. I do not know as there is any necessity of entering into a description of the merits of this election or of the merits of prohibition. We should know the evils of intemperance, we all know the evils of the liquor traffic. We have all seen the increasing of that traffic in our own village since last spring. It has been frequently remarked that since last summer there has been more drunken men on our streets than any time during the past ten years, and all that was said last spring can be said in favor of having prohibition in our own county. I am not pleased with it because it does not go far enough. I should very much prefer it would extend in all parts of our state. I don't believe that there is one in this house but that is strongly in favor of prohibiting the liquor traffic. There is too much confidence with the people that this local option law will succeed at the polls. Now that very confidence will endanger success. There is too much confidence in regard to feeling that it will carry anyway. We want to guard against this. Show your colors.

ballot in the box that we could do [illegible] would in a presidential election. The question of prohibition of the liquor traffic in this county is of more importance to you than the result of a presidential election. We want to tell the people that we are in earnest. If the officers don't enforce the law we will put some one in who will. It is a question that will not down. Last spring they gained only a temporary victory by fraud. They know full well that this reform is coming, and it will surely prevail. Last spring we know they came out and knew what they were doing. To-day all is quiet. Be not deceived by this quiet. Be ready and do your duty like a man. See that not only yourself is at the polls but everyone [illegible]

A. W. Mills then spoke as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I am greatly interested in this subject. The most we have now to fear is that we shall not have a full vote. They say that this law means free whisky. I heard one man say this week that "we will all go into the drug business;" another said, "we are going to form clubs; we will have all the drinking men in the clubs and will make more money." It seems to me that one of the greatest evils of the day is the saloon in politics. What is their politics? Do they ally themselves to any particular party? Do they say we will all vote one particular ticket? No. We are going to vote for the men that favor our cause. They have millions of dollars. What is the result of this? They do not care for their politics. What is the result? Take a district like Detroit, where the saloon element has the balance of power. They say, gentlemen, be careful whom you nominate, and the result is men are nominated who are sure to catch that vote. How are you going to match this? It seems to me that their idea is a good one and we can meet them best by using their own plan. If the men will only vote for men who will enforce the law then you will succeed. Supposing there is a loophole in this law. Our legislature can remedy it. Do you suppose that with the sentiment worked up in the last year that we will have a legislature that is less inclined to favor the law than the last? Won't they protect that law? If we don't adopt this local prohibition they surely cannot help us. This is the first step. I don't believe there is any danger of our losing the day.

J. S. Kinney was called and said he was glad to see so many there to give their influence to so noble a cause. The question of temperance has been discussed on so many sides that it seems to me as though there could not be anything added to it. The whisky element is working quietly, but with proper work we will have a glorious success on the 20th of this month. I hope all of us will be ready to put in a ballot that will help to sweep this curse from our town. I have seen more drunkeness in Tecumseh in one night than in the city of Cleveland. One reason is that the police force in that city are instructed to take care of all such cases. I hope that we may look at this right and when it comes time to strike the blow we shall strike hard. Drinking men have come to me and said that they hoped the new would pass. They had tried to reform but as long as the temptation was held out to them it was impossible. With the saloons closed they would have a better chance."

Rev. W. Q. Burnett said he took exceptions to being introduced as a Rev. as he was asked to speak as a citizen. We are talking against a lawful business. We are here for that purpose. Now we are either in very poor business or that business is poor. Suppose I should stand up in defense of this lawful business and say I might vote for it, the legislature endorses it. What would you say if I should give you an argument for it and then sit down? You would say send him to Kalamazoo or Pontiac. It is time we are done with making laws that curse, blight and damn. Take the three parties, and on the 20th of February we can unite our hearts and hands, and the Democrats and Republicans and third party Prohibitionists can join hands and cast their vote against this traffic of liquor and then we can sing hallelujah and all the multitudes look on God and the angels. Now we shall do one of three things individually we will go to the ballot box and cast a ballot for the right, and we shall have Heaven's blessings and the blessings of the women, and we shall be on the side of the purest men and women that live. Or we shall go and cast a vote on the other side and we shall become associates with (can I get a word from the dictionary to name this being?) or we shall stay at home. There is no position that a man can keep on this earth to show his manhood better than at the polls. When it shall be proclaimed that Lenawee County has gone for the right, suppose some man should be at home. What would be popular opinion of such a man? Let us vote with the men. Let us do the little work that we have to do most heartily."

REV. S. A. LONG, pastor of the M. E. Church at Franklin, Mich., says Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is wonderful in the cure of rheumatism.

LICENSE INJURES TEMPERANCE.

A Conclusive Letter from the Leading Distiller in Nebraska. How $1,000 High License Works in the Trade.

THE letter below is most significant. It is a confidential letter written for the guidance of the liquor dealers of New York in answer to questions as to the effect High License has upon the liquor trade. The writer of the letter is president of the largest distillery company in all Nebraska, a State that was the first to adopt High License—adopting it because of the agency of John B. Finch and other temperance leaders in 1881. The license fee is $1,000 for any kind of saloon—more than double that proposed by the Crosby bill. The trial of High License in that State has been a long and fair one. The first effect of the law, as is nearly always true of High License, was unfavorable to the trade. The secondary effect was most favorable to the liquor men, and most discouraging to the temperance men. So disappointing and disastrous were these secondary effects that John B. Finch over and over again declared that his championship of High License in Nebraska in 1881 was "the greatest mistake of my life."

As the letter below is of profound interest to the liquor dealers of this State they should have it at once. Hence THE VOICE, ever prompted by a spirit of accommodation, makes haste to publish it. President Iler and "the trade" need not worry themselves to know how we came in possession of the letter. Let this fact restore their equilibrium: within 48 hours every leading liquor dealer in the State of New York will have read the letter. These men read THE VOICE. And we are sure that our brothers Crosby, Judge Davis, MacArthur, Graham, will find in this letter much food for reflection. It may not be altogether pleasant for them to know just how the leading liquor-dealers privately regard their High License work, cannot but prove wholesome.

But read the letter. Remember as you read it that it was not written for publication, and especially remember that it was written to guide the liquor-dealers in this State in their High License movement, and written by the president of the leading distillery company in the $1,000 High License movement, and written by the president of the leading distillery company in the $1,000 High License State of Nebraska.

WILLOW SPRINGS DISTILLING CO.

P. E. ILER, Pres. J. H. ILER, Sec.
OMAHA, NEB., Jan. 7, 1888.

To [illegible]

Gentlemen: Your letter of the 31st ult., in regard to Prohibition, is at hand and carefully noted. I would answer your questions as you put them as follows:

1. High License has not hurt our business, but, on the contrary, has been a great benefit to it as well as to the people generally.

2. I believe somewhat, as you say the Cincinnati Volksblatt says, that High License acts as a bar against Prohibition. It is especially so in this State, as the tax from the license goes towards supporting the schools, thereby relieving the citizens and farmers of just so much tax that they would otherwise have to pay, and is therefore especially beneficial to the poor and laboring classes. It also gives the business more of a tone and legal standing, and places it in hands of a better class of people.

3. I do not think that High License lessens the quantity of liquor used, but places it in fewer and better hands with better regularity.

4. As to the trade repealing the High License law, if the question was left to it, I do not think, so far as my acquaintance is concerned, that it would do so. I have an extensive acquaintance through this State, and I believe if it were put to a vote of the liquor dealers and saloon men whether it should be High License, no license, or low license, that they would almost unanimously be for High License. The objecting would be a class without responsibility or character, who never pay for anything if they can help it, who simply start in business for a few months with the view of beating everyone they can, and, of course, naturally such a class would not want this law. I cannot see how any one who has anything at stake can be in favor of High License and enforcing the law strictly.

5. I would be in favor of High License rather than trust to the non-enforcement of the law under Prohibition. If you undertake to do your business without protection you are blackmailed by our horse attorneys, which in the end amounts to many times the cost of a license every year, even if the license be very high. We have had a good deal of business in the State of Iowa, both before it was Prohibition and since, and we can say positively that there is very little satisfaction in doing business in that State now. Every so often the goods are seized and it causes a great deal of delay and trouble to get them released, and there is always fear of not getting paid for the goods, and of the loss we have sustained through make it very unpleasant. It [illegible] are going on [illegible] before the temperature [illegible] twenty years experience in High License and [illegible] this High License is one of the best laws of the liquor traffic and [illegible] men interested as well as the public at large, there is. The [illegible]

we have here is that the regulations are not more strictly enforced than they are. I do not believe we would have any Prohibition people in our State if our High License law was more rigidly enforced.

I enclose you herewith a copy of our State law regulating the liquor business, which will give you an idea of [illegible]

I remain for you at any time, please command me.

Yours truly
PETER E. ILER, Pres't.

NOTE SEVERAL THINGS.

After seven years of trial of the highest kind of High License, the chief distiller in Nebraska assures privately the trade in New York that High License does not lessen the consumption of liquor. Now will honorable men like Dorman B. Eaton and Dr. Crosby, in the teeth of this conclusive evidence, declare the contrary?

Note the enthusiasm of Pres. Iler: "I believe that High License is one of the grandest laws for the liquor traffic there is. Is so noble a man as Judge Noah Davis content in his old age to spend and be spent in helping to push through the Legislature "the grandest law for the liquor traffic" there is—a law so beneficial to the liquor seller that President Iler assures his brothers in New York that after seven years' trial the liquor dealers in Nebraska like the law so well that they prefer it to low license or no license, and if the repeal of the law were left to the dealers themselves, that they would "almost unanimously" vote against the repeal?

Friends, you who honestly have favored High License believing it a step toward the eradication of the liquor evil, permit us to urge you to read this letter of President Iler over again and again. That letter ought to be the death-knell of High License.

Pluck vs. Luck.

In an address delivered before the students of the Spencerian business college, Washington, D. C., June 29, 1868, among other things, Gen. James A. Garfield said:

"Now, young gentlemen, let me address you touching your success in life; and I hope the very brevity of my remarks will increase the chance of their making a lodgment in your minds. Let me beg you in the outset of your career, to dismiss from your minds all ideas of succeeding by luck. There is no more silly thought among young people than the foolish one that by-and-by something will turn up by which they will suddenly achieve fame or fortune. No, young gentlemen, things don't turn up in this world unless somebody turns them up. Inertia is one of the indispensable laws of matter, and things lie flat where they are laid by some intelligent spirit; for nothing but spirit makes motion in this world; they are endowed with activity and life. Do not dream that some good luck is going to happen to you and give you a fortune. Luck is an ignis fatuus—you may follow it to ruin, but not to success. The great Napoleon, who believed in his destiny, followed it until he saw his star go down in blackest night, when the Old Guard perished around him, and Waterloo was lost. A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck.

Young men talk of trusting to the spur of the occasion. That trust is vain. Occasions cannot make spurs; young gentlemen. If you expect to wear spurs you must win them. If you wish to use them you must buckle them to your own heels before you go into the fight. The success you may achieve is not worth the having unless you fight for it. Whatever you win in life you must conquer by your own efforts, and then it is yours—a part of your self.

Symptoms of Heart Disease

Diseased hearts are as common as diseased lungs, kidneys or stomach, but far less understood. The symptoms are shortness of breath, when sweeping, etc., oppression in the chest, faint, weak or hungry spells, dreaming, pain or tenderness in the side, swelling feet, dropsy, etc. The unnatural circulation of the blood in the lungs, stomach, kidneys, liver and brain causes other symptoms. The only reliable remedy for the heart yet discovered is Dr. Mile's New Cure. Try it and be convinced. Sold by Baker & Hall.

Winter Evenings on the Farm.

I remember to have read somewhere how some Italian artist gathered up all the bits of broken glass cast aside in building a cathedral, and how from these pieces, trimmed, arranged and set in order, he constructed one of the most beautiful windows found in Italy. What others had cast aside as useless, he took up and from it wrought out the beautiful, and the useful.

Boys and girls on the farm, as everywhere else, let run to waste many bits of time, spare moments, hours, evenings which if they would but turn to good use, might be made to serve the noblest purpose. But the trouble is to get at it, to have some plan of working over these spare hours. How can the evenings be turned to use, and the best use? Of course one can doze them away sitting before the fire, can gossip, play checkers, and so on, but this is not the best use, nor the best way to spend long evenings. An occasional evening spent in this way may be good, but to let all these passing spare hours slip is to waste life. And at the end of ten years of spare hours what have we to show?

Let me suggest a simple plan for utilizing evenings; and let me suggest it out of my own experience, for I do no not know what our experience is good for if it is not to help others. It often comes too late to help us. And now, the fact that you are on a farm is a great advantage for using your evenings. I know this from experience both on farm life and city life. In the city there is something to break in on your plans all the time, in the country your evenings are comparatively free, at least so far as [illegible] each evening and you can [illegible] plan beforehand [illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 19th.

A LESSON ON FORGIVENESS.—MATT. xviii, 21-35.

NOTES.—"Until seven times?"—Peter wonders if that is not sufficient. He has outdone the rabbis by four times. He thought he was doing a charitable measure. "Until seventy times seven." The best scholars agree that the correct rendering is seventy seven times. This reading does not invalidate the spirit of the text, that forgiveness should be never ending. Therefore. "From the fact of this unlimited forgiveness. A certain king: a human king. Literally, to a man a king. Make reckoning [illegible] ents. An approximate calculation makes a talent equal to $1,030. The full amount the servant owed would, therefore, be about $10,300,000, a sum so large in those days as to be equivalent to four or five times of our money value of to-day. Money was scarcer then. "To be sold." His lord went about the best way he could then to get his payment. "I will pay thee all."—An incidental drapery to the parable. He will do his best. "And forgave him the debt." Why? The king grants more than is asked. It cannot be on account of the merit of the man's penitence. Why God forgives sin is often a great mystery too. "A hundred pence."—About $17.25. What a mean little debt to make so much fuss over in comparison with the incalculable amount he owed his lord. "And took him by the throat."—Throttled him. With savage act he thursts the sword of his lord's displeasure into his own heart. Roman law permitted the dragging of debtors by the throat to the judge. "Pay what thou owest."—Or rather—pay if thou owest aught. Undoubtedly a gruff Greek idiom. "Exceedingly sorry." Deeply grieved at the cruelty going on. "And told." The infinite Lord has no need of any one to tell him. Yet this was an act of confidence. It was to redress a wrong, not to tattle. "Tormentors." To torture as well as to cast into prison. "Till he should pay." This is the eternal punishment. He could never pay so great a debt.

INSTRUCTION.—Peter's question was at that time one of casuistry. Peter saw further than the rabbis in answering it. So the Christian sees further than the worldly in answering questions about moral and spiritual truths. In such proportion ought his life to be true to his insight. Christ saw truth with infinite clearness. His life was perfect.

When a person has forgiven his brother or friend four hundred and ninety times, the habit of forgiveness is apt to become firmly fixed. But with God forgiveness is not limited by number. His charity is infinite. No one should gloat over any act of forgiveness as a strange, unusual thing, even if it does seem to take unusual grace to do it. It should be so much a matter of habit that it becomes a matter of course.

On the other hand, if we do not keep account of the number of times we forgive, we are apt to note the number of times certain ones injure us. "That is the third time Mr. Blank has thrown his snow over into my back yard. Mean thing! We'll get even yet!" Such calculation is as reprehensible as the state of unforgiveness. It goes hand in hand with it.

This servant owed his lord an almost incalculable amount. It represents the debt that every sinner owes to God.

If the debt of sin is so great, who can estimate the debt of the whole world? Now can any one wonder that Jesus was a man of sorrow, and oppressed with the sense of overwhelming sin?

When we are inclined to deal harshly, or what we call justly with others, we should ask ourselves if that is the way that God has treated us in the Gospel of his Son.

There is no ethical fitness for Heaven in the heart of him who on earth is unkind, mean and unforgiving. He has not an atom of heavenliness in him.

For how little a fault or misunderstanding or even pecuniary debt do we allow our tempers to be roused and friendship broken!

God never compels us to forgive. He influences us, but we are ever free agents.

We are stimulated by forgiveness from God to receive the trifling slights of our friends.

Divine forgiveness can be forfeited when backsliding is not repented of.

An unforgiving spirit is the worst of its own condemnation.

TWO DEADLY COLLISIONS

LOCOMOTIVES IN ONE CASE THROWN UP ON THEIR ENDS,

With Their Driving Wheels Locked—Ten or Twelve Killed and a Score or More Wounded—Both Disasters the Result of Carelessness—Selected Still Again—The Year's Record.

MEADVILLE, PA., Jan. 2.—A collision occurred on the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio railroad, five miles west of this city, at 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning, between the "Thunderbolt," a through train from Chicago to New York, consisting of an express baggage, smoker, ladies' car, and two Pullman sleepers, due in this city at 9:45, and freight train No. 84, [illegible] header. Both trains were over two hours late, and the express, being [illegible] to the right of way, was running [illegible] Simply taking it for granted that the express was in, Conductor Murray, of the freight, pulled out for Geneva, [illegible] no fast orders against train 28 and 84. Almost simultaneously the trains swept by the last two intervening stations, Geneva and Buchanan, only four miles apart, [illegible] the word was sent to the dispatcher's office in this city, the inevitable result was certain. The two trains, the "Thunderbolt" running forty-five miles and the freight train fifteen miles an hour, met on a long forest-hidden curve with a crash that was terrible to witness.

Passenger engine No. 57 and freight engine No. 84 seemed to rise bodily in the air, and in an instant they were standing on their furnace ends, pilots pointed to the sky and their drivers locked as in an embrace of death. And so they stood for hours, held firmly by the ruins of the two trains on either side. Both the engineers and firemen of the two colliding engines were crushed between the iron ruins. The baggage-car, express-car, and smoker of the passenger train were completely wrecked. The baggage-car was telescoped into the smoker, like a wedge, splitting it open, and sweeping every seat from the floor. The total number of passengers on the train was fifty-three, fifteen of whom were in the smoker.

The groans and cries that soon came from the ruins brought people to a realization of the terrible situation, and in a very short time a large force of men were at work systematically doing all they could for the wounded and dying. The railroad company, after dispatching two wrecking crews to the scene of the disaster, soon sent a passenger train on which to transfer the passengers of the wrecked train and bring the wounded and such of the dead as had been recovered to Meadville. The body of Fireman Haines, of the freight train, was almost unrecognizable. The legs and lower part of the body were ground to pulp. The aged father of Haines had arrived, and his wailings when he gazed upon the mangled body of his son were heart-rending. The body of Engineer Swan, of the Chicago express, was wedged in the wreck so tightly that no attempt was made to remove it. A portion of the body of Engineer Googe, of the freight train, and also the arm and shoulder of Fireman Irwin could be seen. The work of clearing the wreck was prosecuted in the face of a driving storm of sleet that lasted the entire afternoon, yet the horrible scene possessed a peculiar fascination for men and even women, who lingered about the spot until the work of the wreckers was completed.

The following is a list of killed: Engineer L. F. Swan, Meadville; Engineer William Googe, Meadville; Fireman Archer Irwin, Meadville; Fireman Edward Haines, Cambridge, O.; William H. Stephenson, Toledo, O., passenger brakeman.

Injured: H. L. Hollin, New York, leg crushed; Adolph Wagener, Buffalo, N. Y., leg broken; Adolph Hosen, Paterson, N. J., leg crushed; H. Malvek, Mill Hollow, [illegible] crushed and the other broken; Michael O'Brien, a boy, No. 434 Thirteenth street, Buffalo, N. Y., leg broken; F. N. Nelson, Shinglehouse, Pa., leg broken; [illegible] David Beaumont, Gilmerton, leg broken; Charles E. French, Sterling, Mass., leg broken; Horace Graham, fireman, returning from Kent, O., badly hurt across the [illegible]; F. Wyman, brakeman, returning from Kent, O., foot crushed; Joseph Bennett, baggageman, leg cut, head cut, and bruised about face and head; Pomp Fouik, San Francisco, Cal., arm hurt; J. M. Weeks, saloon-car, leg broken; Ralph Riser, Cincinnati, [illegible] crushed; Freeman Charles, Canada, bruised about the head and shoulders.

AN ERROR DID THIS, TOO.

Four Train Hands Met a Frightful Death in Tennessee.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 2.—A collision occurred Saturday at 12:20 p.m. on the Cincinnati Southern road, one mile north of Greenwood, between two camel-hull trains running at the rate of forty miles per hour. The dispatcher gave orders for the trains to meet and pass at Summit, and one of the engineers, mistaking the name "Summit" for "Somerset," went ahead. Both engines were demolished, together with several cars.

The fatalities were as follows: Lou Withrow, of Cincinnati, baggage master, throat cut, neck crushed in, and legs and hips mangled; other [illegible] Lawrence Collard, baggageman, from Louisville, Ky., scalded, [illegible]; James S. Swanee, Jr., manager, fatally wounded; Express Messenger Perry, [illegible] scalded. OBITUARY.

From the last number of the Battle Creek Journal we gather a few data of the [illegible] Hon. Witter J. Baxter. As [illegible] was a brother of Hon. [illegible] Tecumseh himself in the old [illegible] says it will be of interest to [illegible] pioneers of this section.

[illegible] community and the country [illegible] startled and shocked on [illegible] morning by the announcement [illegible] Witter J. Baxter, one of [illegible] prominent and most widely [illegible] citizens of Jonesville, had died [illegible] during the previous night. Mr. Baxter had been troubled [illegible] for a number of years with what he [illegible] angina pectoris and on Sunday night [illegible] attack which prevented his [illegible]. He visited his office Monday morning, but after remaining [illegible] about seven o'clock returned [illegible] was assisted home [illegible] was after supper [illegible] complained of feeling more [illegible] He laughed [illegible] was later to attend [illegible] was to take [illegible] and discov[illegible] He had un[illegible] and had passed [illegible] His position [illegible] was painless. [illegible] was quickly summoned [illegible] responded to the call but [illegible] had been for him who [illegible] Maker and those [illegible] he was so [illegible] and whose loss he [illegible] sincerely mourned.

Witter J. Baxter was born at Sidney, Delaware county, N. Y., [illegible] and was the [illegible] of Judge Baxter. His great grandfather, Levi Baxter, served during the entire revolutionary war, being in army as a private and attaining the rank of captain. His maternal grandfather was born in Ireland and when a boy sixteen years of age removed with his father, Rev. William Johnston, to Sheffield, Penn. He served during the whole time of the revolutionary war with the rank of colonel. They were the first settlers in the Valley of Susquehanna.

In 1841 Witter J. Baxter removed with his father to Tecumseh, Mich., remaining until 1844, when they removed to Whitewater, where they resided until 1848, when they came to Jonesville.

Mr. Baxter received his preparation in the common schools of Sidney, Franklin, N. Y., and Tecumseh, Mich., and at the Michigan University at Tecumseh, White Pigeon and Detroit. The honorary degree of A. M. was conferred on him by the university. In 1851 he began teaching in Jonesville, engaged in the school department of the Michigan University at Tecumseh three years and assisted Orlando Ford with the Jonesville Herald one year. Among his pupils at that time was Governor Bagley, the present Governor of Michigan.

In 1851, while teaching in Detroit, he commenced reading law in the office of Barstow & Lothrop, and continued the study while teaching at Jonesville. He was admitted to the bar in 1855

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

We understand that Mrs. Josie St. John formerly of Clinton is to make her debut at the Detroit Opera House, next month, when she appears as a solo singer in The Crusaders to be given by the Detroit Musical Society, of which she is a member. This society is one of the largest and oldest of the many in Detroit.

Stewart VanDeMark has opened a law office in Telegraph Block, Room 17, Detroit. Stewart is an old Clinton boy and his many friends are glad to see him prospering.

James Walker, who has been spending several weeks with friends in Ohio, returned home Saturday last.

Mrs. E. G. Cook of Tecumseh was calling on friends here Wednesday.

C. F. Field and W. D. VanTyle visited our Schools Wednesday.

Deputy Sheriff H. W. Stevens was in town Wednesday.

Munson King is able to be out again.

C. D. Keyes returned from Detroit Tuesday evening, having visited John T. Clark and family at Grosse Point over Sunday.

Nellie Burroughs left Wednesday noon to live with a brother (who came for her) in Iowa.

James Martin of Jackson is visiting his brother Merritt and family this week.

Jerry Anthony's father from Manchester, is with him again.

A. B. Fabrique has been quite indisposed for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Dell Ordiway were called to Norvell the first of the week by the serious illness of Mrs. Ordiway's mother.

The donation last Thursday eve. for Rev. A. W. Stalker was largely attended and over one hundred dollars realized.

D. H. Silvers is very busy packing his household goods preparatory to moving his family to Chicago.

The supper and donation for Rev. J. H. Fairchild's Tuesday evening of this week passed off very pleasantly and a goodly sum presented him.

Mrs. E. R. Smith returned home Wednesday, after a week's visit with friends in Detroit.

J. L. Kishpaugh returned from the Poultry Show in Detroit, Saturday evening.

Bainbridge & Hause were called to attend a funeral last Tuesday, between Napoleon and Grass Lake.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN

Mrs. Simeon Wheelan has been better but is worse again.

Blanche Hampton of Tecumseh, has been visiting the Misses Taylor.

We are informed that Warnie Hampton has bought out Mrs. Conlin's stock of groceries at Tipton, and will continue the business in the building at present occupied by her. He is to take possession on March 1st.

Mrs. M. McCollum was called to Addison, Tuesday, by the dangerous illness of her daughter, Mrs. Winton, who it was feared could scarcely survive until her mother reached her bedside. News was received on Thursday that there was a change for the better in her condition. The tidings brought relief to many of Libbie's old friends and neighbors.

The box social at Mrs. Mudgett's was largely attended and a very pleasant time was enjoyed. For a wonder, the gentlemen outnumbered the ladies and boxes, were less plentiful than quarters, wherewith to purchase them. Except for the generosity of the more fortunate, some might have been condemned to the dreary task of trying to be gay on an empty stomach. The hat was passed and donations of cake, cold chicken, etc., averted the threatened famine.

Is there any way to compel district officers and teachers to do their duty in the matter of scientific temperance instruction? The trouble with the teachers seems to be that there are no text books, in the absence of which, perhaps their own knowledge is rather vague. Oral teaching may do very well if the instructor is thoroughly posted, but the law requires that books should be provided. It would be interesting to know in how many districts of the county this has been done. Cannot we hear from some one else upon this subject?

MACON MUSIC.

Rolph Mills, who is attending school at the Normal has been at home sick for the past week, but will be able to return to his school Monday.

A leap Year party took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Collar, on Thursday evening last. A very enjoyable time is reported.

Susie Camburn is at present on the sick list and is confined to the bed.

There will be a meeting at the M. E. church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week.

About eighty friends took Mr. and Mrs. Sarah J. Camburn and family by surprise on Tuesday last. It was the most genuine surprise we ever attended. All present enjoyed it very much.

Gambel Kuder and wife were also favored with a party last week, which was intended for a surprise, but they whispered too loud over to the other party, but it did not hinder the host and hostess from making everything as pleasant as possible.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

W. F. Clack's place of business looms up with a fine sign placed over the entrance of his store; the work was done by A. R. Arner.

The number of books taken from the Library during the first quarter, from Nov. 16th, '87 to Feb. 16th, '88, was 1063.

Ridgeway township went dry by 118 majority.

We are informed by good authority, that H. J. Williams has purchased the store and lot formerly owned by G. W. Clark, and that he will repair the store the coming season.

Anna Smith went to Adrian last week and visited friends.

Mrs. John Lucus of Dundee, visited her mother, Mrs Laura Cheever, the first of the week.

Thede Harris of Tecumseh, and May Bodine, assistant post-master at Manchester, called on Lou Arner, Tuesday evening.

The entertainment to be given by the Miller Band, at Cottage Hall, will be given next Week Wednesday evening, Feb. 29th. A program consisting of drama, solos, duetts, etc., is being prepared. Admission, 15cts. Doors open at 6:30; exercises to begin at 7:30.

Mrs. Allie Barrett, started for San Diego, Cal., last week Wednesday, where she expects to meet her husband, W. E. Barrett.

Jas. Pocklington, who has been spending some time in California, arrived in the village Monday. Since Frank returned Jim has been visiting relatives in Ohio.

L. W. Sawle, who recently sold his farm north of the village, left with his family for Farmington, Oakland Co., Monday, where they will make their future home.

There was a large attendance at the entertainment given by the L. C. S. at Cottage Hall last week. The program was well carried out. The duet by Master Bertie Cadmus and Floyd Smith, entitled, 'The Shaky Gehtleel,' was well worth the price of admission. The musical part of the program was very fine. The Pres. wishes to thank Misses Brown and VanNess for their assistance. The society realized nearly $12.

The following notice to the public was sent to the Britton Eagle for publication last week: In an article in the Eagle of last week we learn that our friends at the Britton feed mill will, until further notice, grind feed for 5c per bag, but they were very careful not to state that it was for the feed as it went out of the mill, and not as the grain came in. We have been grinding for 8c per bag, as the grain came in, which is nearly the same as 5c per bag for the feed as it goes out. After this date, Feb. 16th, '88, we will grind for 5c per bag as it goes out, during the spring run, and after March 1st, we will grind only three days a week, Tuesday's, Thursday's and Saturday's.

WM. BEEVERS,
B. N. NICHOLDS.

P. S.—Those who saw the article in the Eagle of last week, will remember that it reads like this: After this date we will grind for eight cents per bag as it goes out during the spring run.

We had formed a better opinion of the proprietors of the Britton feed mill than to think they would influence the Editor of the Eagle to make the article read 8c per bag, instead of 5c for the feed as it goes out, and supposed that the Editor of the Eagle had better eyesight than to take a five for an eight. It looks to us, from our knowledge of the article sent, and the one that appeared in the Eagle, that a little boycotting has been indulged in by some one.

A Necessary Correction.

EDITOR HERALD:—Please reprint the following statement made in last week's paper, with corrections:

TECUMSEH, Feb. 4, 1888

Elsworth Wilson has been in the employ of G. P. Waring of Ridgeway for the past season, and about whom bad reports have been circulated. We are pleased to state that the reports are not true. "I do not dispute the statement made by Mr. Hayden or Mr. Paxson, although the facts were not known to me until this date, and did not know that any feed or bran was purchased at Mr. Hayden's mill."

G. P. WARING.

The latter part of the statement (now placed in quotation marks) I willingly made upon the same paper containing statements by Mr. Hayden and Mr. Paxson. The former part of the statement I never made, verbally, or in writing. A careful reading readily discloses a different authorship and "we" should have given signatures. All the talk about "begging off" and being anxious to "settle" is entirely superfluous. However, no attention would have been given to verbal statements had it not been necessary to have made this correction in print.

Yours etc., G. P. WARING.

ONSTED ODDS.

Did you get that valentine?

Our beautiful sleighing is a thing of the past.

The days are getting somewhat longer.

Chauncy thinks if he knew what lady sent him that valentine he would Coopcher up in his corncrib for a while.

Will Brooks broke a wrist bone while at work around Howard's mill the other day.

Mrs. Aaron Spangle of North Rome is confined to her bed with lung difficulties at present.

The ladies hold their missionary meeting at Jacob Maxwell's on Thursday of this week. It will be an all day affair.

Andrew Johncox was taken with pneumonia a few days ago but at last accounts is up and around.

Ed. Taylor and wife visited relatives near Battle Creek last week.

We heard one young lady say that she got a thousand valentines on the 14th. Where, O where, is the paper rag man?

Mr. Andrew Taylor has had another of his bad spells, which he has been subjected to for the past year or more and is now confined to his bed but is on the gain.

Mrs. Luce, widow of the late Samuel Luce, was buried at Rome Center last Saturday.

Mrs. P. Riley is very low with complicated diseases.

Mr. J. C. Wheeler, editor of the Fremont Scientific Weekly, of Fremont, Ohio, was in town last Saturday.

"Watchman, what of the night?" A bran new boy came to the house of Mr. and Mrs. M. Townsend the other night. Minor said he wanted a girl but it hadn't. Miss a boy and weighs 8 pounds.

The ladies' missionary society of North Rome hold a concert at their church next Sunday evening.

Mrs. Will Pentecost of Franklin was in town last Saturday.

The rain and thaw of last Sunday night turned the streets into roaring rivers.

The election last Monday passed off very quietly. The full number of votes polled was 234 and 91 were against and 143 in favor of local option and 1 for cider only.

The name of the party that has bought the Verrier store is Wallace, instead of Dr. Perkins as we stated last week.

The trunk that came down on Mr. Ketcham's, our station agent's, toe makes that gentleman limp very badly.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Mr. Eli Ostrander has been visiting at Edgar Hubbard's for the past few days.

The ladies' Mission Society will hold their next meeting at Mrs. P. Bouton's instead of Mrs. Wm. Stephenson's, as reported, on Wednesday, the 29th inst. All are cordially invited to attend. A perfect gorge for a dinner. We'll be there.

Isaac Stephenson had the misfortune to fall on the ice one day last week and injured himself quite severely.

Mr. Chas. Matteson of Hastings, an old time resident and blacksmith of this place, was calling on his old acquaintances last week.

The masquerade last Friday evening was well attended, there being 27 numbers sold outside of the club at 50c per number, and 72 spectator tickets at 10c each. It was a grand success but a little misunderstanding between the club and the music made it very unpleasant toward the wee hours. Don't let it occur again boys, it spoils the whole thing.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

The Franklin Union Literary and Lyceum met at A. D. Hunt's Feb. 10.

The prepared program was carried out with some few exceptions; some members being absent other exercises were presented to fill their place. The historical sketch of the society had not been completed, but will be presented at the next meeting.

After intermission the question, "Resolved, That monopoly is a greater evil than intemperance," was taken up. A warm discussion followed. The affirmative side called attention to the great monopolies of the day, the oil trust, the coal trust, in which eight companies had control of nearly all the coal mines in the country, and said just how much coal and no more should be mined yearly, and the consequent cold, suffering and death resulting from this in the homes of the poor; the coffee trust; the four or five months' old sugar trust; the milk trust of Buffalo and others; of the evils that have grown and will still grow out of these, and our great railroad monopolies, with their ability to reach even legislatures and senates by bribery and fraud.

The negative presented the usual temperance arguments warmly and eloquently. The judges returned a unanimous verdict in favor of the affirmative.

The next meeting of the society will be held at A. B. Wisner's Feb. 24. Program for the evening: Inst. music, E. Spaulding, H. McCollum, rec., Luella Taylor; dec., W. Burroughs, rec., Alma Whelan; dialogue, Anna and Rena Allen; select reading, Ida Burroughs; inst. music, S. Simmons, H. Davenport; dec., Hollis Taylor; rec., Nina Allen, dec., Carl Wisner; rec, Miss B. Taylor, dec. Clarence Wisner; dialogue, "Our Debating School"; select reading, S. N. Munger; rec, Ruthie Taylor; dec. Ernest Lamkin; song, Wilford Allen; rec. Edith Spaulding; dec, Hoyt Whelan; inst. music; dialogue, "The Flour of the Family."

DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition in the daring of its inception, had the wildness of a romance, while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it seemed, and was likely to obtain, it was absolutely sublime.—JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1862.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could and dare in America.—COMTE DE PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,

A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

The full speed of our engine was again called into requisition as we neared Dalton, and by the aid of a few ties dropped on the track we were once more a respectable distance ahead. We needed this interval badly, for it was by no means certain that the switches at this point would be properly adjusted for our immediate passage through, and if not, serious difficulty might arise. We might have a battle with Leon in front as well as in the rear, for Dalton was the largest town we had reached since leaving Marietta. Here a road diverged to Cleveland in Tennessee, where it connects with the main line from Richmond to Chattanooga, thus making a large triangle, or, as a railroad man would say, a great Y. At that time no telegraph wires were on this cross road; they were not put up until after. There were also many rumors [illegible] and a probability that our movements be held standing on some of them, and as we had more than to do up our business delay at Kingston and were now much ahead of time, there was a possibility of the road being rightly adjusted for us. It was therefore necessary to stop at the opening of the switch, which was fortunately a little way down from the large passenger depot, which had a shed over all the tracks, and through which we had to pass.

Here the coolness and adroitness of Andrews shone out with pre-eminent luster. It is likely that when we had spoken of fighting a little way back, his mind was occupied rather with the problem of passing Dalton, and of judging by what took place there whether the enemy was warned. The train was stopped, he ran forward, observed that the track was clear, spoke to one or two bystanders, and was back to his post in an exceedingly short time. To one or two who had come up even in these few seconds, he said: "I am running this train through to Corinth, and have no time to spare;" and nodded to Knight, who once more put on the full force of the engine. There was nothing to be gained by care in avoiding alarm any longer, for the distant whistle of the pursuer was heard—and we rushed at the depot, which then stood right across the double track, and passed with fearful speed under its roof. Here Knight got his most terrible sight. The darting into the partial darkness of the shed was bad enough, but just as the far end the main track bends sharply to the left, and the swerve was so sudden, and the speed already so high, that Knight believed he was running on another side track, and that in a moment would come the awful crash. But instead the engine instantly lighted, and he again saw the track straight before him. But so quickly had we passed that we could not certainly determine whether the people at the station had been warned or not.

A mile above Dalton, which was about as soon as the headlong rush of the engine could be checked, we stopped again, just opposite to where Col. Jesse Glenn's regiment of conscripts were encamped in a field. Their position, which was within 200 or 300 yards of us, was probably not seen until we were close to them, and it was better to take the risk of their interference than to lose time by seeking another place for more pressing work. Again the wire was cut, but it was a second too late, for a message had just been flashed through, no doubt even as Scott was bringing it down. The usual obstructions were here piled on the track, and we again essayed to take up a rail, for the Chickamauga bridges were just above, and we wanted time enough to get them on fire, hoping that Fuller would stop long enough at Dalton for the purpose of getting his telegram ready, to allow us to finish the track lifting. No men ever worked with more desperate energy, but all in vain; long before the rail was loose the pursuers were again upon us.

The race recommenced with all its speed and fury. The great tunnel was a short distance ahead—a glorious place for an ambush, where, in the darkness, the guns of the enemy would be of little value. If Andrews was disposed to fight, there would be the place of all others to do it. With the smoke of our train filling the space with our party in ambush along the sides, success would be comparatively sure, if they had twice our number, for of course we could not tell how much of a re-enforcement they might pick up at Dalton. But we kept right on through the tunnel and the village of Tunnel Hill beyond, where we carefully drew down to conceal our number from the curious eyes of any who might be about the station.

At Calhoun Fuller had received a small but very effective re-enforcement—only a boy thirteen years old, but worth a dozen of ordinary men—by means of one of those apparently small circumstances which often influence the course of great events. At Chattanooga the chief officers of the road had become alarmed by receiving no dispatches from Atlanta, or the stations below Kingston. They therefore directed the young assistant operator at Dalton to jump on the passenger train just then leaving that station and go south, sending them back word at each station passed till the cause of the trouble was found. He had only got as far as Calhoun when Andrews passed, and Fuller in a moment after. The latter hardly came to a stop before he saw the operator, and called him and without a word of explanation seized his hand and dragged him off the train. In the rush [illegible] ever, he made all the necessary explanations, and wrote out the following dispatch:

FULLER'S TELEGRAM

To Gen. Leadbetter, commanding at Chattanooga:

My train was captured this a.m. at Big Shanty, evidently by Federal soldiers in disguise. They are making ready for Chattanooga, possibly with the intent of surprising your rear.

If I do not capture them in the meantime, see that they do not pass Chattanooga.—WILLIAM A. FULLER.

This he gave to the operator, saying, "Don't speak to anybody or lose a second till you hand it through to Chattanooga. Jump for the platform when I shout up, for I must push on and keep these Yankees from getting up a raid on Bridgeport, the bridges."

It was terribly quick work. The operator was at home in the office, and time it before Fuller had cleared the shed he was at the desk and the first words were flying over the wires. Whether they had time to send the whole message over before the cut is very doubtful, and not material, for the first two lines would answer every purpose. Had Fuller stopped at this point, and himself went into the office long enough to set the operator at work, it is almost certain we would have had the rail up, and then all the bridges above that point would have been burned; though it is still possible that enough of the message might have been pushed through to secure our arrest in Chattanooga. This was another striking instance of the many narrow margins on which this day hinged.

As Fuller pressed on toward the great tunnel, even his resolute heart almost died within him, while all his party began to blame him for foolhardiness. He feared to plunge into its dark depths. It was still filled with smoke from our engine, and he well knew that if we jumped off at the far end and hurled back our locomotive at him, it meant a horrible death to every one on his train, and he was by no means sure that we would not do it. Mr. Murphy, who had so ably stood by him all the while, here counseled prudence, pointing out all the perils of an ambush. But Fuller realized as apparently no one else did the desperate need of pressing on to save the road; and he had made so many escapes and been so marvelously favored, that a kind of fatalism took hold of him. He determined not to lose a minute, no matter what the danger might be. It may as well be said here that no prudent and common sense kind of pursuit, such as possibly any other man would have employed, could have had the slightest chance of success. But even Fuller quailed as they dived into the cloud of smoke that hung around the entrance of the tunnel, and held his breath for a few seconds (they were still at full speed), till he saw with a sigh of relief a gleam of light ahead and knew that there was no other engine now in the tunnel! On he pressed, for he knew the value of the Chickamauga bridges ahead as well as we did.

CHAPTER XII.

A BURNING CAR.

But, for the wetness of the day all his efforts even yet would have been foiled. We now did what had been in the mind of Andrews, doubtless, for some time past—what he might have tried even at the Oostenaula bridge had not the interval between that and Calhoun been so fearfully short. He ordered us to fire our last car while we were running. It was said easily, but was much harder to do. Everything about the car was as wet as it well could be. The rain fell in torrents, and the wood was drenched in the tender. It was by no small effort and skillful firing that the engine fire could be kept at the heat required for fast running. But desperate fingers tore everything combustible loose from the car, and smashed it into kindling. Some blazing fagots were stolen from the engine and the fire made to burn. The rapid motion with driving rain was an obstacle at first, but as we fed up the blaze and sheltered it as well as possible, it grew rapidly, till soon but one could stay on the car and watch it, and all the others crowded on the tender and locomotive. The steam was now gradually shut off that we might come slowly upon the bridge and be able to leave the burning car just at the right place. We came to a full stop at this first Chickamauga bridge, a large one, and well covered. Inside it was at least drier than on the outside, and we doubted not that with time it would burn well. The only question was: "Will that time be given?" We added almost the last of our oil and nearly the last stick of wood—knowing that a wood station was not far ahead, and if this bridge could be made to burn well, we could have all the time we wanted to get wood and everything else. In fact we put life itself on this last throw, and left ourselves, in case of failure, hopelessly bankrupt. For a considerable time, as it seemed to us, though it must have been measured by seconds rather than minutes, we remained on the other side of the fire watching. Then the inexorable smoke of the foe was seen; the pin connecting the burning car with our engine was pulled out and we slowly moved on. To clearly we saw the ruin of all our hopes. To wait the coming of our foes was vain. They were now near at hand, and we could see their guns, with which they would be able to fight us at long range. The car which, if the day had been a dry, would long before this have fired the bridge with a mass of roaring flame, was burning fiercely when the bridge. To take it to another bridge would be useless, for the drenching rain would have given it little chance to keep away from the shelter of the bridge. Very sadly we left the roll of smoke behind. The pursuers saw the car and knew what it was for, and doubtless their loss would be if it was prepared to burn the bridge, they passed right on the same and shot at a short distance ahead, where it was left to smoke and sputter in the rain on the single track.

LEADING A FREE IN THE BOX CAR

We now go on what proved to be our last run. It has often been asked if this day was one of great fear and terror on the part of us who were engaged in the race. For my own part, I cannot honestly lay claim to any greater fear than I had often felt in ordinary military service. No matter what happened, there was the assurance that we still had one resource—the power to turn around and attack the pursuing foe. From the beginning such a conflict had been present to my mind as a matter of course. Before leaving camp, this had been reckoned a natural consequence of our position. It had been frequently talked of among the men, and we did not regard it with any more dread than an ordinary battle. We had been careful to select large revolvers for use, and not for show, and when we found the enemy gaining upon us, or our leader's plans for their destruction failing, we only felt or said that our time to strike would soon come. We did not have the boastful feeling that we were an overmatch for a large body of southern soldiers, for we all knew how desperately they would fight on their own ground, but of the ordinary citizens gathered up as we proceeded our pursuers were, or even of conscripts, we had no great fear. That we had not our accustomed arms was a serious disadvantage, but we could be compelled by getting into close quarters, and we trusted that our leader, who had shown such wonderful skill in management, would be able to put us within short range of the pursuing train, where we felt sure that we could quickly give a good account of it.

Probably the fact of Andrews having never been in battle, but always engaged in schemes where his own cool daring and sagacious planning counted for everything, and mere force for nothing, made him hesitate to order an attack which would throw aside all these qualities and determine the issue by simple fighting. A time was near when we would firmly have disputed our leader's command if there had been an officer of any authority among us who could have [illegible] substituted for him; but not until Andrews himself had definitely abandoned his authority.

Many times the question has been asked: "Why did you not reverse your engine, and, jumping off, let it drive back at the enemy?" What good could that have done? If their engine and our own had been destroyed, as was very probable, together with a considerable number of lives, we would only have been where we were before we captured the engine at all, except that the whole country would have been aroused, and our disguise thrown off. The second train would have been on the ground in a few minutes and the power of pursuit would have been undiminished. We had no wish to sacrifice our own engine until the last effort possible had been made. To merely destroy had no charm for us, when that destruction could neither promote our escape nor serve a military purpose.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE LAST HOPE.

We crouched down as well as we could in the tender while passing Ringgold, that the enemy might not see our number, and when beyond the town we arose and looked about us. The country was mostly wooded and rough, being much cut up by the branches of the swollen Chickamauga creek. We had no fuel, though we might have taken on a few water soaked fence rails and broken them to burn; but what would have been the use? Every combustible scrap was carefully gathered up and thrown into the engine. Worst symptom of all, a large pair of saddle bags, which we had never seen Andrews without from the time of the midnight conference, together with his cap and some other pieces of clothing that he did not need for immediate use, were flung remorselessly into the furnace. Various papers went along. These were probably documents that he feared would compromise himself or others in case of capture. Such preparations were indeed ominous. But his next command—the last he ever gave to us as a party—was more dreadful still, and for the first time that day there shot a pang of mortal terror to my heart. Not the crash of the engine down an embankment nor the coming of another train of the enemy from the north, shutting us between two fires, would have caused such a sense of despair and hopeless misery to steal over me. This was the order which, as intimated before, our party, had they been properly organized, would not have obeyed.

For our situation was still far from desperate. Aside from the capture of the pursuing train, which would now have been very difficult from the fact that we had neither fuel for rapid running, nor the obstructions on board that were necessary to place us far enough ahead for an ambuscade, there was another plan to which our leader was virtually pledged, which presented every prospect of saving our own lives, though it was now too late to accomplish our original purpose. We were some five miles beyond Ringgold, within a mile of Graysville, or nineteen miles by the longest railway course from Chattanooga. From that city westward to Bridgeport was twenty eight miles further. But the nearest way to Bridgeport was not through Chattanooga, but further south, and by that route it was not distant more than thirty five or forty miles. The direct course was at right angles with the numerous mountain ranges which here ran almost north and south, a route over which cavalry could not be used, and which was known to more than one of our party. Two comrades had [illegible] passes which would have guided us in dark nights or in cloudy weather by day or night. Now to have left our train in a body, and without delaying to seek concealment, to have struck over the streams and mountains at right angles, as rapidly as we could go, would have been our most hopeful course. Long before night of the next day we would have been safe within Mitchel's lines. Why not? How could the enemy have captured us? If they sent cavalry, these would necessarily have made a circuit and have been obliged to follow both lines of the road, and thus could not have come near us while clinging to the valleys and the mountain sides. Even in the woods they [illegible] our trail. If [illegible] for our lives, if [illegible] love [illegible] twenty [illegible] and [illegible] rosters [illegible] and [illegible] part [illegible] country [illegible] officer [illegible] be [illegible] where [illegible] foes. [illegible] have [illegible] guns and ammunition could readily have been gathered on our way.

But all these advantages depended on our keeping together under one head. An army [illegible] and disorganized is lost; and our army was no exception. The fate which Andrews now gave as we [illegible] leader was to jump off, [illegible] in the woods, and each take his own way back to [illegible]

[illegible] tion, no leader, no time for [illegible] the instinct of obedience was strong upon us, but it was a fatal one. It transformed us in [illegible] a formidable body of picked [illegible] ready to fight to death, into a [illegible] of fugitive boys, bewildering country [illegible] helpless in an enemy's [illegible]

[illegible] felt like censuring our leader's order, which every one at the moment believed to be a terrible mistake. He thought that each party would find relief in being [illegible] on his own resources.

It [illegible] be remembered, in explaining [illegible] this mistaken order, that Andrews [illegible] nearly twenty four hours without [illegible] that he had spent nearly two days [illegible] in the most exhausting labor [illegible] mental and physical, that it is [illegible] he had seen his cherished [illegible] on the brink of success, overwhelmed by what seemed the remorseless [illegible] of destiny. To the many failures and sorrows of his past life had been added the crowning misfortune of this defeat. Perhaps under his calm brow he realized this with an intensity of anguish, and felt that the greatest favor he could confer on those he had led within sight of a horrible death, and into the presence of an enraged and triumphant foe, was to separate them at once from his own dark and shadowed destiny. If so, that was the most fearful mistake of all; and as this order was given, we could almost, as we looked southward through the driving rain and the storm clouds, behold already the [illegible] Atlanta scaffolds!

It was plain! The General had served us well even since the morning hour in fearful speed and patient waiting, in exulting raptures and in almost despair. It was hard to abandon her now. She was substantially uninjured. The engineers, Brown and Knight, had taken good care of her, and with wood and oil in abundance, there would have been no difficulty on her part in completing the run to Huntsville. She was still jogging along at the rate of eight or ten miles an hour, and could maintain that pace a little longer. The pursuers had also diminished their speed, so as to just keep us in sight, having apparently no wish to press upon what may have seemed to them like a wounded and dying lion. The command to "jump off and scatter" was repeated with the injunction to be quick about it, as the engineer wished to reverse the engine and drive it back upon the enemy. With such a reason there could be no more hesitation. It is said that some three or four had already got off at the first word of command, but the most of us had hesitated, not on account of the still rapid motion of the train, but in the idle hope that in some way this terrible parting might be averted. Now one after another clambered down on the step and swung off. I was neither among the first nor the last, and jumping unskillfully out from the step, instead of forward, whirled over and over on hands and feet for several revolutions. Rising in a dazed condition, though unhurt, with the exception of a few scratches from the briers with which the place abounded, I looked over the animated scene with the deepest interest. The men who jumped off were, according to instructions, flying in different directions, a few others were just coming off the engine in much the same way that I had done, while the engineers were attempting to carry out their scheme of reversing the engine, which could do no good now, except possibly to delay the inevitable pursuit a little, and give us a better opportunity to organize our plans. The brakes of the tender were put on still more to diminish speed, and the reversal was made. Here is a slight conflict of authority. The pursuers say that the brakes were not loosed again, but our engineers are equally positive that they were. It is not material, for the result is the same. The steam power was so low, that though the engine moved back it was with moderate velocity, and I saw the pursuers reverse also, and coming to a full stop, whistle two or three times as it approached—a seeming whistle of alarm, though there was little in the approach of our poor General to fear, and then they moved slowly before it for a short distance till the two were in contact, when the weaker stopped and the steam was shut off. The great railroad chase was over.

CHAPTER XIV.

HUNTED IN THE WOODS BY DOGS AND MEN.

Dispersed in the woods with no knowledge of the country, and no guide toward our own lines, with the alarm spreading in every direction, and the fears of the people for us, with fierce resentment for the outrage, the desperate character of our raid, the prospect of escape for days to a number was slight indeed. The south was also highly populated by a class [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] who would [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FARMERS IN COUNCIL

The Institute Held Last Week at Tecumseh.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT EDWIN WILLITS OF THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Interesting Papers by Professors Cook, Georgeson, Johnson, and McEwan.

THE FARMERS' CLUBS OF NORTHERN LENAWEE LEND A HELPING HAND.

Several Interesting Essays by Home Talent. Splendid Music by Ridge and Franklin Glee Clubs. Detailed Report of Proceedings.

The Farmers' Institute of Northern Lenawee County have become an institution of the trade and interest to the farming community. A [illegible] they are entirely independent of [illegible] other organizations, that they are simply a social gathering and fraternal [illegible] together in the most friendly manner. Last December the writer, with a [illegible] of gentlemen, [illegible] have arranged for a Farmers' Institute under auspices of the Agricultural College. Correspondence was had with Secretary Reynolds of the State Board of Agriculture and a letter from him was read at the institute. The program was prepared, with the assistance of the Agricultural College authorities, and was [illegible] Professors Cook, Georgeson, Johnson and McEwan, of the College, and other home talent. The [illegible] of the institute was [illegible] and the program was carried out in full.

The institute was called to order by President Tuttle, and after the usual [illegible] Mr. Reynolds, of the State Board, was called upon to address the institute. He said he was not prepared to address a farmers' institute, but would say a few words. He was pleased to see so many farmers present, and was glad to see the farmers taking an active part in the work of the institute. He was pleased with the program prepared, and was sure it would be productive of much good. He was pleased to see so many farmers' institutes in the State

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Charley Whittier has taken a position in the Herald office.

C. A. Blackmar of Cambridge took in the Institute last Friday.

It was rather a cold day last Monday for the two Adrian breweries.

We notice a great display of wall paper at Wright's. See their new ad.

It was a very quiet election day last Monday and a light vote was polled.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson of Adrian were the guests of Mrs. James Ingersol over Sunday.

The New York Observer Calender is one of the finest of the year. Ten cents will buy a copy.

E. C. Coryell left home last Monday on the excursion to Knoxville, Tenn. He will be gone two or three weeks.

The Alger Club of Detroit starts off in fine shape. Auxiliary Clubs will be organized throughout the state.

Abe Hanford of Pratt Kansas is spending a few days among his old acquaintances in and about Tecumseh.

Mrs. W. A. Whitney of Hudson is in town a few days to assist in the care of Miss Myrtelle Whitney, who is ill with a fever.

The appointment of Dr. H. F. Lyster of Detroit to fill Dr. Palmer's vacant chair in the medical department of the University is an excellent selection.

C. E. Potter, son of Rev. T. G. Potter spent last Sunday at his father's. He is now connected with the Evening News of Kansas City, and is taking a week's respite among friends in Michigan.

L. B. Stevens took the notes and wrote up the report of the Farmer's Institute which appears in this week's issue. We think our farmer patrons will congratulate him on having done an excellent job.

A letter from M. A. Clark of Lugonia California, brings sad news of the death of their only, daughter little Florence, Feb 9th. of scarlet fever. Mr. Clark was from Addison Michigan had many acquaintances about Tecumseh.

The dance at the Armory last Tuesday evening under the auspices of Co. C. proved to be a very pleasant party indeed and was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season thus far. The attendance was good and the music could'nt be bettered.

The Detroit Music Co, have arranged with M. P. Brown to represent them in this locality. Parties desiring anything in the line of a fine Piano or organ or musical merchandise will do well to call and get their prices at Mr. Brown's well known place of business.

At the annual meeting of the Tecumseh and Macon Telegraph Co. Monday Feb. 13, 1888, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President—J. T. Boyce.
Vice Pres.—J. W. Benedict.
Secretary—S. W. Boyce.

E. H. Russell was elected member of board in the place of M. F. Marks.

Wednesday, Feb. 15th, the home of Uncle Sol. Mangus, just northwest of town was the scene of a very pleasant dancing party, given by Henry Shurts, and Charlie. Late in the eve it was feared that thieves had invaded the premises. But with the aid of a lantern and help the missing robe was found. But our advice to our young friend Chuck Burger is to have his robe checked if he goes to another dance in the future.

The Kansas City Times has printed a special edition which describes at length the Indian Territory, its people, the location of the various tribes, where the public lands are, the history of the past movements toward opening the Territory to settlement, and what is being done this year. The paper is accompanied by an excellent map of the Territory. A copy will be sent to any address on receipt of a two cent stamp by addressing The Times, Kansas City, Mo.

The secrets of publishing houses are often very interesting and it is a great pity that they cannot be told. Cassell & Company, have on their list for early publications a little work called "A Pocket Dictionary of Etiquette," which has been prepared for them by a lady well known in New York's best society, the mention of whose name would be a great help to the book but she prefers that it should sell upon its merits, consequently the publishers are bound to respect her wishes. There would be a flutter along Fifth avenue if the author's name went with the book. It is not a compilation but is the result of the writer's experience as a woman of Society, who has been accustomed to its best usages from childhood. No one need be ashamed to consult such a book as this for it will set him right on many points where he may be doubtful and who but has his doubts on some points of etiquette?

It was a cold dry day last Monday.

Miss Lizzie Beamish spent last Sunday at home.

Miss Cora Jones, returned from her Portland visit Saturday.

Representative M. T. Cole of Palmyra attended the Farmers Institute last week.

Mrs. Sam. Braman and Miss Hattie Fellows of Manchester were in the village Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Steph Scofield of Henderson Mich, are visiting friends in Tecumseh and vicinity.

Mrs C. Cole returned home last Saturday in rather poor health, after spending most of the winter abroad.

Wm R. Sanborn of the Chicago Inter-Ocean was in town Monday on business connected with his paper.

Wm. C. Heck is rapidly recovering from his injuries. He sits up most of the time but has not yet ventured out doors.

Most of our usual miscellaneous matter is omitted this week to make room for the report of the Farmers Institute.

Lew. Eldridge has been appointed route agent on the Adrian and Trenton line. He is a son of Col N. B. Eldridge.

A subscription paper is in circulation to help the band pay their necessary expenses. Step up and put your name down for a sum.

W. W. Gage and family, Mrs. B. Hale and family and Charles H. Barry started yesterday for California, where they intend to make their future home.

John B. Garlinghouse, who has been afflicted with a cancer on the face for some time has had it removed. The operation was performed successfully and he is rapidly improving.

Washington's Birth Day was hardly observable here yesterday. The banks were closed and the post office a portion of the day. The rest of the town wagged along about as usual.

The Union Temperance meeting at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening was well attended. Short speeches were made by Dr. Howell, Dr. Frost, D. D. Meeker, Clem Bramble and Oscar Heck, all of which were well received.

The Adrian Times published a brief report of our Institute last week, but it inadvertently omits the resolution that was passed commending the temperance course of the HERALD, and recommending it to the good will of the farming community.

The Detroit chicken show closed last Saturday. Among the prize winners we find the names of Clark and Lowry of Tecumseh and Keyes and Kishpaugh of Clinton. James Clark represented the interests of the former firm with eight Minorca chicks and brought home two 1-st premiums, one 2d, and two 3d.

The vote polled in Tecumseh last Monday was a light one, only 568 votes being cast, against 699 last year. The vote stood as follows.

Dry	396
Wet	172
Dry maj	224

Last year the majority in favor of prohibition was 223.

The annual Catalogue of Vaughan's seed store, for 1888, is just at hand, and we must say in behalf of Western enterprise that as a WORK OF ART it excels anything in this line we have ever seen, both in its exceedingly beautiful gold and colored cover and in its readable print and handsome wood engravings. It should be in the hands of every one who plants a garden, and can be had by sending five stamps to J. C. VAUGHAN, 88 State Street, Chicago.

The Presbyterian Churches of the United States are celebrating this as a Centennial year. A 100 years ago the first General Assembly of this denomination was formed and the Rev Jno. Witherspoon D. D. one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence was selected to preach the opening Sermon. Next Sunday will be extensively observed as the Centennial day and appropriate discourses will be delivered at the Presbyterian Church here by the pastor Rev Wm H. Babbitt, both morning and evening.

THE LOCAL OPTION VOTE.

The vote polled last Monday throughout the County was a very light one,—about 25 per cent less than one year ago,—and resulted in a "dry" majority of 415 if the figures shall be verified by the official canvas. These figures will be found to be substantially correct. The following table gives the wet and dry majorities and also the majorities on the prohibition amendment last spring:

Names of Towns.	1887 Pro. Yes.	1887 Pro. No.	1888 Dry.	1888 Wet.
City:
First ward		247		254
Second ward		303		335
Third ward		112		107
Fourth ward		4		35
Adrian	80			71
Blissfield		17		[illegible]
Cambridge	70		51
Clinton	29		56
Deerfield		91		65
Dover	20		86
Fairfield	44			24
Franklin	151		105
Hudson	161		308
Macon	188		144
Madison		28		5
Medina	126		124
Ogden	140		50
Palmyra	81			35
Raisin	251		199

Total	2084	1101	1740	1325
Majority	983		415

Different people will have different theories in regard to the reduction of the prohibition majority, but we think it is easily explained. The two Adrian breweries have running accounts with nearly every retail saloon in this County. They perfected an organization in most of the voting precincts of the County, raised a liberal fund and got out every vote on the wet side that could possibly be influenced in that direction. On the other hand, the friends of local option were over-confident. A few meetings were held, but the campaign was allowed to run itself practically. In towns like Hudson and Tecumseh, where efficient committees were appointed and some work done, the dry majorities are held up to the mark. In most of the other towns the prohibition majorities of last spring have been reduced. The "dry" side has won, that is true, but the moral effect of the victory is very slight, compared to what it would have been had it been backed by a majority of 1500 or 2000. Bad roads and the cider agitation may have had something to do with the reduced vote, but not much, in our opinion. The explanation of the result is found chiefly in the fact that the wet side worked, and the dry side didn't.

AN EXPLANATION.

GRATVILLE, Feb 20th, '88.

EDITOR HERALD—I am in receipt of a copy of the infamous lie published in the Adrian Times," in regard to Mr. McConnell and myself. I will state that the article is without any foundation whatever; which can be vouched for by Mr. Drayer the post master at Albion. Mr. Frank Low, druggist, or any reliable citizen in that place or this. The letter in question was signed, "James Baker." There is no such person living in Albion. Mr. McConnell with whom I have been to work for nearly a year and a half, is an old man and a perfect gentleman in every sense of the word. So you see that I am not so near dead after all, and it will be the Editor of the Times" who will need the Undertakers if he publishes any more libelous letters about me. I expect to visit old Tecumseh in the near future. Yours,

WM. MCCOWAN JR.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

We are not unhappy to see the pleasant face of Charles Knowlton again at his post in the foundry. Although Charley has grown old and changed somewhat in looks he is "the same old sixpence."

A. M. Sleeper and Wan Holdridge made a trip to Toledo last week with a lot of cattle and hogs. Mac reports a fair market and Wan reports "bushels of fun."

A. E. Gordon Sundayed with his parents in this village. That's right, Alex, come often; we are always glad to see you in our midst.

Dr. Nelson, of Ridgeway, was called to Raisin Center as counsel with Dr. Begel last Monday, in the case of Mrs. A. W. Chase. All the Dr. had to say was that Dr. B. was doing O. K. and had no complaint to make.

We understand that Raisin voted 200 dry and 79 wet. That shows we are not all drunkards.

An impromptu "young people's meeting" was held at the residence of H. H. Osgood last Saturday evening.

Stan. Doty finished school for this winter last Friday. Stan thinks he will be able to keep his books this summer, and with another winter's schooling can keep anyone's books.

C. A. Satterthwaite spent the most of last week in Toledo helping invoice "extras" for the St. Paul Harvester Company.

Mat Root is at home this week on his six days respite.

Business Enterprises of Northern Lenawee.

THE TECUMSEH OPERA HOUSE.

Among the business enterprises which have added to the material interests of Tecumseh during the past decade, the Tecumseh Opera House stands with the foremost. The enterprise had its inception on the 18th. day of February 1878, on which day a subscription paper was started to raise $5,000 to build a public hall in Tecumseh. Within two weeks the entire sum was pledged. On the 12th. of March articles of Association were adopted and in accordance therewith the following permanent officers were chosen.

Chairman—P. R. Adams.
Secretary—S. H. Merritt.
Treasurer—John J. Adam.
Managers—N. M. Sutton and H. Weller.

The articles of Association provided for a capital stock of $10,000, one half of which had already been subscribed. During the next month several meetings were held, the chief topics of discussion being the selection of a site and adopting plans for a building.

The Sanford site was finally purchased, and the plans adopted from which the present Opera House was erected. The orignal stock holders numbered 28, and some gave donations outright for the Sanford site. During the summer a majority of the small holders sold out their stock, and when the building was opened in December 1878, the following persons held the entire stock.

N. M. Sutton	$3,600.
Jno J. Adam	2,200.
P. R. Adams	1,000.
E. C. Coryell	1,000.
H. Weller	200.
S. H. Merritt	100.
S. C. Stacy	100.
R. B. House	100.
A. J. Palmer	100.
Thos Adamson	50.

Contracts for the work were let in April the work being pushed during the summer as rapidly as possible. Most of the labor was performed by Tecumseh mechanics, the frescoing was done by an Ypsilanti firm and gas fittings were put in by a Detroit firm.

The building is one of the most commodious and convenient public halls in this section of the State It is 48 by 100 ft. in size. It has ample stage room and large dressing rooms underneath the stage. The audience room is furnished with 700 chairs and the galleries will seat 300 more. By the use of extra chairs an audience of 1,200 can be accommodated. The stage fixtures and scenery are first class in every respect. The scenery was painted by L. F. Wheeler, a Tecumseh artist and would do credit to a theater in a large city. Besides the drop curtain, which is a very artistic piece of work, there are ten full scenes and several half scenes.

The opening took place on the 26th day of December 1878, with Henry Watkins Combination and Miss Ada Gray, the troupe playing for three successive nights.

After the first year, Mr. N. M. Sutton became one of the officers and he finally bought out all the other holders. For the last five years he has been the proprietor and sole manager of the enterprise it has been wisely managed under his charge. Our artist has succeeded in making a very faithful representation of the building as all can testify who have ever seen it. It is not only an architectural ornament to Chicago street but affords ample accommodations for such public gatherings as we usually have.

FRANKLIN AND CAMBRIDGE FARMERS CLUB.

The Franklin and Cambridge Farmers' Club met at the residence of D. W. Love on Friday evening, the 10th inst., as a sort of farewell meeting before that gentleman leaves for the poor farm. Quite a large number of people were present and $17.30 was taken.

The meeting was called to order by President Love, then the reading of the minutes of last meeting by secretary Crittenden.

A motion was then made and carried that Frank Bradley act as treasurer pro tempore, also a motion to reorganize at next meeting was carried.

The literary programme was then taken up, as follows: Inst. music, F. Grey; select reading, Flota Love; song by Bertie Belding, entitled "The Old Bell"; recitation, John Osborn; essay by Miss Lena Alexander, "Choice of an Occupation"; inst. music, Frank Grey; chip-basket by Verne Roberts; inst. music, Leon Love, F. Grey and Flota Love.

Then came recess, during which oysters and cake were served.

The meeting again being called to order, the chairman of the committee on program for next meeting reported the question for discussion, namely, "What kind of fence is most durable."

A motion was then made and carried to adjourn for four weeks, to meet at the residence of Rev. Putnam.

DR. SCHENCK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it as one of the greatest medicines of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the diseased, equalize the circulation of the blood, by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices, 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 26th.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER.—MATT. XIX. 16-26.

NOTES.—"One came." According to young man. Matthew tells the story somewhat differently. Minor details may differ, but the spiritual teaching is the same. "Master." In the Revised Version the good is left out. "Why asketh thou me concerning that which is good?"—We must grant the priority of this narrative to Mark. The emphasis is as much on which is good as on me. If you want the good go to God. "Which?" He wanted a peculiar, difficult commandment especially fitted for his case. It was a particular kind he was after. Christ now refers him to several in the second table of the dialogue and then tests him respecting the love of our neighbor (Rom. xiii. 9).—"What lack I yet?"—He did not mean to lie. He had observed the letter, not the spirit, of the law. Brought up to outward observances he looked to details, not to the moral essence within.—"If thou wouldest be perfect."—Absolute sinlessness and holiness is not meant; but that relative perfection the young man was striving to attain. All finite moral creatures can arrive to this.—"Sell that thou hast." Not the only condition to salvation. It was the probing, test command for this young man. But besides this there were many other things to be done.—"And again I say unto you."—This wonderful idea, this new theology, was so new to them all that it required another stroke to impress it firmly upon their minds. It was not pleasant ethics to all the by-standers. They would be apt to evade it. It requires a graphic picture to fix it firmly in their hearts.—"It is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye."—To understand the word in the text, not in the sense of camel, but of cable, is evasively ridiculous. And to argue that this needle refers to some small arched side-gate is also to quibble about the meaning. It was a bold hyperbolical expression, common in the schools, to express something very difficult.—"Who then can be saved?"—Poor as well as rich have the love for money. The most prominent trait among the Arabs to-day is their inordinate longing to obtain money.

INSTRUCTION. The ruler's question, "What good thing shall I do?" is superfluous. For only one is good, God. Therefore it follows logically that the only absolute ideal of moral life is to do God's will.

Yet each one has a right to ask this question in regard to the unfolding of some special function of soul or body that has been undeveloped. Christ is always ready to answer each one according to his need. "Give more to missions or the poor around you." "Keep your temper," or, "Be patient with your sick."

The young man was courageous. He meant to have it out with Christ. Yet he showed a docile spirit. His complacency oozes away when the teacher confronts him with his one insidious weakness.

Most young men are apt to have an upper stratum of self sufficiency and perhaps self-righteousness. This fades into thin air when Christ's command searches the soul.

Outward expressions of holiness are good in themselves; but they need to spring, to be perfect, from an inner consecration. Outward royalty blended with inward royalty makes a man every inch a king.

Many may seem good and worthy of trust and get the high honor of being called sons of God. But the number of apparently good people that their master the Devil openly claims is startling.

Good works are in themselves not enough for salvation. This young man had made a grand effort in his way to do what was right, and yet did not feel sure of eternal life.

No man who has a deep consecrated purpose in his heart to serve God at any cost, and who goes at it with all his energy, need worry himself about eternal life. It is eternal life to do the Father's will.

All cannot sell otherwise who would there be to buy? So some must give.

The giving of money, etc., to the poor is a very empty act if it be not accompanied with the giver's self.

It is hard to keep a good conscience and be rich at the same time. To be wealthy on a high spiritual plain is real heroism.

The poor are tempted by riches as much as the rich and perhaps more. All may not roll in wealth; but the curse is that all may wallow in love for it.

God's daily acts are man's absolute impossibilities.

The Population of Tecumseh.

Is about 2,800 and we would say at least one half are troubled with some a section of the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all not to neglect the opportunity to call on us and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free. Respectfully. Baker & Hall, Druggists.

Now is the time to pay up.

A LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., Jan. 30, 88.

EDITOR OF HERALD: DEAR SIR.—I have read the letter published in your issue of Jan. 12th, in regard to the climate and people of San Diego. [illegible] ter might be more properly addressed "an open letter" to G. P. Waring. In which we will say to him when he is a private letter from a friend published, we think he should carefully examine the same to see that he does not do the writer as well as others mentioned an injury that he cannot repair.

In this case, the injury done extends farther and maligns any of our friends here than may be implied by [illegible] in said letter, and was not placed there by the writer, nor did it represent any person living at this place, as one might suppose. As to the first statement in the letter, we will say, if "men talk for their own interest here" so they do all over the country. And that part of the letter which says they do not talk in the interest of their brother, is an error, for all who have been advised to invest here have made money, and many have made fortunes. In regard to the cold nights and the dust, we will say, that the nights are only noticeable to those becoming acclimated, as the temperature rarely falls lower than 45° during the coldest season of the year, and even now the streets and parks are filled with tender plants in blossom. As regards the dust, we will say we have been here since Thanksgiving day, and we have only had two dusty days, and those were no worse than what we have seen in Michigan.

The statement that it is as hot here from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. as it is in Michigan in the month of June, is false. The published report of the U. S. signal office stationed here, shows that for a period of ten years there were only one hundred and twenty days in which the thermometer marked a higher temperature than eighty degrees. And during the same period of ten years the thermometer kept continuously above 40°, excepting 93 days.

The statement that "most that can be raised here is real estate," is also false. Everywhere in this country where time has been taken to develop fruit orchards, it is found that they grow with a luxuriance that insures success. The list of fruits grown is too large to mention, but includes orange, lemon, lime, peach, apricot, nectarine, apple, pear, quince, cherry, plum, prunes, grape, and all small fruits. The grains grow successfully, and the Alfalfa hay grows so vigorously that five mammoth crops can be cut from one field in a year.

In regard to the real estate men, we will say we have not lost confidence in human nature so much as to say we would not believe any of them under oath. The real estate men, as a class, are men of energy and business capacity. They have been the leaders in building the street railways, the motor roads, electric roads, and the largest blocks and buildings that beautify our streets. They were interested in every movement that helped to build up the city. We would believe some of the real estate men, for some of them are our personal friends, and they have done more for us boys from Michigan, then we could ever expect from many of our friends. Among the firms that stand the highest here for solid financial worth and sterling ability and high social standing of its members, is Allen & McDonald. Mr. Allen has been very fortunate in his investments here, and shown great foresight in selecting valuable property. His partner, Judge McDonald, is a man of great wealth and ability, while the Judge and his wife have the honor to be the acknowledged leaders in the first society of the place.

To refute the last insinuation of the writer in regard to the "gnats and thousand creeping things" we will say they only exist in the fertile imagination of the writer who was feeling all out of sorts, while his system was becoming used to this climate. It is a clear case of magnifying a gnat to the size of a mountain. This place is remarkably free from all annoying insects, and the mosquito is not know, here.

Yours Truly,
FRED MORTIMER BROWN.

The Coming Comet.

It is fancied by a grateful patron that the next comet will appear in the form of a huge bottle, having "Golden Medical Discovery" inscribed upon it in bold characters. Whether this conceit and high compliment will be verified, remains to be seen, but Dr. Pierce will continue to send forth that wonderful vegetable compound, and potent eradicator of disease. It has no equal in medicinal and health-giving properties, for imparting vigor and tone to the liver and kidneys, in purifying the blood, and through it cleansing and renewing the whole system. For scrofulous humors, and consumption, or lung scrofula, in its early stages, it is a positive specific. Druggists.

CLARA, how is the baby? Oh, he is as chirp as a lark. That Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam is a great remedy. Three doses relieved his suffering, and he was ready for play.

How they Meet and Part.

[illegible] the conversation of two fashionable ladies during a morning call—viz: "How do you do, dear?" "Pretty well, thank you." They kiss. "How have you been this age?" "Pretty well. How have you been?" "Very well, thank you." "Pleasant to-day?" [illegible] day." "All your family quite well?" "Quite well, thanks. How is yours?" "Oh, very well, thank you." "Have you seen Mary B. lately?" "No, but I have seen Susan C." "You don't say so! Is she quite well?" "Yes, very well, I believe." (Rising.) "Must you go?" "Yes, indeed; I have seven calls to make." "Do call again soon." "Thank you; but you don't come near me quite as you ought." "Oh, you should say so, dear, I'm sure I'm very good." "Good-bye." "Good-bye, dear."—Exchange.

"Grace Forest" gives the following pat reply to the above:

"Yes; and after writing that the gentleman discovered the source under his nicely laid mortgage had been so severe he went out to 'brace up'. Just as he reached his destination met a friend from outof town, when the following conversation was overheard and taken down by the writer, as an example for women, of men's 'wit and wisdom.' 'Hello! old fellow, how are you?' They shake. 'First rate, how are you?' 'Tip-top!' 'When did'e get in?' 'Just now.' 'Have something?' (significantly.) 'Well, yes, don't care if do.' They step into a saloon, after cautiously looking around to make sure no outsiders are about, to see they are breaking their pledge—pause—they emerge, innocently wiping their mouths, before putting into them their lighted cigars, and boss, 'primed,' resume: 'How's yer folks?' 'All well, how's yours?' 'All flourishing now, youngest boy had diphtheria, but all right now.' 'Crops good up your way?' 'Well, yes, pretty fair.' 'How do politics look?' 'Bad—very bad—all democrats up our way, big democratic majority.' (Takes out his watch.) 'Thunder! ten minutes to 12. I must be off—got to see a man at 12.' 'Can't you come up to the house and take dinner?' 'No, guess not to-day—got several business engagements. Good-bye.' 'Good-bye.' They, again, wring hands, and then rush away from each other as if fearing they might have to land another treat.

Interesting Facts.

Changes in the brain and nerves are the most common cause of disease. Their influence on the body is wonderful. Shame flushes the palest and fear blanches the rosiest cheek an whitens the blackest hair in a night. Worry causes dyspepsia and hastens old age. Terror or excitement often causes instant death, etc. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine removes the effects of worry, overwork, alcoholic excess, morphine habit, nervousness, dyspepsia, sleeplessness, headache, neuralgia and nervous prostration. Sold by Baker & Hall.

A Possible Relic of De Soto.

The Tallahassee (Fla.) Floridian says: A few years ago, about two miles east of Tallahassee, was found a prodigious spur of unique and curious workmanship, the like of which has not been seen in modern times. The burr was one and a half inches in diameter, and the bar proportionately heavy. On either side of the rowel dangled small pendant bells, that gave forth a tinkling sound in response to each step of the wearer—doubtless some steel-clad and booted warrior of the long ago. Not many days since, while parties were plowing near the identical spot, a solid and shapeless mass was turned up, which, upon close examination, proved to be an iron stirrup of ancient pattern, as heavy and as massive as the spur spoken of first, and firmly imbedded in a thick coating of clay and rust. When this was removed, the stirrup was found to be in a remarkable good state of preservation. The relics represent two Ethiopian figures standing upon the foot-rest, leaning forward facing each other, while they support with outstretched arms what forms the top of the stirrup or that part connected with the leather. So unlike are both these relics to anything known to the generations of this day and time, and both being found so near the same place, it is not unreasonable to ascribe them to the same era and individual. Nor is the supposition at all improbable that one of the knightly followers of De Soto, lured on through the then unknown region and wilderness, like that dauntless son of Spain, by a thirst for the yellow heaps of gleaming gold that loomed up ahead of them in vain visions and heated fancies, here fell a victim to the tomahawk and scalping knife of the wronged and revengeful red man, and some one of the "Tigerees Tribe," of which "Tiger Tail" claimed to be a descendant, boasted, as he displayed at his belt a yet bloody scalp, that he had "killed a pale-face."

A General Tie-up

of all the means of public conveyance in a large city, even for a few hours, during a strike of the employes, means a general paralyzing of trade and industry for the time being, and is attended with an enormous aggregate loss to the community. How much more serious to the individual is the general tie-up of his system, known as constipation, and due to the strike of the most important organs for more prudent treatment and better care. If too long neglected, a torpid or sluggish liver will produce serious forms of kidney and liver diseases, malarial trouble and chronic dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are a preventive and cure of these disorders. They are prompt, sure and effective, pleasant to take, and positively harmless.

It is said by a well known Illinois educator that "The average western farmer toils hard early and late, often depriving himself of needed rest and sleep—for what? To raise corn. For what? To feed hogs. For what? To get money with which to buy more land. For what? To raise more corn. For what? To feed more hogs. For what? To buy more land. And what does he want with more land? Why he wishes to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—to buy more land—to raise more corn—to feed more hogs—and in this circle he moves until the Almighty stops his hoggish proceedings."

The highest elements of character, of power and dignity lie within reach of the lowest and the poorest.

Instead of being content to live so as to escape blame, the Christian is required to live so as to prove a means of blessing.

The government of a nation demands a certain harmony like music, and certain proportions like architecture.

and Miss Alexander and the talk on Noxious Insects was deferred until the afternoon session, and the meeting adjourned.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON

As soon as the meeting was called to order Prof. A. J. Cook began his talk on Noxious Insects. In the rear of the stage were hung pictures of bugs, beetles, moths and other pests of the farmer.

The Professor explained their peculiarities and habits and recommended remedies for their extermination. Sulphur and kerosene, it was stated, will soon banish bedbugs from the poultry yard. Rub it along the roosts and when they go to roost put it under their wings. The little mite called flower mite is a great pest to the house wife. It colors the foliage with a white. Syringe the plants with sulphur and ammonia and they will be all right. When we were small we used to pull flies. They were a great nuisance. Infested stock will soon perish. In four or five weeks they will be free from any of them. They have the same law. A year ago last March I had taken the premium at the state fair for the best and heaviest lot of potatoes. The day after the fair I had my potatoes weighed and found they had shrunk far more than the premium amounted to. He had taken the premium with other potatoes. The Professor showed how the potato bug was destroyed by the use of Paris green. The potato bug was not known east of the Rocky Mountains until 1859. It then made its appearance in Nebraska. It has since spread over the entire country. The speaker advised the use of Paris green in the form of a powder, as it is more easily applied than when mixed with water. The Professor also showed how the cabbage worm could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The cabbage worm is the product of a butterfly. The butterfly lays its eggs on the cabbage leaf. The worm hatches out and eats the cabbage. The speaker advised the use of Paris green to destroy the worm. The Professor also showed how the cucumber beetle could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the tent caterpillar could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the canker worm could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the codling moth could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the curculio could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the cutworm could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the grub could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. The speaker also showed how the wireworm could be destroyed by the use of Paris green. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

John F. Nestell, Clarence Case, Byron Hill and Matt D. Blosser of Manchester attended the meeting of Clinton Chapter Tuesday eve.

John T. Clark came over from Grosse Pointe Saturday, returning Monday afternoon.

Peter McMann has purchased the property lately occupied by Frank Stackpole and moved a few days ago.

John Nelson Williams, the Evangelist, has been visiting here the past week.

Miss Kittie Ebbitt returned Monday from a week's visit at Hudson.

Chas. Marion now occupies the Sherlock house. Sunday his two-year-old boy fell downstairs and broke his arm.

W. S. Kimball is spending the week in Chicago on business for the Woolen Co.

We understand that Eli McConnell is home sick with the measles.

Chas. Parker passed Sunday with his people here.

C. J. Beekes closed a very successful term of school in the Lindsley district last Friday.

Mrs. Newman of Adrian is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. C. Brown.

Mensing & Rogers' auction Tuesday called out a large crowd and proved very satisfactory.

Keyes & Kishpaugh shipped a fine S. S. Hamburg cockerel to a party at Utica, Mich. the last of the week and a mottled Java one to a breeeder in Marion Co., Ohio, Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. Ella Rose and little Marjory left Saturday for a week's visit with friends in Detroit.

David Woodward and wife returned the last of the week from their long eastern visit.

Mrs. Frank Silvers of Tecumseh was visiting friends here last Friday.

Miss Ada Crump of Monroe has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Geo. Conger.

George Belding took Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stackpole, who are quite old and feeble, to the County farm the last of the week.

D. H. Silvers and family left Saturday last for their home in Chicago. While we dislike to lose them yet we wish them success in their new home and trust that their highest expectations may be realized.

Robert Willwood and sister Sarah were called to Detroit Saturday by the sudden illness of their sister Anna. She so far recovered as to be able to return with them Tuesday.

Alonzo Clark returned home from the Sanitarium at Battle Creek Monday last feeling quite badly.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Williams left Monday for Vermontville to attend the semi-centennial anniversary of the Congregational society there. Mr. Williams is to deliver the sermon.

John Fabrique of Brooklyn spent part of Monday and Tuesday with his parents here.

Aaron Bruce and Marian arrived in town Monday afternoon from East Jordan, Mich. They are to again occupy their farm west of town. It will seem good to have them with us once more.

Geo. Freese and Ben Ellis have both returned from their wanderings.

Mrs. Sutfin and daughter Myra now occupy the Gates house near the depot.

Lou. Marshall, who recently sold his farm, is moving into Mrs. VanDemark's house on Washington St.

Frank Rowland, son of Albert Rowland, is visiting relatives here.

Wm. Welch is soon to occupy the property he recently purchased of Andrew McFaul.

We learn that Jonas K. Waldron, who has an auction March 8th, is to move into his house in this village, formerly owned by Geo. Haggart. He will be welcomed by all.

Mrs. David Monroe was given a joyful surprise last Friday by her father coming in upon her unexpectedly. She enjoyed visiting with him until Tuesday, when he returned to his home near Port Huron.

Port Smith's fine mare, Maggie, was taken very sick Tuesday afternoon with inflammation on the lungs. Dr. Waldron, the veterinary surgeon, was called promptly and by skilful treatment she was soon o sick and is now doing very nicely.

Chas. Howe, who is engaged in drawing straw for the paper mill in Tecumseh, lost one of his horses at Draper's barn Wednesday forenoon with inflammation of the bowels. I was sick but a few hours.

ONSTED ODDS.

Cold weather again.

This weather is very hard on sown wheat.

Fred and Pete Morton have tapped their sugar bush and have already made a few quarts of syrup and others have also tapped their bushes.

Mrs. A. J. Woodard has had trouble with her lungs which confined her to her bed for a while.

Roads are rather rough around here now, being in a frozen state.

Mr. Norman Taylor was 71 on the 23rd inst. but did not think much about it until his children and grandchildren came in upon him unannounced and attacked him vigorously, but he defended himself with the vigor of youth and with the help of the companion of his joys defended his castle and soon subdued the assailants and order was restored. After passing the day in social chat and merrymaking and partaking of a beautiful repast that came in baskets and pails the children took their departure, leaving with their respected parents the love and best respects of both children and grandchildren.

The concert at the North Rome church passed off very pleasantly, but the attendance was not very large as the evening was cold and the roads very rough, but the pieces were all well rendered.

A lady from Raisin Valley delivered two able sermons here on Sunday last, both day and evening, and also intends to address an audience on Tuesday afternoon and evening at the church, and if the peoples wish will continue to speak at different times during the remainder of the week.

A. Townsend and M. O. Aldrich visited Rollin village last Friday and Saturday on business.

F. I. Kinney is away on a trip to Tennessee at present.

The pay car of the C. J. & M. Railway Co. called at this station a few days ago and made happy the hearts of those that had property destroyed last fall by fire caused by sparks from the locomotive. A little over $600 were handed out and then the car went on its way rejoicing.

Although it is nearly four weeks old Mr. Geo. Onsted comes out and says that we have got a baby boy and don't you forget it.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Isaac Stephenson is hardly expected to recover from his injuries received from a fall of a couple of weeks ago. He sustained internal injuries.

The Old Folks' concert did not come off last Tuesday, as first reported, but it will be next Tuesday evening, Mar. 6th.

Irving Russ was shaking hands with his many friends here last Sunday.

We understand that George Mason has been home for the past two weeks but we haven't had the pleasure of meeting him yet. Who has?

The Springville Club Dance Association has engaged Teachout and Bonney's band to furnish music hereafter.

Jas. White will move into one of John Stafford's houses this spring and the place made vacant by so doing will be occupied by Gustave Shrader of Adrian township.

Our picket mill was obliged to close on Monday on account of the severity of the weather.

Mr. Sunderlin Lewis and his newly wedded wife were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bennett last Friday.

Simon Shultis has a colt very sick with inflammation on the lungs.

Mrs. W. H. Smith had a very bad spell on Sunday last but is greatly improved at this writing.

C. D. Smith expects to work with Beck & Voight of Adrian this summer and will go to keeping house at the County seat in a short time.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Stephen Gay, of North Morenci, has taken up his abode with A. M. Sleeper and he bids fair to be a good clerk.

Protracted meetings are being held in the new church under the management of Rev. P. E. Vincent. Some have been converted and the meetings are running with a good interest, both in and out of the church. Let the good work go on.

S. H. Palmer and Charles Fowler have been loading baled hay at this station for M. H. Bowen. The railroad ought to give Mem a free pass, as he is constantly shipping over their lands.

Frank Holdridge has returned from "sweet Kansas" and is apparently in a good state of health. Frank has not a word of fault to find with Kansas, but we judge he is not very badly stuck on the country.

A. Whitbeck has bought the place formerly owned by F. M. Lewis and is going to settle down and take it easy. That's right, Abe; let those work who need money.

A large crowd attended the auction at C. C. Clark's last Friday and everything went for a reasonable figure.

J. W. Ash is the father of as fine a daughter as lives in Lenawee. She came to their place Saturday, Feb. 25th.

Mrs. Carpenter, we are happy to say, is at the present writing on the gain, with a fair prospect for recovery in the near future.

The C. T. line has been extended to the residences of C. L. Fowler, W. W. Hanchett, F. G. Florance, Geo. Holloway, W. E. Doty, J. B. Spencer and S. R. Rogers. It is said that some of the "new beginners" take a knife to bed with them and telegraph on the bed posts. Allowing us to give our opinion, from what little we know of telegraphy, we think a little "good old sleep" beats knife telegraphy all to death.

Len Carlton has a fine colt at his place owned by J. J. Barbour, of Toledo. The colt is of the Star Hambletonian breed and was purchased from Howard Sickles, of Adrian, for $600.

Robert Mitchell is at present quite sick and some fears are entertained of his recovery.

F. G. Florance was in bed the latter part of last week, but is intending to be on deck again in a few days.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Kittie Clark was under the doctor's care a few days last week, but has now recovered.

The local telegraph line which connects Lake Ridge, Ridgeway and Britton, will be extended to Tecumseh, where it will connect with the Commercial line. A sufficient amount has been pledged along the line to make it a sure thing. The poles have been purchased and will be set as soon as the weather will permit.

Remember the meeting to be held at Cottage Hall next Monday evening for the purpose of hearing the report of the committee on the hotel project. It is hoped a good attendance will be present.

The library after this week will be open from 1 to 6 and from 7 to 9 p. m., until May 1st. The catalogues will be ready for distribution next week.

The L. C.S. will be held at the home of Mrs. David Coryell Friday evening. A short literary programme will be carried out and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody.

There was a good attendance at the mother's meeting of the W. C. T. U., held at Mrs. Winders last week, and a profitable afternoon spent. The next meeting of the society will be held at Mrs. Jesse Potter's, on Tuesday afternoon of next week.

Mrs. Darius Curtis' Sunday-school class made her a surprise on Wednesday afternoon of last week and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. To assure their teacher of their esteem for her friendship they presented her with a large oil painting.

Upwards of $40 has been signed to build a walk from the postoffice to the depot, also some crosswalks. It is a much needed convenience and it is hoped the villagers will take hold of the matter in earnest, and as as soon as the weather permits the walk may be built.

Lora Palmer, assistant postmaster of Wasepi, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Arner, for a few days past.

Dean Loree is at home this week, spending his vacation. His physical appearance is improving since he became an instructor of the young.

Misses Clara Temple and Jennie Osgood visited friends in Tecumseh Saturday and Sunday last.

William Einn and wife, of Britton, Sundayed at the home of Jesse Potter.

Dr. Nelson made a business trip to Monroe on Monday last.

G. P. Waring went to Adrian Tuesday on business.

A party of young folks enjoyed a very pleasant evening at the home of John VanVleet last Monday.

George Benton, son of Rev. W. H. Benton, visited his parents the latter part of last week.

Married, at the parsonage in Ridgeway, on the 26th inst., by Rev. Benton, Miss Mary St. George of Macon, to Mr. Fred M. Goheen, of Clinton.

ONE BOTTLE CURED HIM.

A. H. Thompson, Brookland, Ill. writes: "I have been troubled with Catarrh for years, nothing helped me until I tried Pope's Catarrh Cure. I followed directions, and with less than one bottle, I am cured." Pagenstecher's extract of Tar Catarrh Cure will positively and permanently cure Bronchial Catarrh, Acute or Chronic Catarrh, also Rose Cold and Hay Fever. Large bottles $1.00.

The Honest Man in Tecumseh

As well as the handsomest, and others are invited to call on Baker & Hall, and get free a trial bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, a remedy that is selling entirely upon its merits and is guaranteed to cure and relieve all Chronic and Acute Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.

ANOTHER LEGAL VICTORY

A State May Prohibit Liquor's for Sale in Other States.

One of the few objections raised against the Constitutionality of prohibition laws not passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States in its recent decision has just been decided favorably to the Prohibitionists by the Supreme Court of Rhode Island. The decision of the Court was rendered on the 10th inst., and the point decided is of equal value with the matters passed upon by the United States Supreme Court.

Ever since the adoption of Prohibition laws dealers and their attorneys have claimed that no State had the right to prohibit the keeping within its own borders of liquors for sale in an adjacent or other State. This claim has been based upon the clause in Section 8 of Article I. of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that Congress shall regulate commerce among the several States. The statutory enactments upon prohibition in Rode Island have always, until within a year, recognized and admitted this claim and have prohibited the keeping" for sale within this State." At the time the amendments were secured to the law, in April, 1886, the words "within this State" were, however, stricken out, so that the sale has since been prohibited absolutely. When this amendment was passed, the liquor-dealers' attorneys on the floor of the Assembly made the boast that it made no difference whether this clause remained or was stricken out, since liquors could be freely kept in the State for sale elsewhere.

As was expected, exceptions were soon taken to the amended law, alleging that it conflicted with the United States Constitution. It is this point that the State Supreme Court has passed upon. It is evident that if the position of the liquor-dealers could have been sustained, no enforcement of the law would have been possible except for an actual sale in the State. All attempts to prevent the keeping of liquors, or to make seizures, or to suppress nuisances, would have been met with the representation that such liquors were kept and such nuisances were maintained in order to make sales in other States. In addition, if the claims of the liquor dealers had been sustained, it would have been equivalent to deciding that the words "within this State" should be inserted after the words "kept for sale," and that the law without these words was unconstitutional; and that hence, until the assembling of the next Legislature, Rhode Island would have no law for enforcing her Prohibition Amendment.

The liquor-dealers had placed great hopes upon this case, and had looked for a decision that would free them from the burden of the law and afford encouragement to the trade the country over. Instead of giving fruition to those pleasant hopes the Supreme Court followed in the footsteps of the higher tribunal at Washington, and proceeded to put one nail more in the coffin of the liquor power.

The decision is based, first, upon the ground taken by the United States Supreme Court, that in the exercise of the police power that is not delegated to the general Government but that remains to the States, all the States "have the right to regulate for their own welfare, as they understand their welfare, their internal or domestic concerns." The Court enumerates various instances in which the power is exercised, and then says it is exercised "especially to diminish and prevent the demoralization and impoverishment and the numberless vices and miseries which are the sure concomitants and consequences of a free traffic in intoxicating liquors, by restraining or prohibiting it."

In the second place, the Court bases its opinion upon the broad ground that if the contention of the dealers be allowed a blind or feint would be afforded under which every dealer could carry on his business unmolested.

This decision is in line with the recent decision in Maine on the question of the sale of "imported" liquors. Both decisions are based upon the same clause of the United States Constitution giving Congress power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States." If these cases are taken to the United States Supreme Court, and a decision is secured in harmony with the decision of the Rhode Island and Maine courts, it seems as though Prohibition will have secured the last support that can be given to it by law, and that all that will be left will be the grand struggle for national Prohibition.—The Voice.

Americans are breaking down under high pressure application to business and duties at the desk; they are losing nerve force. Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic restores lost nerve force by supplying blood to the nerve tissues, and by a gentle aperative action removes all restraint from the secretive organs, before curing all diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys. Dr. Geo. Ferguson will supply the genuine Red Clover Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

The Commercial Bulletin remarks that th. American nose can now be wiped with an American made silk handkerchief, but no American nose can be wiped with a domestic linen handkerchief, and moreover, no American heart beats beneath a domestic linen roof. Let linen be a little better protected and linens would be sold cheaper in price and better in quality than the imported linens at the present time. Not a yard of linen is made in the United States! And yet no country is better adapted to flax raising or manufacturing!

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, New Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made." Jesse Middlewart, Dresden, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung trouble. Was given up by doctors. Am now proof of health." Try it. Sample free at Parquette's.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite a boy. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm. Best test of the kind I need only to say that disagreeable catarrhal smell has all left him. He appears as well as anyone. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

Mr. A. Nichols suffered from catarrh for years. He purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm of us. He is now almost cured, and says—you cannot recommend it too highly.—Evers Bros., Druggists, Independence, Iowa.

White Swelling.

Mr. M. S. Hamlin, one of the best known insurance men in North Carolina, writes from Winston, as follows: "Ever since I was seven years of age I have had what the doctors call hip disease, and which I call white swelling. My hip was drawn out of place. There was a swelling at the knee-joint, where there is a profuse running, which has been there for years. Of course this has greatly depleted my system, together with surgical operation on the leg bone. I tried every known blood purifier to build up my system, but none did me good until I took S. S. S. I use it every spring. It always builds me up, giving me appetite and digestion, and enables me to stand the long, trying, enervating, hot summer days. To me there is no such medicine for purifying the blood and building up the wasted system as S. S. S. On using it I soon became strong of body and easy of mind. My color changed from a pale, worn look to a healthy, robust complexion."

Mr. G. N. Frizzel, of Farmersville, Texas, writes: "About August 1st, 189[illegible] an eruption appeared on my arms and legs, which pained me much and seemed to affect my physical condition generally. On the advice of a physician at this place, I finally commenced using Swift's Specific. I am glad to say that after using three large bottles the sores have all healed."

BOOKS, THREE CENTS EACH!

The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, printed from good readable type on good paper, and many of them handsomely illustrated. They are without exception the cheapest books ever published, in a high sense of the language, and intended to put the masses of the people an opportunity to secure the best literature of the day at the most trifling expense. In any other series these great works would cost many times the price at which they are here offered. Each one is complete in itself.

Wonders of the World. Natural and Social. Contains the most curious and astonishing facts in the world, including a full account of the Great Exposition. Very interesting and instructive.

Wonders of the Sea. A description of the many wonderful and unusual things found at the bottom of the ocean, with 50 illustrations.

"A Pleasure Excursion," and Other Sketches. By Josiah Allen's Wife. A collection of irresistibly funny sketches by the most popular humorous writer of the day.

The Aunt Rachel Papers, by Frank Amelia Rockwell, author of "The Rugg Documents." A most ridiculously funny book—in every way superior to "Widow Bedott."

Christmas Stories, by Charles Dickens. Contains a number of the most famous Christmas stories ever written by the greatest writer who ever lived. Each one is complete.

Round the Evening Lamp. A book of popular poetry, hymns and songs, for the fireside and school.

Popular Recitations. Contains a collection of pieces for reading and declaiming, including all the latest, best and most popular.

The Self-made Men of Modern Times. Contains portraits and biographies of famous self-made Americans, from the time of Franklin to the present.

Familiar Quotations. Contains the origin and author of many phrases frequently met with in reading and conversation. A valuable work for reference.

Low Life in New York. A remarkably true picture of some of the dark sides of metropolitan life. Illustrated.

The Road to Wealth. Not a mere collection of platitudes, but a thoroughly practical work, showing in a way that will be of great service to young and old, the road to wealth.

One Hundred Popular Songs, with music, including all the favorite songs of the last half of the 19th century.

HERE'S AT ADVICE

Take the open air, the more you take the better;
Follow nature's laws to the very letter;
Let the physicians go to the bay of Biscay;
Let morning tea, the tragedy and the whisky.

Empty exercise keep your spirits cheerful,
Let no disease of sickness make you ever fearful;
Eat the simplest food, drink the purest cold water;
Thus you will be well, or at least you ought to.

DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition, in the daring of its inception, had the vividness of a romance; while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it sought and w[illegible] obtain it was absolutely sublime.—JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1862.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could do and dare in America.—COMTE DE PARIS: HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

CHAPTER XV.

THE OLD NEGRO JAIL AT CHATTANOOGA.

The sufferings of northern prisoners in the south constitutes probably the most terrible chapter in the history of the war. Attempts to soften the fearful story have met with slight success. The lot of the prisoner of war is always deplorable, as accommodations are scanty and the hardships of camp life greatly aggravated. But the Union prisoners in the south suffered more than is usual in military prisons. The southern states were slenderly supplied with means for the care of bodies of troops numbered by thousands; the northern armies were pressing severely and tightening the blockade by sea and land with the express design of depriving them of necessaries for prosecuting the war, and in case of scarcity it was natural that northern prisoners would first suffer. But to this was added a terribly bitter feeling, which sometimes found delight in gratuitously embittering the prisoner's lot. The horrors of Andersonville cannot soon be palliated or forgotten.

But the sufferings of ordinary prisoners was far exceeded in the case of the Andrews raiders. Our leader had been trusted by the enemy and had betrayed them. We had inflicted an amount of fright altogether disproportionate to our numbers, and we were now believed to be beyond the protection of the laws of war, and almost beyond the pale of humanity. It was thought that we were selected for our desperate character and therefore would require an extraordinary amount of guarding to prevent us from escaping or doing further injury. Such considerations no doubt had weight in the minds of our captors.

But these alone are not sufficient to explain the story that follows. I have hesitated in regard to telling it at all; but there is at least one good reason for recording all that the proprieties of language will permit—a reason which also goes far to account for the full horrors experienced. Nothing better shows the spirit of the institution of slavery, and the debasing effect it produces on the master class. Those in whose power we now fell had been used to seeing men, women and children publicly sold, whipped, hunted with dogs, or shut up like wild beasts in dens. With such experiences they would not be likely to care much for the sufferings of enemies, whom they had come to regard as the friends of the enslaved race. Accordingly it is in the negro prisons that our band found their most fearful experiences.

The story of the little, old, Chattanooga prison cannot be fully told. Terrible hardships which had to be lived through in agonies of shuddering disgust, and in utterly helpless disregard of the decencies of life—a daily and unceasing combination of pain and loathing—can hardly be told by one friend to another, much less spread on the cold printed page. The reader will remember that for every painful thing related, a dozen more are behind, which dare not be named. Let it be understood that there is no exaggeration. Photographic accuracy, within the limits already indicated, is aimed at. This worst of all our prisons has long since been swept away, but its memory will never grow faint while one of its hapless victims survives. The story is not of mere or my opinion, but is established by sworn testimony published in the war records.

The captain, who was appointed my conductor, called a guard of eight men and led me for some distance through the streets of Chattanooga. Twice the Confederate soldiers linked arms with their one on each side. Two walked in front and four followed behind. I could not help telling the captain that they took better care of our men than we did of theirs, that Colonel Streight had escaped from Georgia a long distance without any help, and with no friends, on foot. He did not resent the insinuation, but replied that they meant to be good to us. At length we came to a large, old, brick building surrounded by a high board fence. It stood, as I learned later, a few rods out of Lookout Street, in other words, on the outskirts of the town. The second story projected a little over the first, and was built so that the foot of the yard was built up to the level of the second story. The yard was about 100 feet square, and was surrounded by a board fence twenty feet high, with a narrow board projecting inward at the top, so that it was impossible to climb over it. The only entrance was through a heavy door, which was now closed and barred. The guard rapped on the door with their muskets, and it was opened by a negro man, who was evidently a slave, and who was dressed in a pair of old pantaloons and a shirt, and was barefoot. The door was opened just far enough to admit us, and we were ushered into a large room, with a fire-place at one end, and a door opposite the fire-place, which was evidently the entrance to the yard. The room was about 20 feet long and 15 feet wide, and was lighted by two windows, each about 2 feet square, and barred with heavy bars of iron. The floor was of rough boards, and there was no furniture except a few benches and a table. The room was occupied by about 20 negroes, who were sitting around the fire when we entered, but they all rose and stood in a row against the wall when we came in. The guard stood with their muskets in the middle of the room, while the captain spoke to the negroes. I was too much fatigued to pay much attention to what he said, but I thought he was very profane, and I was afraid he was drunk. He ordered the negroes to give us the best they had to eat, and to be quick about it, and then he left us, locking the door after him. The guard had stacked their muskets in the middle of the room, and some of them had sat down on the floor, but they were ordered to their feet by the negroes, who seemed to be the slaves of the prison, and who seemed very anxious to do everything we wished them to do. The guard then went into the other room, and we could hear them talking and laughing with the negroes who were preparing our supper. The negroes seemed very anxious to hear the news, and were very much excited by the news we had brought them of the approach of our army. They seemed to think that the day of their deliverance was near at hand, and that we were the people who were to bring it about. They were very much excited at the idea that there was a negro among us who had run away from his master, and they insisted on my telling them his name, and they laughed and talked about it among themselves in a language which I did not understand, but which I afterward learned was a mixture of English and African words, which they use among themselves when they do not want their masters to understand what they say. They seemed to think that I was very smart because I had run away from my master, and they asked me many questions about the country through which we had come, and about the roads and the easiest way for a negro to travel who should attempt to follow our example. They also asked many questions about their friends who had run away and been taken back to their masters, and they seemed very much disappointed when I told them that I was not acquainted with any of their friends who had run away from their masters. The entire family of which I was a member consisted of four [illegible] and here I was among strangers, and I had no money and no friends to help me, and no power to [illegible] such as will be [illegible] paying [illegible] he does not care, but it requires the most willing aid to small degree of success. There were two [illegible] space of fifteen feet, and two persons could rest between the ends of the rows. But when one turned, all in his row were obliged to turn likewise, and so all were contained in some manner, the crowding, the exclamations, and the clanking of chains in the black darkness of this dungeon presented a picture—especially at night—as perfect a representation of the regions of the lost damned as I have ever been known.

MANNER OF SLEEPING IN SWIMS' JAIL.

My prison mates received me very kindly and answered questions freely. I had no hesitation in telling them who I was, and this at once won their confidence. They were Union men from various parts of East Tennessee. Many of them had been in prison for six or eight months, and the offenses charged varied from that of simply preferring the old government to the new, slave built Confederacy, to that of bridge burning, or of being helpers of the Union army. The latter were called spies. One of them was blind, the Confederates accusing him of only feigning blindness; but from all I could observe, I think it was real.

I was greatly interested in the one negro in this miserable place. He was very friendly and anxious to be of service to us in any possible way. Some days after my arrival he was taken out and brought back again after an hour or so, seeming to be in a good deal of suffering. His story, which he gave as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world, moved me to indignation which I would gladly have expressed in some way more vigorous than words.

He was arrested and imprisoned on suspicion of being a fugitive slave. The law in such cases did not put the burden of proof on the person arresting, but on the negro. Aleck had been treated as law and custom provided. He was first carefully examined, and whipped till he made some kind of confession; then he was put in jail, and advertised in accordance with that confession. If a master appeared and proved property, he was obliged to pay all jail and whipping fees, costs of advertising and a liberal reward to the person arresting; and then, usually flogging the negro unmercifully for the trouble and expense he had caused, he could take his property. But if no answer came to the advertisement, it was taken for granted that the negro lied, and he was brought out and flogged into a new confession, after which he was remanded to jail and again advertised. Thus they continued, if no master appeared, flogging and advertising, for a year, when the poor fellow was sold at public auction and the proceeds applied to pay the expenses of all these barbarous inflictions! No trial was allowed by which the negro might prove himself free. When once arrested, unless he happened to have some powerful white friend, his doom was sealed, and in this way, in the old slavery times, many a freed negro found his way back into bondage.

No answer having been received to the advertisement for Aleck, he had been taken out for one of his periodical whippings. He had now been in this prison for seven months, and was to remain five more, with no prospect but that of being sold into perpetual bondage. We pitied him from the bottom of our hearts, and are glad to believe that, if he lived, the triumph of the Union armies relieved him from his dreadful position. These things were not all ascertained on the same evening, though several of them were, for I did all I could to get a complete mastery of my surroundings, that I might be ready for any possibility of escape. But the chances were slight indeed. The door and the walls were of solid oak, many inches thick; a circle of guards was all the time on duty outside; and the only egress was by means of a ladder put down in the presence of the jailer and a strong guard.

As we were talking in the darkness, we heard the tramp of many feet on the outside stairway, with the clank of chains, and listened to learn what next was coming to pass. The noise came overhead, and then the trap-door opened and a stream of comparatively cool air poured down from the room above, and drew in through the narrow windows. We breathed it as a sense of indescribable relief, [illegible] in the air as the desert traveler drinks from the mountain brook! —oh, what a luxury it would be, if that trap door could only be kept open! It might have been if our life or comfort had been valued by those in authority.

A number of men were seen above by the feeble glimmer of the jailer's candle, and the long ladder was thrust down and secured by a man below to prevent it from striking our heads, and it was clear that others were being sent down. The [illegible] were [illegible] more crowding. We [illegible] more [illegible] down.

CHAPTER XVI.

[illegible] kind of a place into which we had come, while they gave me the history of their adventures since we had parted on leaving the train. There was so much to tell of the past three days history. This was more than making the acquaintance of the East Tennessee men that night. The latter kindly allowed us to take a corner close to one of the window holes, where we could the more readily converse. Ross and [illegible] course would be to claim, with all our strength, to be detained Union seizers, not denying what we really did—only claiming that we were not volunteers, but were engaged on this expedition with no change, and simply employed others. Andrews also approved, but said that his case was separate from ours and much worse.

An hour or two passed in such conversation, and then we [illegible] quietly, and it became time to sleep. [illegible] was not particular as to such [illegible] never had been placed in such a situation as this. Laying down in the woods unsheltered from the pelting rain was bad enough, but this was far worse. The night before in the Confederate jail, I had the advantage of room, air and blankets. The future cage was a palace in comparison with this loathsome [illegible]. We were warm enough, though we had no bedding whatever. In fact, one of the first things we did was to disrobe as far as our irons would permit. Many of the East Tennesseans, who were not fettered were entirely naked, because of the intense heat. But we adjusted ourselves in our corner so that our chains might cramp us as little as possible, and, ceasing to talk, were soon asleep. The others in the room were already unconscious. The one advantage of the terribly close atmosphere was that the great heat and the slow carbonic acid poisoning from the impure air rendered slumber easy, and we found little trouble in sleeping early and late. The arranging for rest required some nice adjustment, and if any one wanted to change his position he was sure to wake all who were near him, or, if he rose up to go for a drink, he had to take along those who were chained to him, and was apt to tread on his neighbors, which gave rise to some warm altercations, with the result of still more disturbing our slumbers.

The story is told of an old hunter in Michigan who lost his way in the woods a number of times while the country was new. At length he secured a pocket compass and its use was explained to him by a friend. But shortly afterward he lost his way again and lay out as usual. When found he was asked why he did not travel by the compass. He did not dare, he said. He wanted to go north, and he "tried to make the thing point north, but it wasn't no use, 'twould shake, shake, shake round and point southeast every time.

A Modern Miracle.

Mrs J. W. Wentworth, of Elkhart, Ind., was long subject to pain in the side, shortness of breath, weakness, pain in the side, slight cough, swelling of the ankles and other symptoms of serious heart disease. She was expected to die at any time. Doctors in New York, Toledo, etc., failed to help her. But two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart cured her three years ago and she has remained well ever since. Heart disease can be cured. Sold by Baker & Hall.

POOR GIRLS.—The poorest girls in the world are those who have never been taught to work. There are thousands of them. Rich parents have petted them they have been taught to despise labor, and depend upon others for a living, and are perfectly helpless. If misfortune comes upon their friends, as it often does, their case is hopeless. The most forlorn and miserable women upon earth belong to this class. It belongs to parents to protect their daughters from this deplorable condition. They do them a great wrong if they neglect it. Every daughter should be taught to earn her own living. The rich as well as the poor require this training. The wheel of fortune rolls swiftly around; the rich are very likely to become poor, and the poor rich. Skill to labor is no disadvantage to the rich, and is indispensable to the poor. Well-to-do parents must educate their daughters to work; no reform is more imperative than this.

BEFORE IT IS BORN.

Some Startling Statements of General Interest.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, on being [illegible] when the [illegible] begin replied: "A hundred years before it is born."

Are we to infer from this that this generation is responsible for the condition of the race a hundred years from now?

Is this wonderful generation the natural result of the proper diet and medicines of a hundred years ago?

It is conceded in other lands, that most of the wonderful discoveries of the world in this century have come from this country. Our ancestors were housed in log cabins and suffered hardships and trials.

But they lived and enjoyed health to a ripe old age. The women of those days would endure hardship without apparent fatigue that would startle those of the present age.

Why was it?

One of the proprietors of the popular remedy known as Warner's safe cure has been faithfully investigating the cause, and has called to his aid scientists as well as medical men, impressing upon them the fact that there cannot be an effect without a cause. This investigation disclosed the fact that in the olden times simple remedies were administered, compounded of herbs and roots, which were gathered and stored in the lofts of log cabins, and when sickness came on, these remedies from nature's laboratory were used with the best effects.

What were those remedies? What were they used for? After untiring and diligent search they have obtained the formulas so generally used for various disorders.

Now the question is, how will the olden time preparations affect the people of this age, who have been treated under modern medical schools and codes, with poisonous and injurious drugs. This test has been carefully pursued, until they are convinced that the preparations they now call Warner's Log Cabin Remedies are what our much abused systems require.

Among them is what is known as Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla, and they frankly announce that they do not consider the Sarsaparilla of so much value in itself as it is in the combination of the various ingredients which together work marvelously upon the system. They also have preparations for other diseases, such as "Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumptive Remedy," "Log Cabin Hops and Buchu Remedy," "Warner's Log Cabin Scalp Oil" for the hair. They have great confidence that they have a cure for the common disease of catarrh, which they give the name of "Log Cabin Rose Cream." Also a "Log Cabin Plaster," which they are confident will supplant all others, and a Liver Pill to be used separately or in connection with the other remedies.

We hope that the public will not be disappointed in these remedies, but will reap a benefit from the investigations, and that the proprietors will not be embarrassed in the introduction by dealers trying to substitute remedies that have been so familiar to the shelves of our druggists. This line of remedies will be used instead of others. Insist upon your druggist getting them for you if he hasn't them yet in stock, and we feel confident that these new remedies will receive approbation at our readers' hands, as the founders have used every care in their preparation.

THOUGHTS ON LABOR

Paper read by E. L. Russell at the Farmers' Institute in Tecumseh.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: Your committee have given me a disagreeable subject to write upon. Labor is a subject upon which I dislike to talk, or have much to do with. Nevertheless, action is life—stagnation is death. As the rays of the morning sun illumine the earth, the light up a world of action. The mountain streams are flowing, the ocean waves are rolling, the tides are ebbing and flowing, the breezes freighted with the elements of life are constantly carrying on an interpolicurse from land to sea, from sea to land. Each blade of grass or grain, each leaf of plant or tree, as they tremble and wave in the sunlight and dew, are ever busy gathering their stores. The insect world go forth each to its peculiar station. The birds are soaring in the air, the flocks and herds are grazing in the fields, the fishes are swimming in the sea, each jovous and happy in its own element, and all were busy fulfilling their allotted destination.

The air, the elements, all animate and inanimate creation, the whole universe, are governed and sustained by the law of action. And as we pass from inanimate objects, and animal creation, to that of the humane organization, still the law of action is not suspended. The mind is never inactive—it increases, intensifies, diversifyes, arranges and applies the universal law of action to the various pursuits of mankind.

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," was a sweet, a joyous proclamation, and should be hailed with thanksgiving by humanity. How much easier to comply with its mandates than it would have been, had it been issued forth to the world in these words, thou shalt not labor nor do any work. Oh this would be woe to the infantile world, with no whistle of rattle, whip or drum, dolls or toasts. It would be woe to the juvenile world, now practicing their arts upon miniature boats and carts, building snow huts and snow forts, coasting and skating. It would be misery to the maiden, busy with her music, needle work, paintings and drawings. It would be agony to the youth braving the dangers of ball, skating-rink and toboggan. It would be misery to the student the man of science, the professional man, the artist, the mechanic, the agricultorist, to every one who has a wife for and a pride and an interest in his profession or occupation.

Then we come to the conclusion that labor is organized action, controlled by the human mind, which is a necessity to the enjoyment, happiness, prosperity and improvement of humanity. Mankind are born to a lot and can be neither satisfied nor happy without employment. [illegible] of the wealth and talent of the world [illegible] the present day.

Agriculture was the first in the [illegible] and will be the last pursuit for which man for grandeur and notoriety is ever [illegible]. However much other may be diversified it and others and depends upon agriculture. It takes the lead and is the barometer that indicates the rise or the fall of all other interests. Cities have grown up other pursuits and professions [illegible] as the necessities, comfort and happiness of humanity have called for or demanded. Of the thirty-eight of our sisters comprised in the union [illegible] this state all are peopled but thirty in agriculture.

A few years ago [illegible] of the U. S. [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] were [illegible] [illegible] at the present time when [illegible] of our [illegible] with large portions of the world [illegible] supplies [illegible] is necessary to produce it and a complete system of transportation and transportation [illegible] necessary to convey it and nature [illegible] for [illegible] to assert [illegible] that a [illegible] man [illegible] be supplied with the comforts and necessities of life [illegible] give diversity to [illegible] man of means, man of wealth and man of talent, man of science and man of art, the common laborer and the skilled workman, the tradesman and the merchant. Machinery was not invented and man factories, and the mechanical powers applied to the cultivation of the soil [illegible] they become a necessity and the increase of population and the advancement of civilization demanded them. Neither [illegible] for the wants [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] and the farmer [illegible] and [illegible] the supplies [illegible] which the hands [illegible] give the other [illegible] great brotherhood.

PHYSIOLOGY IN DISTRICT SCHOOLS.

EDITOR OF HERALD:—In reply to the correspondent from N. E. Franklin in regard to compelling teachers of district schools to do their duty in respect to teaching physiology, I will say this: In Blissfield Township where I am teaching, the W. C. T. U. has provided every teacher in the township with a book of the "Pathfinder" series, at the same time asking the teacher to devote a short time to it daily, if possible. This we are only too glad to do,—reading a short portion and then asking such questions as we deem proper concerning the subjects treated upon in the lesson. It is surprising how quickly the pupils will grasp the ideas from merely hearing the subject treated in this manner. I think it useless for each small pupil to be supplied with a text book but much good may be done with simply one book in a school. At the close of each term these books are to be returned to the President of the Union and at the commencement of the next term they are distributed again.

Why would it not be an excellent idea for other W. C. T. U.'s to take the matter in hand and furnish each district in their township with a text book on physiology and narcotics? The expense of these little books is trifling in comparison with the good which may result therefrom.

I would like to hear from other townships in regard to their method of treating this subject.

Yours respectfully,

ARTHUR HALL.

Dist. No. 5, Blissfield.

THE OIL TEST.

[illegible] to the last number of THE HERALD the question asked, "If the oil test testing cream is a fair test, and you some of the cost dairy writers in that it is. Now are those dairy men practical men or men that [illegible] on paper without experience?" I give my experience with the oil test. Last fall our creamery men adopted the quart can test to [illegible] and our cream was giving by [illegible] test an average of eighteen [illegible] and the oil test gave us fifteen [illegible] ounces. I paid no attention to it for three months and our cream was growing better as winter advanced and the test less, so I said to the manager, I should take no more of the oil test business. So he offered to take the cream and churn it. I agreed to this and the next month our cream averaged five ounces more than the previous month. Now I wish to ask the dairy writers if it is a fair test, how is this? Also if oil is all there is in butter? I claim it is not. One thing is sure, the oil men will have to [illegible] on this range.

The Tecumseh Gymnasium Club has subsided into innocuous desuetude. At a meeting last Thursday evening at the rink, a motion was carried to donate the money then in the treasury—about $15.00—to the local bicycle club. The remainder of the effects were sold at auction.

About eight years ago, in removing from Ann Arbor to this village Dr. L. G. North had the misfortune to lose a cane. It was not a gold headed one but a common every-day hickory stick, but the valuable part was in the fact that there were about sixty names of his classmates cut in the surface. He had seen nothing of the cane and had given it up for good, until last Saturday he had the good fortune to come across the man who had found it, and the Doctor has since put in his spare time studying the monograms and reviving the memories of old college days.

It is said that Editor Applegate of the Adrian Times, prefers Gen. Sheridan as the Republican nominee for President. It is seldom we have the pleasure of agreeing with Tom on politics, but from a Republican point of view, his head is level on this question.

"You are charged with kicking the stuffing out of your wife," said Justice Hunter, of Adrian, to a prisoner the other morning; what have you to say? Is she a bad woman? Does she need mauling?" No, your honor, my wife is a perfect sunbeam, but when I told her to get out she said 'go weigh yourself,' and so I kicked the beam."

A prominent Adrian saloonist—his name is said to be Mulligan—victimized himself quite funnily at the polls last week Monday. Picking up a ballot and seeing the word "Against" at its top, he very complacently voted it. Later he discovered that the ballot was cast "against the manufacture and sale," etc., and since then he has been unable to kick himself sufficiently hard enough.

The Detroit Evening News is always enterprising. Cranks criticise it and politicians quarrel with it, but enterprise is its chief failing. It has just put in two new Potter-Scott presses. They have a capacity of 24,000 copies each per hour for a four page paper, and combine printing, folding and pasting machines in one. They are the 93d and 94th Web machines built by the Potter company.

The March number of WIDE AWAKE has a short war-story less than two pages long so good—we are almost ready to say there never was so perfect little bit of a story. Two little children got between two hostile bands of soldiers just as they came together. After the scrimmage the mother coming in search of them, fall the men there left began to hunt for them. How they found them and carried them home is the story. We shall not spoil it by telling.

Geo. Harding, editor of the Jonesville Independent, has blossomed out as an elocutionist. He will make his maiden effort in a short time. A party of Hillsdale gentlemen made him a visit last week, presented him with a wooden hub inscribed with a brass knob, and other articles too numerous to mention, besides a lot of resolutions. Before leaving, however, they presented him with a gold headed cane. We understand that Mr. Harding expects to make his greatest hit in female impersonations.—Hudson Post.

An earnest and vigorous exposition, in a cheap, handy form, of the moral aspects of the international copyright question, is something that has been much needed. Such a paper has now been published by Charles Scribner's Sons, of New York, in the well known paper covered series of this house, at a price which ought to insure for it a circulation of hundreds of thousands throughout the country. The title of the pamphlet is "The National Sin of Literary Piracy," and the author is the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke. Dr. Van-Dyke considers the subject under three phases:—(1) The Nature of the National Sin of Literacy Piracy, (2) Its punishment, and (3) Its Cure. His paper is well worth reading, and ought to touch the public conscience and have its effect upon public opinion, The publishers will send any one a copy upon the receipt of 5 cents.

The State Sunday School Board have announced a convention to be held in Tecumseh, March 15 and 16. The program will be published in due season.

Oliver Tefft arrived home Wednesday night from Riverside, having in charge the remains of his sister Lu. The funeral obsequies will be held at Mr. Tefft's residence to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Wm. Bly of Adrian, died Tuesday morning of spinal disease. His wife was a daughter of Edward Prichard and he formerly lived in Tecumseh. His remains will be brought here for interment.

There was a smash-up on the main line of the Lake Shore Tuesday morning, at Osseo, caused by two freight trains colliding. As the track was obstructed, the morning passenger train bound east went from Hillsdale to Manchester over the Ypsilanti branch and thence through Tecumseh to Leoawee Junction.

The K. of L. Assembly have been papering their hall, and now have one of the neatest rooms in town. It is an elegant job of wall decorating. They need a carpet for the floor and last evening a dance was held in the hall for that purpose. It was a very pleasant and successful affair. Macham's Orchestra furnished the music, and a nice sum was realized to start a carpet fund.

News has been received here of the death of Mrs. Alex. Hendry at her home in Fayettville, Ark. The family lived for many years in the house now occupied by Albert Hyde, on Chicago street. She was a quiet unassuming woman of decided domestic tastes, and a good Samaritan to those who who were blessed with her friendship. She exemplified in her daily life all the good qualities of a Christian wife and mother. Her old acquaintances will drop a tear of sympathy and regret when they learn of her death.

From the Battle Creek Moon of Feb. 13th, we clip the following: "P. H. Nichols died at his residence, No. 23 Taylor street, at 5 o'clock this morning of Bright's disease. Mr. Nichols was an old resident, a most estimable citizen and will be greatly missed by a large circle of acquaintances. The funeral will occur on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock." The deceased was a resident of Tecumseh for several years and will be kindly remembered by all who knew him here. His wife was a sister of Mrs. John J. Adam's, and her early life was spent in the town of Franklin.

In the March MAGAZINE OF HISTORY there is a most agreeable variety of entertaining and scholarly papers; the freshness and timeliness of themes considered in each issue of this priceless periodical are phenomenal. The leading article this month, entitled "Historic Cannon Balls and Houses," is an animated description of the invasion of Connecticut by the British in 1777, and the bold resistance of the town of Ridgefield, by Col. Clifford A. H. Bartlett, LL. B., and the paper is superbly illustrated, thus adding greatly to the charm of the narrative. Hon. Alexander Hamilton writes about his portrait of Washington and the diversified departments overflow with bright and readable data. As usual, the number is a specimen of typographic beauty, unexcelled in the magazine field. Price, $5 a year. 743 Broadway, N. Y. City.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—It is very important that the citizens of Tecumseh should attend the caucus held on Saturday evening next, at the council building to nominate candidates for the coming village election to be held on the following Monday, March 5th. With a temperance sentiment as strong as has been shown by recent elections held in this vicinity, it is the duty of all temperance citizens to unite in electing a Village Board that will see that the will of the majority is faithfully executed.

STROKES FROM AN ARTIST'S BRUSH.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21, '88.

DEAR HERALD:—I've had my pen loaded to fire at you a number of times since last August, but each time she missed fire, and you remained—well, as healthy as usual.

The past winter in this great city has been enlivened by a good many stirring incidents, but since the meritorious strangling of anarchy, on the 11th of last November, Most's followers have been wonderfully quiet. The fine art exhibit of the last exposition was supplemented by a most excellent one at the Art Institute, and some masterpieces were shown. Another fine exhibition, water-color and etchings, was opened at the Institute several days ago, and is worth going many miles to see.

The north side cable road, which was to have been running by Jan. 15, is not in operation yet, and I guess no one knows when it will be. The west-side cable system is being combated by the elevated road projectors, and it is doubtful if Baron Yerkes gets the whole city in his possession.

The death sentence of the brute Hetzke for whipping his little stepson, Max Gilman, to death with a strap and buckle, meets the approbation of all.

The midnight murder of the millionaire, A. J. Snell, furnishes a strong topic for the newspapers. All the evidence points to young Will Tascott as the burglar murderer. I knew the young man several years ago, and although I knew he was rather reckless and had a penchant for the sensational style of literature, I never dreamed of his ending his life on the gallows, another victim of dime novel reading.

The theaters are all going at full blast, except McVickers, where the doors have been closed a couple of nights by the illness of the Jersey Lily. The new Haymarket theatre, which was opened the 24th of last December, sprang at once into popular favor. It is on north Madison street, but a few steps from the Academy of Music. I noticed on the billboards lately the announcement that Jessie Bonestecl would be at the "Standard" this week.

I see Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Spalding and their children often, but otherwise meet but few old Tecumseh people. I have met Chas Cummins and wife Mrs. T. Barton and W. D. Robbins once, and one or two others, but I am in hopes of seeing others sometime. It has been proposed that during the summer a reunion of former Tecumseh citizens now living in Chicago be held in Lincoln Park and a jolly picnic indulged in. If all responded quite a crowd would turn out.

I receive the HERALD each week and it is a most welcome visitor to my little home. It tells me of the changes, the welfare, and the sickness of rows of those I knew at home. It does me as much good as a weekly visitor. May it live to be as old as "She" and may its editor yet leave the ranks of old bachelorhood and blossom as a rose, with many little buds to call him to the house of lessons.

[illegible]

As Pill Nye says my jar is busted and I can't sing no more until I get another one and the stock's all gone.

Yours now as ever,

L. F. WHITTIER.

Great Little Men.

Some of the greatest men that ever lived were of small stature and insignificant appearance. The robber will readily recall many instances. Very small are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. But they are far more effective than the huge, old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow, and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle and never cause constipation. For liver, stomach and bowel derangements they have no equal.

THE CROSBY-WILSON WEDDING.

The relatives and a few invited friends met at the residence of Mr. John F. Wilson, Wednesday evening to witness the marriage of their daughter Flora to Mr. Jo. Crosby. At 7:30 o'clock Rev. T. G. Potter [illegible] marks and a blessing. Congratulations put the guests in a lively mood, the bride and groom joining in the frolic with genuine good will. A bountiful menu was spread to which all did ample justice. The young couple are well known in our community, and they start out on life's stormy voyage accompanied by the good wishes of all who know them. Many beautiful bridal gifts were bestowed, a list of which is herewith appended:

Upholstered rocker, dresser, commode, center table—Jo. Crosby.

Set silver fruit knives—Mr. and Mrs. R. Crosby.

Paid up life policy—Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilson.

Bed spread and table cloth—Miss Katie Wilson, Camden, N. Y.

Damask towel—Little Helen Frazier.

Pair linen towels—Carrie Hoag.

Pair damask towels—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Eldridge.

Damask lunch set—Mr. and Mrs E. Anderson.

Bisque vase—Will Anderson's children.

Pair china fruit plates—Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Anderson.

Water set—satin—Mr. and Mrs. Will Anderson.

Sets silver knives, forks, table and tea spoons—Mr. and Mrs Geo. Wilson.

Silver tea set and tray—Erastus Ward.

Silver berry dish—Mr. and Mrs. Joe VanNess.

China card receiver—Little Chas. Wilson.

Sachet case and handkerchief—Little Josie Wilson.

Zephyr slumber robe—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wiley, Caro, Ill.

Hand painted panels—Mr. and Mrs. Lee N. Booth, Riverdale, Mich.

A Surprise—Chas. Wilson, Camden N. Y.

Future china set—Will find out who is responsible.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The 25th day of February was the well remembered time of the annual meeting at the pleasant farmhouse of Francis A. Dewey, of Cambridge. It has been a custom for thirty years past to have a cheerful thanksgiving for about thirty friends and relatives on the birthday of parents. It is a pleasure to review a few scenes. When a boy of eighteen years of age it was my good fortune to walk through the wild woods alone from Buffalo to Tecumseh. Here in this new settlement were intelligent and cheerful citizens, in the well made log cabins, who gave the stray young man a cordial welcome. There was not one in the territory of my acquaintance. My boarding place was at a log house, with six of the family. Here we lived without chairs or table the bare earth for the floor, a block of wood for a center table and a magnificent fire-place with plenty of room for the smoke to go up and mingle with the clouds. Long shall we remember with generous friendship our romantic and kindly introduction to the genuine pioneers of Tecumseh, where for three months it was my cherished home on the borders of civilization. Then my father's family came and made a new home one mile west of where the village now is. Since then I have had two new homes in Cambridge and also a wife and nine children. My log house was built on the historic ground, near the imperial seat and the romantic wigwam of that celebrated chief Mittean, of the Pottawatomie tribe. Here on the banks and near the crystal waters of Dewey Lake the pioneer farmer resided, a mile from any road or white inhabitant. We have many thanks to make for the cherished home in Lenawee County for the last 50 years. My age is now seventy-seven years. We have now eight government deeds of land, bought for one dollar and twenty five cents an acre, and sold to other parties for fertile and admired plantations.

Mrs. Holden of Woodstock will please accept the cordial thanks of F. A. Dewey and wife and also a company of twenty-four Deweys and others for a beautiful gift and numerous handsome bouquet of flowers, presented at the birthday party of F. A. Dewey, on [illegible]

The Common Lot.

There is a place no love can reach
There is a time to every soul
There is a chain no power can break,
There is a sleep on second sad wake.

Sooner or later that time will arrive that place will wait for your coming that chain must bind you in fetters, death that sleep must fall on your eyes. But thousands every year go untimely to their fate, and thousands more lengthen out their days by needful, timely care. For the failing strength, the weakening organs, the wasting blood, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful restorative and a prolonger of strength and life. It purifies the blood, invigorates the system, thereby fortifying it against all disease. Of druggists.

The ghost at the White House is said to walk half of every night, but he could do double that amount of work, if he wasn't afraid of the morning air, and knew that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cured all kinds of troublesome coughs and colds.

A Lesson in Etiquette.

[illegible]

A distinguished scholar and writer recently said: "I flounder in a sea of scraps." In these days, when the papers contain so many beautiful descriptions touching incidents, items of importance and matters of permanent interest, culled from all departments of life there is scarcely a day in which something does not strike the eye which the reader wishes to preserve in order to remember and perhaps [illegible] A bright boy or girl should make is a scrap book of things which interest most. If you have no book, put your selections in different envelopes, according to subjects. The newspaper is a circulating library full little or everything in it, and a little care will make it of your part of it as you read.

The people as a mass seldom make mistakes. This accounts for a large demand for Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure. It has given such very satisfaction that some druggists offer and imitations on which they make a large profit. Beware of both the imitations and the druggist, both will cheat you. The genuine is sold by Dr. Geo. Ferguson and will promptly and safely cure coughs, colds, and all throat and lung diseases. Price 50c.

On one occasion while the English naturalist Gould was wandering along the banks of the Thames with a party of friends, a rare laugh was created at his expense. He had climbed a tree for the purpose of exploring the contents of a nest. On suddenly looking down at a hollow formed by two branches of the tree, and which at the time contained a pool of water, he exclaimed: "As I am a living man, if there is not a large owl here in this hole, looking straight at me." The excitement was intense, but was instantly turned to a shout of merriment, when the naturalist on putting down his hand to seize the supposed owl, discovered that it was simple the reflection of his own image in the water.

HIBBARD'S Rheumatic Plasters are of great merit for weak lungs and stomach and should be applied over the parts affected.

Now is the time to pay up.

THE peculiar combination of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup enables it to do what no other remedy has ever accomplished, and it is daily curing those who years ago had given up all hopes of being cured.

IF you would enjoy your dinner and are prevented by Dyspepsia, use Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are a positive cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency and Constipation. We guarantee them. 25 and 50 cents.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

DR. SEBRING'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand work which it merits, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood, by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

this Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR MARCH 4th.

CHRIST'S LAST JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM. MATT. XX, 17-29.

NOTES.—"And as Jesus went up to Jerusalem." A continuation of the journey mentioned in xix, 1. This is his last journey to the Holy City. "He took the twelve apart." There were multitudes on all sides also going to celebrate the feast of the passover so the little circle walked apart. "Deliver him unto the Gentiles." The barbarians, the Romans, the heartless troughs were to carry the sentence into execution, through a triple series of agonies. "Mother of the sons of Zebedee." Salome. Perhaps James and John urged her to make the plea. Mark x, 35-45. She asks the foremost places of honor known to the Oriental mind, the privilege of sitting first on the right, then on the left of the King. "My cup indeed ye shall drink," is not a prophecy of any peculiar mode of death or torture, but descriptive that their fate would be ignominious and their sufferings terrible. "Is not mine to give." He frankly admits there are some things he cannot give—he discourages the question. Here the Son cannot interfere with the Father. "A ransom for many." A substitute, an equivalent to secure the redemption of those for whom it is paid. The "many" can be understood as meaning all. All who believe now, all who will believe hereafter. "As they departed from Jericho." About eighteen Roman miles from Jerusalem, a few miles west of Jordan. In the time of our Saviour a city of sweet odors and palms now it is the most miserable city in Palestine.

INSTRUCTION.—Christ was going up to Jerusalem, to suffering and death it is true, but also to final victory and as he went he took the ones he loved most dearly with him. Here is a lesson for us. While we travel on our journey to the Holy City of our God, we are not to be satisfied unless all those we love go with us on the same road. We must urge them, beguile them, if necessary compel them to be our companions in this hard but happy path.

"Behold we go up to Jerusalem" is a watchword inspiring enough to make our burdens light. It is potent enough to attract many to follow us, if we go.

All the mocking, scourging and the act of crucifixion was entirely a voluntary sacrifice. He gave himself up cheerfully to save men. His heroism compels our imitation, but it is the compulsion of love.

Most parents are ambitious for their children to rise to high positions and become recognized leaders. This in itself is natural and not blameworthy. But the first and requisite greatness is to be in harmony with Christ's law of love; to be unselfish; to have a desire to serve and even to suffer for others as he suffers for us. The mother's ambition can go no farther than that. When Christ asks, "What wilt thou?" He puts himself under no obligation to answer the request favorably. Here the favor was for spiritual influence. It is on a higher plane than the worldly. Ambition is accommodative. It follows us into every change of sphere. Hence it is the most subtle temptation. Unworthy and selfish as personal ambition always is, it often masquerades under the guise of religious ardor and saintliness.

We are never impressed into an unknown service when we enlist in the Christian army. We do not know the extent of danger, but we are made fully aware that many afflictions and pains will be our lot. He asks us frankly first, "Are ye able." There is no trap set to catch us.

It is a natural answer in the excitement of enthusiasm and self-confident determination. "We are able." To verify our willingness to serve, as these two disciples did, by years of self-denial and suffering is to become worthy of being a co-heir of Jesus Christ.

"We too dimly comprehend what it means to drink the cup of Christ. We fail to consider a thousand things: the contempt, mockery and hate that is liable to be ours if we drain it to the last drops. Great applause Christians are not to expect, but rather petty persecutions and scornful laughter. Have we the moral courage, the strength of purpose and principle to put the cup to our lips? God grant we have.

That life is the brightest that shines most into other lives. That character is the most precious that steadily reflects the rays of God's love.

That heart is warmest that ever pours forth its heat in service.

What is greatness? Self-sacrifice.
Who is our model? Christ.

SCROFULA, dyspepsia, gout and erysipelas, or any of the diseases arising from an enfeebled condition of the system, can be effectually cured by the great blood purifier, Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup.

GOOD MORNING, MOTHER: how do you feel this morning? Oh, I am ever so much better. That cough and soreness of my lungs has entirely left me. I got a bottle of Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam, and in twenty-four hours I was well.

THE QUEEN OF TRAMPS

Hale, Hearty, and Seventy-five. She Tells of a Busy Life of Leisure.

The queen of tramps was a recent guest at the 41st ward, N. J., police station. This remarkable woman now in her 75th year is in Lambertville in 1884 and migrated to this country in 1840. Immediately after her arrival she began a nomadic life, and has visited every section of this country and witnessed all the important celebrations. She has seen all the Presidents from Polk to Cleveland inclusive.

During the war she was close to the scene of several big battles and was one of the first women to cross the Potomac, of the Southern Confederacy after the surrender of Lee. During the centennial celebration she was in Philadelphia, and when Custer fell was close to the spot where he was ambushed and killed.

She is not an educated woman, but has a retentive memory and is a character. She wrote a poem touching the death of Custer, and recites it with considerable dramatic power. She delights to tell of the leading events in the history of the country during the past thirty years, and with ponderous particularity details the prominent attractions in the leading cities in the United States, and the many interesting celebrations that have taken place in the large cities at which she was present.

She has studied the Bible and has several odd conundrums to propound to ministers of the gospel. She is fond of children, and expends her few pennies in purchasing candy for the little ones while she goes hungry.

The queen of tramps is vigorous and her long siege of exposure and suffering has left few marks on her despite her advanced age. She left the police station and the board that had served as a bed as refreshed and contented as if she had occupied a luxuriously appointed room in a hotel. She moved quickly down Newark street toward the ferry, remarking that she wanted to make a call in New York city before resuming her journey. Her destination is Washington, to again see Congress in session.

THE DUDE'S LATEST FAD.

Signing Their Letters With Tiny Photographs of Their Sweet Selves.

A strong evidence of youthful vanity is the fact of pasting a miniature likeness of the writer at the bottom of a letter where the signature properly belongs. An uptown stationer has received many orders for letter and note paper to be engraved at the bottom of the sheet in this manner:

Yours very truly,

The square marks the place where the likeness is to go. A photographer in the same neighborhood told a reporter in the same neighborhood that he was doing a large business in miniatures.

"My patrons are mostly young people," he said. "They are very particular about every little detail of the picture and order as many as ten and twenty dozen at a time. The photographs are about the size of an ordinary postage stamp and are gummed upon the back. Some order their pictures finished in tights. It takes considerable time and skill to paint them satisfactorily, and they are correspondingly expensive, but such is the vanity of my patrons that they do not hesitate at cost."

A New Jersey Ghost.

The death of William Croxson, one of the oldest men of Oceanport, N. J., occurred recently at the residence adjacent to Monmouth Park. The people have since become thoroughly convinced of the appearance of something they claim is his ghost. Two prominent citizens described Croxson and Joseph Sullivan, who are also prominent in county politics, were the first to discover the phenomenon. Hence refuse to pass the place during night and people are making a detour of two miles to reach Long Branch. A party of men and boys certainly armed up to the teeth went to the spot last night to see the uncanny thing and all in force. The ghost's behavior is thus described by Croxson and others: "It rises out of the ground in that lonely spot between the Monmouth Park high board fence and the Croxson drive way. It runs on ahead for a few minutes and then with uplifted arms, turns and runs toward the old Croxson house."

Used the Blotters in Evidence.

A married man, with a handwriting as heavy as his purse, kept up a correspondence with a lady at a distance and used white blotting paper to take off the superfluous ink his pen put on. A servant was struck with the clearness of the writing on the blotter, and having read it, carried to her mistress, who, holding the blotter in front of the looking glass, managed to read confessions of the most ardent affection. From that day forward the blotters that were a little soiled regularly disappeared from the master's desk, without causing him the least suspicion. Last fall the man's wife brought a suit for divorce in the court of Franconia on Main Germany, and he was not a little surprised to find a heap of blotting paper evidence against him.

Ignorance of Explosives.

A number of people saw the giant powder cartridges exploded on the ice at the Morrison street bridge yesterday. The only effect visible was a hole blown through the ice, and several said "See that? That is the way with giant powder, it exerts all its force downward." "That is all nonsense," said another, "there is just as much force exerted upward as downward, only you can't see the hole blown in the atmosphere. Just place a piece of ice over the cartridge and see if it is not as much affected as the ice below." There seem to be many people who have a ridiculous notion that explosives exert more force in one direction than another.

Death to Shilly-Shallying.

The young man had been trying to tell her how madly he loved her for over an hour, but couldn't pluck up the courage.

"Excuse me a moment, Mr. Featherly," she said, "I think I hear a ring at the telephone." And in her queenly way she swept into an adjoining room.

Presently she returned, and then his mad passion found a voice.

"I am sorry, Mr. Featherly," she said, "to cause you pain, but I am already engaged. Mr. Sam son, learning that you were here, has urged his suit through the telephone."

Rural Simplicity.

A drummer who kissed a country girl remarked, ecstatically:

"How charming it is to press the lips of innocence for the first time!"

"All you city fellows must have gone to the same school. Every mother's son of you says the same thing when he kisses me," she replied.

GOV. HILL'S MUSICAL CLOCK

A Noteworthy Addition to the Furniture of an Executive Mansion.

A valuable article of furniture was added to the superb appointments of the new executive mansion at Albany, New York, yesterday. It is a musical clock, remarkable especially for its history and the lot of romance connected with it. The case is of natural oak, handsomely carved, and the time-keeper looks more like a massive sideboard than anything else, bearing on its exterior no indication that there is anything musical hidden within its recesses. The romance is connected with the mechanism producing the music, which was once contained in a magnificent music box which Frederick the Great presented to a favorite lady of his court. It is not of the usual kind which produce melody through the vibration of steel teeth, but consists of sweet-toned wooden flutes, mellow with age, every one of them being more than a century old. For many generations the box was treasured in the lady's family, but about three years ago it came under the hammer in Berlin and was there knocked down for a mere song to a shrewd artisan, who caught a glimpse of the antique wooden flutes beneath the reddish of its time-worn exterior. Three years ago last June Mr. Hoffman, of Marsh & Hoffman, of Albany, then in Berlin, ran across the purchaser, who had by that time conceived the idea of putting the flutes into a clock. Negotiations were entered into by Mr. Hoffman for the purchase of the clock when completed, and a year ago in June, when again in Berlin, he completed the bargain and took the clock with him. The architect of the executive mansion chanced to see it, and at once purchased it for the ornamentation of the then almost completed edifice. Besides telling the hours and minutes in mellow chimes the clock plays thirty-six different selections—mainly by Italian, French, and German composers. These include four selections from Strauss' celebrated "Gagliostro" waltz, "Carmen," "Lohengrin," "Tannhauser," "Huguenots," "Stradella," and "Freischutz." The instrument has been altered to play several American airs, among which is Payne's "Home, Sweet Home."

THE KAISER'S LONGEVITY.

Why Germany's Emperor Retains His Health and Vigor.

The comparatively robust health of the venerable Emperor of Germany, in spite of family trouble and official care, has given rise to a legend which, it is stated, is obtaining credence among the superstitious peasantry of certain Bavarian villages. According to this legend the long life of Kaiser Wilhelm is due to a mysterious potion, of which his Imperial Majesty alone possesses the secret. How the Emperor obtained the magic beverage is not known. It is described as a kind of spirit which, if it does not give him immortality, will enable him to live many years more, and to supply him with sufficient bodily and mental power to retain the Government of his vast empire in his own hands. The legend furthermore states that the German sovereign has once descended to make a present of a few drops of the charmed liquid to Marshal Moltke and Prince Bismarck, hence also his respectable age but, strange to say, he declines to give any of it to the Crown Prince, because he fears his heir would make use of his health, restored by the potion to force him to abdicate. Several crowned heads have, it appears, applied to the Emperor for his wonderful secret, but in vain. The Czar, in particular, prayed for some of the spirit, and it was the refusal of the Kaiser to oblige him which was the real cause of the present conflict between Russia and Germany.

MEANING OF AMERICA.

The Best Evidence Indicates It Is "Strong for Labor."

The meaning of the name America has ever been a subject of speculation. The only thing certain is that it is one of those names of Eastern origin, like Hindostan, Abyssinia, Columbia, or Cathay, so common in northern Asia which testify to the Goths or Longbeards conquest. Amalric which occurs as early as 561 A. D., is probably a contracted form of the name of Amalaric, borne by a King of the Visigoths, who died in 531. A Bishop Amalrich was present at the council of Salisbury in 807, and an American Bainstarius is mentioned in the doleful rolls thirteenth century.

It has been conjectured that the stem is ima, from which we get the name of Emma. The meaning of this is not known with certainty, though Ferguson thinks it may denote "strife" or "noise." Since however the name is probably of Gothic origin and since the Amalungs were the royal race of the Ostrogoths, it is more likely that the stem is amal, which was formerly thought to mean "without spot," but is now more plausibly connected with the old Norse amla, "labor," "work." The suffix ric, cognate with rex, rich and rick, means "rich" or "powerful," and therefore the most probable explanation of America is "strong for labor."

Congressional Oratory.

Asked Gen. Manderson, Senator from Nebraska, the other day, if oratory was dead in the Senate, says a Washington correspondent.

"The conditions are certainly unfavorable to it," he said, "that is, if you mean noisy declamation that might move an ignorant out-of-door crowd. If you mean correct speech and the artistic use of language to convey an impression, there is no place more favorable.

"It is a whimsical notion of mine that stammering promotes effective oratory. I remember a brilliant stuttering lawyer in Ohio who applied for a change of venue, and obtained it. Everything that he said of a humorous nature always sounded a good deal funnier because of the obstruction of speech, and it seemed very humorous when he said triumphantly, 'May it p-p-p-please the k-k-court when I have f-f-f-f-filled these p-p-papers this k-case will fly away on the we-we-wings of the morning.'"

Prettiest of Parisian Models.

The prettiest model in Paris to-day is Alice Van ... daughter of a Belgian violinist, who died when she was about fourteen and left her to make her own living and that of her family. She posed for Renoir's "Ophelia," reproduced in this country as a tobacconist's advertisement, "Orphelline" and "Heriolade." Another model in vogue at present is a Viennese girl named Hedwige, who has blonde hair with golden reflections, and a form like an antique statue. Hortense F— is a pretty critical seventeen, much in demand among painters because of her peculiar of an extreme purity of line, and of the unusually pleasing tonality of her flesh tints. Gabrielle Andre is the model in fashion for the Parisienne types. She knows every movement and gesture of the women of both mondes.

The following rule for finding out the weight of an animal by measuring may prove convenient. "See that the animal stands square. Take his circumference behind the shoulders, close up to the fore legs. Then measure from this point on the top of the back along the back to the forepart of the shoulder blades, this will be the length. Then take the girth, close behind the fore legs. Suppose the girth of a bullock 6 feet 4 inches, length 5 feet 3 inches, which multiplied together make 33 square superficial feet, and these multiplied by 25, the number of pounds allowed for each superficial foot of cattle measuring less than seven and more than five feet in girth, make 825 pounds. When the animal measures less than nine and more than seven feet in girth, 31 is the number of pounds to be estimated for each superficial foot. And suppose a calf, intended to measure 2 feet in girth and 2 feet in length, these multiplied together make 4 feet, which multiplied by 11—the number of pounds allowed for each square foot when cattle measure less than 3 feet in girth—make 44 pounds. Again, suppose a calf or sheep, etc., to measure 4 feet 6 inches in girth, and 3 feet 2 inches in length, that multiplied together makes 16 square feet, and these multiplied by 16—the number of pounds allowed for cattle measuring less than 5 and more than 3 feet in girth—make 256 pounds. The dimensions of cattle, sheep, calves and hogs taken this way, will give the weight of the four quarters of the animal, sinking the offal. A deduction must be made for animals half fat—of one pound in twenty pounds those that are fat, and for a cow that has had calves one pound must be allowed, in addition to the one for, not being fat, upon every twenty."

Good Advice.

Visiting---Hired Girls.

Once on a time I went to spend the afternoon with a neighbor friend, and my visit turned out nothing but apologies, with now and then something said between. She said she had put off baking on account of some sewing she wanted to finish, and thought she would bake in the afternoon. She had to chase the hens and search the barn to get some eggs to bake a cake, as the day before she had sent all she had to market. And then all her wood was outdoors in the rain and snow, and was slow to burn; consequently the cake got sad before it was baked. Her knives and forks she had laid aside in the morning; they then had to be scoured, and then as soon as it got a little dusk she thought of her lamp, which had to take its share, etc. But, farmer sisters, here let me say that if ever I am found in such a fix, I will make the best of it, and let visitors eat the same as I do, and try to visit one-half the time any way. I think the better way is to do all necessary work in the morning, and let sewing go until afternoon, as nine-tenths of the visiting people would rather have their chat and partake of a cup of good hot coffee and plain bread and butter, than to have nick-nacks.

I always have thought that housewives needed help just as much as the men, and think so yet. Let a man get in a hurry, and his first thought is, hire a man to help him out, and it is all right. And how many are the times that his worked-down wife is hurried and worried and no help ever thought of for her; and if she should speak of hiring a girl at two dollars or one and a half a week, the man will say, "This girl business counts up like Sam Hill." All this time he keeps his man week in and week out, costing him from five to six dollars a week, and only works from sun to sun, while a girl works from sun until ten at night.—Georgia Belle.

GOOD EVENING, MISS JENNIE; I am very much pleased at seeing you here. You sang beautifully. I understood yesterday that you could take no part in the exercises on account of a severe cold. Well, I did not expect to, but mama got me a bottle of Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam, and it helped me at once. That is so. I hear it spoken of in great praise.

I NEVER saw anything like it. Everywhere I go I hear nothing but praise for Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam.

An English writer says that the middle class Englishman, as a rule, does not buy books, except a few classics and professional treatises, but waits for his chance at the book clubs or circulating library. There are instances where authors are asked to lend their own copies by men of ten times their income. Wine and chairs may be bought, but books must be hired for, says the writer, the English are educated to the point of reading, but not to paying for books.

It is so

That we are daily guaranteeing Kemp's Sarsaparilla to the people. After taking three-fourths of a bottle without relief, we will refund the money. It is the greatest and best remedy in the market for cleansing the blood and giving you a new lease of life. A well known business man informs us he has gained 8 pounds on two bottles of this Sarsaparilla. Price $1.00. For sale by Baker & Hall.

I have found no cough which requires more courage and impudence to use even a little, but begin by taking Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and it will do the rest.

Doctors are to guard human life and bring relief to the sick. So does Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. It contains nothing injurious and is always reliable.

All persons desiring a family medicine upon which they can rely, choose Laxador, which promptly relieves and cures diseases of the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Price only 25 cents.

TECUMSEH & FRANKLIN FARMERS CLUB.

The Tecumseh and Franklin Farm [illegible] pleasant evening at A. K. Waldron's Hillside farm Feb. [illegible]. An interesting and instructive debate was listened to upon the question "What shall we do with our cream?"

Led by A. VanValkenburg, who said: We are engaged in the dairy business for profit. The first thing to be attended to is cleanliness. As a rule farmers make good butter, yet the consumers blame them because they do not get any that is good. The blame should rest with the dealer, who throws all the butter he buys into a vat together, so that a little rancid butter will contaminate the whole lump. Many find it profitable to pack their butter in small jars, and ship it. My experience is selling cream is limited, yet I think it pays as well as it does to make the butter. I have no knowledge of co-operative creameries, yet I think it it will pay a stock company if it will pay the farmers to open a co-operative creamery.

Mr. Howard [illegible] the [illegible] of deep setting for milk and with ice to [illegible] it. [illegible] more [illegible] system. We can afford to sell cream for one or two cents less per pound than the butter would bring for by so doing we are relieved from the labor of churning and working butter, thus giving us more time for mental improvement and making our homes attractive. I like the system.

Mr. Wade discussed at some length the co-operative creamery system and held that it was the only plan whereby farmers could receive proper returns from the dairies. He had several articles concerning the practical working of the co-operative creameries in the east and west. At Mc[illegible], Iowa, a co-operative creamery was started last June. It cost the farmers $[illegible] and the [illegible] cream [illegible] had average [illegible] per gallon. Reports from several co-operative creameries in the eastern states show that for the last [illegible] the average price paid for cream was [illegible] per gallon. [illegible] the price we receive during the same time we are disgusted with the dairy business here. Co-operative creameries go with us as they know of no reason why we always have the poorest cream in the country, the proprietary creamery being to pay a good price for cream or go out of the business.

The general discussion that followed revealed the animus of the Club which can be summed up as follows:

We believe the Creamery Company pays as much for cream as the farmers will accept regardless of the price received for their butter in eastern markets.

2nd. We believe the oil test a sham and a delusion. It generally operates to the advantage of the laundry [illegible] a fraud on the other [illegible] a certain amount of cream.

DAVID [illegible] LOCKE

We have obtain[illegible] after some delay and trouble a p[illegible]rtrait of "Nasby," which was made [illegible] on a recent photo, and from which [illegible] artist has produced a very life[illegible] picture. Locke was pre-eminent [illegible] and illustrated in [illegible] made man [illegible] industry and [illegible] what in[illegible] accomplish from the most [illegible] painting. In his life we have a [illegible] of a man who has r[illegible] merit and hard work from the [illegible] to the highest rank [illegible] editor's case to the [illegible] sanctum.

He was the son [illegible] Nathaniel Reed Locke, a veteran [illegible] war of 1812 and a sturdy and [illegible] man, Republican and temperance man. David Ross Locke was b[illegible] at the village of Vestal, in Broome County, New York, on the 20th of S[illegible]ember, 1833.

He had only finished his eleventh year when he left school and went to work in a printing office, but of course did not consider his education finished; indeed it was only just beginning.

The office he entered was that of the Democrat, at Cortland, New York, and here he learned the printing trade well and thoroughly. Then he started out into the world as a journeyman printer.

He now travelled all over the Union, visiting almost every American city of any importance, and working as compositor, reporter, or editorial writer. This wandering life has some hardships, but it affords admirable opportunities for gaining experience and knowledge of the world.

Struck with the great resources of the Western [illegible] and foreseeing the wonderful developments in store for it, Mr. Locke early determined to found a great paper somewhere in that wide territory.

He was not yet twenty years of age when he began publishing on his own account. Leaving Pittsburgh, where he had been employed on the Chronicle, he went to Plymouth in Richland County, Ohio, which was at that time pick and a long way west and there, in partnership with Mr. James G. Robinson, he issued the Plymouth Advertiser.

Mr. Locke worked successively in several towns in Northern Ohio, and was successively connected with the Mansfield Herald, the Bucyrus Journal, the Bucyrus Republican and the Findlay Jeffersonian, all of which are still in existence and owe to him their early success.

It was at Findlay that he hit upon the idea which has contributed most to his reputation and popularity—the fabulous series of letters signed "Petroleum V. Nasby."

The first of these appeared in March, 1861, and gave an exceedingly funny description of the secession of the Southern States, narrating how Wideawake Corners, an insignificant village in Crawford County, had followed the example and declared itself independent of the State of Ohio.

Although Mr. Locke took up no arms in the war, and only fought from [illegible] he did much for the Union cause. The pen says the proverb, "is mightier than the sword," and he was often more effective than a regiment. The Nasby letters took the popular fancy at once. Nothing quite so [illegible] had been written before, and the quaint back handed way in which the author preached his political doctrines was very effective.

Mr. Locke's connection with the Toledo Blade dates from October, 1865, when he undertook its management, at first on a salary, but afterwards acquiring an interest in the paper, and finally its complete control.

Mrs. Morgan Talks to Doctor Lynch.

MAN ASSER, Mich., Sept. 1887.

Dear [illegible], you remember me coming with you some months ago about my rheumatism, and that one of my wrists was painful, a pain shooting from its elbow. I asked you about the Syrup and you replied to me that there was anything under the sun that would cure me to take it. I commenced using H. Drake's Rheumatic Syrup, and I am to say to you that it is the greatest [illegible] in the world. I firmly believe that baneless that troubled me was the rheumatism is cured. [illegible] in fine condition. My [illegible] are with good health. Doctor, that is a great many medicine and you need [illegible] to recommend it.

Mrs. Phoebe Morgan.

A PRETTY GIRL IN THE WATER.

The Beautiful Spectacle at the Royal Aquarium, Westminster.

One of the features of the Royal Aquarium, Westminster, is an exceedingly graceful swimming performances of some young girls under the able direction of Prof. Beckwith, himself a swimmer of celebrity in days gone by. "For the last eight years," said the professor, "have I continued to give regular performances in this building, that, I take it, is proof enough of their popularity. The hall where the show takes place is well adapted, being constructed for the purpose. Two rows of seats slope gradually down to the swimming bath or tank, some seventy feet in length by thirty in width. At one end of the tank, upon a platform, Prof. Beckwith stands and introduces the swimmers to the audience. "Allow me," says the professor, "to introduce my latest pupil, Miss Clifton," and a pretty girl of an admirable figure steps forward and stands waiting a few feet above the dark water. She is clad in long silk tights reaching to her hips, for dress composed of a close fitting bodice of coral colored cashmere, half open at the neck, and with arms bare and uncovered. Apparently her number are numerous, five or six a day, agree with her wonderfully, will for she has the clearest and organized of skins, rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes, indeed such redness of cheeks made me think of paint, and made me regret that the first plunge must necessarily rub this pretty girl of such delicious touches of color. After the professor had finished enumerating the various excellencies she had acquired under his tuition, Miss Clifton took a single step, and like a pink arrow shot herself into the air. The next second she was far beneath the green depths of the water a coral hued mermaid, silently cleaving her way and easily discernible by reason of a powerful electric light that followed and displayed her every movement. After her five or six other young ladies followed in succession, till a little girl of 7 appeared, the professor's daughter and young [illegible], as he pathetically remarked, [illegible] depth everywhere. Various [illegible] fancy swimming were indulged in, gracefully and clever, and then young Beckwith came upon the stage, a youth of 20, who dived and swam the entire length of the tank under water, then reappeared blowing like a grampus, at the fairly student. Happily for the durability of ones clothes, in crimson checks, Miss Clifton only grew rosier and prettier the longer she staid and splashed about. Even her short curly hair did not seem to lose its crispness, and when the water tournament was over she arose, like another Venus from the sea bright and bewitching with the sparkling water rolling off her lovely limbs.

BOUND FAST TO THE TRACKS.

An Atrocious Attempt at Murder by Masked Men Frustrated.

A daring robbery and attempt at an atrocious murder was committed a few nights ago on the Short Line railroad trestle, just out of the city limits of Louisville, Ky. William N. Bogartner, employed in the shops, had received his salary and was on his way home. When near the center of the trestle four masked men suddenly emerged from the darkness, seized him and demanded his money. He replied by striking one of the men with his fists, knocking him to his knees. The other two men jumped on the victim and struck him several times about the head, and overpowered him. They thrust a handkerchief into his mouth, at the same time throwing him to the ground on the railroad track. Several pieces of stout rope were produced, and the four villains bound him hand and foot so tight that the circulation was impeded and permanent injury was narrowly averted. After binding and gagging Bogartner the highwaymen deliberately tied him across the track so securely that escape was impossible. They then took his money and overcoat and disappeared. The victim was nearly exhausted from the desperate struggle, and was suffering intensely from the blows on the head. He could make no outcry. The place was a lonely one, and the cold winds were piercing. Bogartner knew that the Lexington train was due in a very few minutes and that unless he was accidentally discovered before its arrival he had but a few minutes to live. He strained every nerve to break loose but in vain. He heard the jumble of the train in the distance and gave himself up for lost. But suddenly he heard a footstep approaching and Albert Wallace, a yardman, came up. He quickly cut the ropes and dragged the insensible man aside just one minute before the train passed. Bogartner did not recognize his assailants and no one has been arrested.

Inventive Females.

Lady inventors are a feature of recent years. In noticing the invention by a lady, Miss E. A. Spaeth of Brooklyn, of an improved wash basin, the Sanitary Plumber calls to mind being called upon some twenty years ago to make the drawings and specifications for an invention which was being patented by a lady, and when the same was granted, it took no small trouble through the press to note that it was the first patent ever granted to a female, and commented at considerable length upon the lack of creative or originative faculty of the female mind. Since that time the female mind has practically undergone somewhat of a change, and nearly 3,000 patents have been granted to lady inventors.

Women Advancing in Medicine.

Women physicians are receiving honors on all sides. The Massachusetts Medical Society which so long refused admission to women, sent Dr. Grace Wolcott to the recent Medical Convention at Chicago. Mrs. Selina [illegible] M. D. and B. S., who took the [illegible] medical degree in the other [illegible] in 1887, has just been [illegible] in Chicago medical school of Medicine for Women. Dr. Fanny Dreshman, of Lansing, [illegible] of repute, is the first woman [illegible] to the Imperial Medical Congress [illegible] and a recent [illegible] of Washington.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24, 1888.

[illegible] having removed the injunction of secrecy from the fisheries treaty, the most notable thing done by that body this week was to debate for more than an hour the policy of considering the document with open doors. So radical a departure from time-honored precedents awakened bitter opposition from a number of influential senators, but there have also been a number of prominent converts to the open session movement of late. It is predicted that the secret sessions, except where affirmative reasons exist for secrecy, will not last many months longer.

Senator Teller made a vigorous plea for open sessions recently. He argued that no department in this government had any business to have secrets from the public, unless it were the State department, pending treaty negotiations or something of that kind. He said every decision made by the head of a department, every adjudication made by the head of a bureau ought to be an open book for the people of the United States to read and examine. He held that secret sessions were un-republican; that there was no more reason for considering the confirmation of executive appointments behind closed doors than for legislating behind closed doors; that it was one of the essentials of a free people that they should know what their public servants are doing, and he mentioned that even the Supreme Court publicly recorded the action of each Justice on each question.

Probably the most notable thing done by the House this week was to defeat by a vote of 129 to 128 the Hoar resolution changing Inauguration day to the 30th of April and extending the short session of Congress to that date. It now remains to be seen what the Senate and House together will do with the Crain resolution providing that Congress shall meet on the 1st of January after the election.

The deepest interest and sympathy is felt here over the death of W. W. Corcoran, the venerable and beloved Washington philanthropist, whose long and useful career is thus ended.

The coming Washington Constitutional Centennial and World's Exposition of 1889-92 have now received approval and endorsement from the governors of 37 states and territories, the mayors of 52 cities, the presidents of 153 boards of trade, from 33 state granges, from 30 state agricultural societies and various other bodies. The Central and South American republics have made known their intention of taking an active part in forwarding the Expositions; the government of Spain has taken official action to the same end, and Italy has signified her intention of joining in the celebration.

The Board of Promotion does not ask for an appropriation for the Exposition of 1892 from Congress. All they ask is the use of the ground. When the time comes the states and territories will be asked to appropriate $500,000 each to erect their buildings. The $500,000 asked for in the bill for the Constitutional Centennial is to be devoted, it is said, to the entertainment of the presidents, chief justices and ministers of the 15 Spanish American republics who will be here as the guests of the government during the celebration.

As Wednesday, the 22d, was the birthday of the father of his country, the United States gave itself entirely to patriotism. All other business was dispensed with for the reading of Washington's farewell address. This performance was executed in a very creditable manner by Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, the president of the Senate, while the Senate showed its respect by attending in unusually large numbers and listening attentively.

By the time you read this you will know all about the proceedings of the Democratic convention held here during the week to decide the time and place for the meeting of the Presidential nominating convention, consequently it is useless to dwell on the subject.

WHEREAS, on the 11th day of October, 1883, Samuel W. Temple mortgaged to Addison Hardenburg, all that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the county of Lenawee and State of Michigan, described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point in the east line of Pearl street ten (10) rods north of the north line of [illegible] parallel with said [illegible] rods distant from said North line of Shawnee street about ten (10) rods to the Railway Depot Grounds, thence north, ward on west line of said Depot Grounds about six (6) rods to lands of Heeson Brothers and Nyland, or at least occupied by them as a Hog Ringer Factory; thence west on south line of said land of Heeson Brothers and Nyland ten (10) rods more or less to land conveyed by said Samuel W. Temple and wife, Hettie A. to Edwin Wood; thence south, on east line, of said land 35 as aforesaid conveyed to said Wood (19) and one-half (19½) rods to the southeast corner thereof; thence west on south line of said parcel of land 35 as aforesaid conveyed to said Wood eight (8) rods to the east line of Pearl street aforesaid; thence south on east line of said Pearl street to place of beginning, with all the appurtenances thereto belonging or in any wise appertaining or thereupon situated, including the machinery in and about the buildings thereon or to be hereafter annexed to the same or any part thereof, to secure the payment of [illegible] years from the date thereof with interest to be paid annually at the rate of ten per cent, per annum for the first three years, and for the remaining two years interest to be paid annually at the rate of nine per cent, per annum, which mortgage was, on the 11th day of October, 1883, duly recorded in office of Register of Deeds for said county of Lenawee in Liber 86 of mortgages on page 339 and 340. And whereas said mortgage contains a provision that in event any default shall be made in the payment of said interest, or any part thereof at the time therein specified, and shall remain in arrears for the space of sixty days the aforesaid principal sum with all arrearages of interest thereon shall at the option of said mortgagee, his executors, administrators and assigns, become due and payable. And whereas default has been made in the payment of interest on said mortgage to the amount of $[illegible] and upwards and the same having remained unpaid and in arrears for a space of more than sixty days, and the undersigned, administratrix, hereby elects to declare and does hereby declare the whole amount due, both principal and interest, amounting at the date of this notice to the sum of $[illegible], and no proceedings having been commenced at law or in equity for the recovery of said sum, or any part thereof. And whereas the undersigned administratrix has been compelled to pay the further sum of $[illegible] for insurance premiums to protect her interest as such administratrix in the mortgaged premises.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and by virtue of the statutes of the State of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys so due and owing on said mortgage, and the interest thereon from and after the date of this notice, said insurance premiums and interest thereon, as provided in said mortgage, and the cost and expense of this foreclosure, and the attorney fee provided by law; the said above described lands and premises will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the city of Adrian, in said County of Lenawee (that being the place where the circuit court for said county of Lenawee is holden) on Saturday, the 26th day of May, A.D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day.

Dated March 1st, 1888.

The Miller Family gave their entertainment at the Milan Opera house, Friday night of last week. Owing to the bad roads, stormy night and short time of advertising the attendance was small, but the program was highly appreciated by those present, and was presented more successfully than at any time. They desire to return a vote of thanks for the courtesy that was shown them, and hope in the future to meet them again.

Dr. Nelson, W. P. Cadmus, T. H. Temple and E. W. Rappleye, spent a couple of days at Wampler's Lake last week fishing with splendid success. For they all had fish for their breakfast in the morning.

One of the pleasantest times it has been our privilege to enjoy for a long time was the afternoon visit given by Mrs. W. R. Wilson, at her pleasant home, on Thursday of last week, to her Bible class. The afternoon was spent in social converse and a repast was served by the hostess in the best of style, consisting of oysters, chicken pie, cold meats, biscuit, cake etc. etc., with ice cream, confectionery and nuts as desert. The class presented her with a book entitled "Godly Woman," as a small memento for their esteem and friendship for her, and wish for a long and happy life.

The funeral service of Mrs. Mary Ann Pilbeam was held at the church Sunday afternoon, Rev. W. H. Bacton officiating. Mrs. Pilbeam was born at Bath, England, in the month of October, 1810. At the age of 18 was married to James Bodkin and came with him to America and settled near Dundee, Michigan, where he died leaving her with six girls, five of whom are now living. She was married to Joseph Pilbeam in 1844, and came to live with him on his farm in the township of Ridgeway, where she was again bereft of her husband, and by death with five children, two sons and three daughters, of which one son and two daughters still survive her. For the past eleven years she has been a great sufferer from paralysis, with which disease she died March 2d., 1888, at the age of 77 years and 5 months. We shall sadly miss her, for to know that mother and grandmother was coming to our house was a ray of sunlight. But we sorrow not, as those who have no hope, for her trust was in her Saviour.

There was a large attendance at Cottage Hall last Wednesday evening, to hear the entertainment given by the Miller Family. The program was of first-class selection and successfully carried out. Little Fern, in her solos, as usual received the hearty applause of those who heard them. The Trombone Solo by Emma, was one of the finest selections on the program and highly applauded. The Miller Brothers in the quartette, orations and solos, took the house down and received a rousing applause. The entertainment receives the highest praise by those who heard it, and when it is remembered that a little less that four months has passed since they first received their instruments, and that they have not received any instructions, it is remarkable the success in which they appear before the public.

We take the following from the Evening Tribune, of El Paso, Texas, of Monday evening, Feb. 20th.

The largest excursion of the season, and the last of the monthly California excursions over the Texas and Pacific, which have been so successful under the management of Dr. J. E. Ennis and his able corps of assistants, is now in El Paso. It came in two divisions, to Fort Worth, the one under Dr. Ennis from St. Louis; the other in charge of Maj. Lewis from Kansas City. There the train was made up in nine sections, each of six cars and the best engines of the road had been set apart for the service. It was moved admirably without a jar or hitch. The train was made up of 29 sleepers besides baggage cars. There were 1400 passengers aboard. Nineteen States of the Union, also Canada and England were represented. A list of names of the passengers, and their residence was given and old Michigan ranked among the first, 86 persons were among those in the immense excursion. In the list of names from Michigan were the names of E. S. Tate and wife of Tecumseh and Mrs. W. E. Barrett of Ridgeway. It is the largest excursion that ever crossed the continent, and not an accident has occurred. The passengers were pleased with the management and enjoyed the scenery, and prairie dog towns along the route, and were jolly, not a grumbler or kicker aboard.

The W. F. M. meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Benton, Wednesday, March 14th. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The L. C. S. will hold an ice cream social at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson, Friday evening, March 16th. An interesting literary program with good music, will be presented. We all know what a social at Mrs. Wilson's means, so all come and have a good time.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Lenawee County Board of School Examiners will hold a two days teacher's institute and examination in the school building at Ridgeway, on Thursday and Friday, March 29, 30. All the teachers in the north eastern part of the county, as well as those who have any thought of becoming teachers, should avail themselves of so valuable an opportunity. Farther particulars will be given next week.

GOOD ENOUGH FOR HIM.

Mr. Asa B. Rowley, Druggist, was induced to try some of the Papillon Catarrh Cure by his customers, after several physicians pronounced he would soon have consumption from an aggravated case of Catarrh. He says, "The result was unprecedented. I commenced to get well after the first application, and am now, after a few weeks, entirely cured." Papillon extract of flax Catarrh Cure will do all that is claimed for it. Large bottles $1.00

DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey to the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition, in the daring of its inception, had the wildness of a romance; while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it sought and w[illegible] it was absolutely sublime.—JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale that ever emanated from the brains of the leaders of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1863.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could undertake in America.—COMTE DE PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,

A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

We were aroused the next morning early—as it seemed to us, but really late—by the opening of the trap door, and the delicious shower of cool air that fell upon us. As we looked up we saw the white head of our old jailer framed in the opening, and heard him saying, in drawling tones, "Boys, here's your breakfast." Then he lowered, hand over hand, a bucket at the end of a rope, till it was within reach, when it was eagerly secured from below.

THE CHAINED MEN DESCENDING INTO THE DUNGEON.

There was a strong brotherly feeling among the East Tennesseans, and not less in our party. So the division of the food—a matter of great importance—was scrupulously fair, the week getting as much as the strong. Meek was given as much as any of the rest. There was but a tiny fragment of corn bread and a still smaller slice of unsavory meat for each, not one of us as much as he could have eaten with the keen appetite I said relation. I felt hungrier after devouring it than before. It was now nearly 9 o'clock, and we were told by the old citizens of the jail that in 24 we only served twice a day, and that we would not be more till the middle of the afternoon. They also encouraged us by saying that after we had been in there for a month or two, we would not feel so hungry! It was not hard to believe this, in fact, we thought that less time than that would cure our hunger forever!

There was now a feeble glimmer of light in our den, by means of which we could form a better idea of our character, than on the preceding evening. But there was nothing reassuring in the survey. Our eyes had become used to the feeble twilight, which was all that ever visited us here, and we could look on each other's pallid faces. The Union men had not been able to change their garments for months, no water was ever given to them or us for washing, and their faces wore a look of hopeless misery, in the majority of cases, which was terribly pathetic. Under no circumstances did our spirits sink so low, or did we suffer so much from [illegible] The very danger we were in, the assurance that our fate, one way or the other, would probably be determined in a short time, the consciousness in our own power to make a bold stroke for freedom if the faintest chance was allowed, and still more the sense of comradeship and the interest in telling our stories and covering each other—all these contributed to make us bear more cheerfully.

Of these twenty-four men, eight were hanged, viz.: Andrews, Campbell, Wilson, Brady, Robinson, Free, Wood and Knight. Of the remaining sixteen, Parker, Bullitt, Reese

FARMERS SOCIAL CLUB

Tuesday evening, Feb. 28th, the Farmers Social Club held a very interesting meeting at A. P. Codding ton's. The roads were very rough, there was a good turnout, showing that bad weather and roads do not deter the farmers from meeting together to discuss questions of interest.

The question "In what way can farming be made to pay best for the amount of labor done?" was discussed in a lively manner.

Mr. Horton: All my life my great hold has been wheat raising, but the time has now come when we cannot depend upon wheat and we have got to get a substitute, but what that shall be is the question. I believe there is more money in stock, corn, oats and hay, but according to the statistics of Prof. Johnson of the college the beef interest is too expensive. If a high tariff could be continued there might be money in sheep, at any rate there is a growing interest in that direction.

R. B. Gillespie: This is a hard question to answer, but the time is past for raising wheat, and if we had hogs and sheep on hand there might be money in them but as American people we are apt to overdo the matter, as we are producers not consumers. I cannot agree with Mr. Herton in regard to high tariff on wool, as the price of wool is made by a few men but I think there is money in mutton, as I was talking with a man from the east who said he sold lambs of 45 lbs. weight for 20 cts per pound.

F. Rector: The cattle trade is certainly overstocked. The country never was so full of cattle and wheat does not pay, but I believe we must keep up the fertility of the soil and raise whatever will do well.

Mr Griswold: I cannot see any better way than to keep right on as we have been doing and raise a variety of crops and also raise some stock.

Abner Wilson: I am a gardener and perhaps should not try to teach a company of farmers, but we gardeners learn to economise labor more than you realize. I do not do much labor with the hand or in a haphazard way but with a slow, quiet horse at first. In harvesting wheat I usually thresh from the shock and sell from the machine. I think it is not good economy to try to get along without what belongs to the farm requires.

Mr. Conklin finds it profitable to sell machines and let his wife run the farm.

W. Keyser: I think it better to keep more stock and raise less wheat, as we can raise stock with less labor and expense and thus divide the labor, caring for the stock in winter without paying for more labor and raise hay and corn for them at home.

Mr. Horton: I think this is the best time to go to raising stock, as the business is going to the west, in the west and this is the time to begin to raise stock.

Mr. Gillespie: If we continue to sell farming as we have done we will become farmers with no stock at all times and they will be ready to say that they can have something to eat or market when it pays. There are but few men who can chase it profitably to both and the energies of one thing but men who are adapted for special lines can make it profitable.

Mr. Coddington: Farmers here on our small farms should not have stock enough. It may do to pay attention to specialties in other states where there are large farms and they can do business on a large scale. I found in traveling in the west that the herds of cattle and sheep were very small to the range, and as these lands are taken up the herds will of necessity grow smaller and the land will be found more profitable in raising wheat and other crops, and I think we better not discard raising stock.

Mr. Foster: I agree with the others that we better give more to farming and give our best efforts to the work. With hard work and economy we may have better profit.

Charles Keyser: The most successful man I know of makes a specialty of raising hay and selling it and his farm is kept in good condition and he always has something to turn off for money, and makes money easily for the amount of labor done.

The adjournment to meet Tuesday evening, March 20th, at Jacob Everhart's with the following program:

Singing.
Recitation—Garfield Gillespie.
Inst. Music—Anna Everhart.
Sec. Read.—Mrs. John Gillespie.
Quiz—Messrs. Rector and Doty.
Essay—May Farley.
Song—Kate Griswold.
Rec.—E. Vp. Fisher.
Charade—Mr. and Mrs. J. Fisher.
Question—What practical benefit have we received from the farmers institute? Opened by I. H. Schneider.

MRS. F. T. RECTOR, Sec.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Edited by a Committee of the W. C. T. U.

THE SALOON DEFENDS ITSELF.

It does seem a little peculiar to me that in all this local option talk, nothing has been said on our side of the question. Preachers, and lecturers have denounced us, and editors have called us hard names, but there has been no one to raise his voice in our behalf. The result is that people have very unfriendly feelings toward us, and mistaken notions about our business. One would think from the pieces which have been printed in the MICHIGAN ADVOCATE that we were bad, only bad, and that continually. Not it is true that we are getting rich and fare sumptuously every day, and have nice carriages to ride in. But for all of that we have our troubles. And no one seems to feel sorry either. When we ride out of a pleasant afternoon there is a drop of gall that bitters all the sweet, when some jealous heart in a less pretentious turn-out points his finger and says, "That rig was bought with whisky." My wife cannot go shopping, but the urchins on the streets point her out as the saloon keeper's wife. She speaks to me about it, and wishes I would engage in some other occupation. But I can't do it. Haven't I got to live? My little girl attends the high school, and you would suppose that the venomous tongues would recoil at her sweet presence, wouldn't you? But go where she will, that mantle goes with her—your father is a saloon keeper. The little one comes to me with her plaint. "Why do all people hate you, my own dear, kind papa? What is it, do tell me, papa?" I gulp down my hatred of all men and work quietly away. Do you think this pleasant? Somehow they are all the time discounting my opinions, just as though I do not read and think and form correct judgments about things.

If I attempt to express my views upon the topics of the day or tell a funny story to illustrate my point, there is sure to be some urchin in the crowd who will say: "Bully—give it to 'em old gin and sugar. Give 'em some more of that hot whisky punch!" on the streets the little boys will say: "He's well heeled—but whisky did it." Temperance orators shout my name, call me fiend-devil, accuse me of selling poison, liquid fire, damnation swill, stop, call me a promoter of brothels, robbery, murder, arson and every other crime. And if I tell these men I must live, they coolly tell me, "They don't see the slightest necessity for it." I am snubbed and rebuffed at every turn. No man respects me as a man. But I must live. You say that I might get into some other business instead of dealing out drinks to that touzled-headed remnant of a man there. Well, perhaps I could. But you see if I don't sell to him somebody else will, and I might just as well take his money as to have some one else to do it. You ask me if I don't see his squalid, poverty-stricken wife and children living in rags and filth? Yes, and I don't go around kicking down tenements. But I do wish that fellow would keep away from my place. He comes often, and sometimes his wife comes after him, and begs on her knees that I would not sell her husband any more liquor. But what am I to do—he'll have it somewhere and if I drive him away from me, why some one else will have to be bothered with him.

Now all I really ask of you temperance people is to be let alone. That's not asking much, is it? I will mind my business if you will mind yours. Don't you know that I keep a respectable place? My saloon is quieter than churches on Woodward avenue, even if it isn't quite as fine. The question I would like to ask the preachers is, Why can't men be decent in their drinking? I can drink [illegible] drink? No, sir. I like a little of it, but I know when I've got enough. Then I stop. Why wouldn't that poor miserable O'Flynn have done like me. He made a brute of himself. Yes that lady at the opera house last Sunday afternoon did say some true things. But why should she blame me for what low-down saloon keepers do? No one would have thought Jim Brown would have beaten his wife to death. I am glad he didn't get drunk in my place, for people would have blamed me. He came here and drank three or four times, and then went down to some of those low dives on Atwater street where they sell liquid hell, and got crazy drunk. What, you don't mean to tell me that these places are only a step down from mine, and that Jim Brown learned to drink in my place? That's a lie. It is not true. I always stop selling a man when he's had enough. I am no murderer. Jim didn't get drunk at my place. I told him he had got enough, and wouldn't let him have any more. I keep a respectable place, I tell you. I pay my license. I shut up on Sunday when the police ordered me to—for one Sunday. My place would have been shut every Sunday since, only the others all kept open, and I saw that the prosecuting attorney and the judges and the police department didn't care. When I get out among decent people I sometimes do get a glimpse of the real meanness of my business. But then, what is the use? The government must think it is honorable and all right, or they wouldn't license it. Do you know that I have some of the best men in this town on my bond?

Where's my son Tom? Oh, I don't know! He was an ungrateful child. He got to drinking pretty bad, and I had a talk with him, and you'd have been as surprised and disgusted as I was to hear him go on. He said I had learned him to drink, that he'd heard me say many a time that any man was a boy that couldn't drink a little and stop when he had got enough, and all that kind of nonsense. I think he was kind of crazy. He said that when we had both gone to hell together he'd have Satan put me in the warmest corner. And one day when we had it sharper than usual he swore he'd leave me, and went away. I guess he'll come back pretty soon when his money is gone. He can't save a cent for himself, but before I let him come back I am going to make him promise to behave himself. His mother idolizes that child, and she don't give a minute's rest talking of him and predicting that some evil has befallen him. But then he'll come back soon. He was a bright, sunny child, so smart and winsome, with such a clear blue eye—just the mine my wife used to say—and twenty to day. What! What is that you say? Tom dead! Oh! it can't be sir. Did you say he was stabbed in a drunken row over a game of card? How can I ever tell his mother? He was her pride, her joy. Better quit the business? Well, I rather think not. Ha, ha, ha, ha. It's a low kind of life, but then I've got to live. You temperance fanatics call this a poor, lame excuse. It's, Exit—all the one I've got.

THE LATEST RETURNS FROM THE ELECTION.

NORTHERN LENAWEE FARMERS CLUB

Although a dark night, and bad roads were encountered by those who ventured out, a good many were at the meeting at A. P. Halliday's. The program was shortened by the absence of some who were to take part, but enough were there to make it interesting.

O. P. Remington opened the discussion on the question, "At what age are pigs most profitable to sell?" by saying that he did not sell pigs, he waited till they were hogs; thought quick growth most profitable.

A. P. Halliday did not know what was the dividing line between pigs and hogs. Thought farmers were too careless about feeding pigs, few of them knew what quantities they feed and how much gain they receive from it. I would not crowd young pigs too much; begin at about 4 months old and crowd for 2 or 3 months. Two or three pounds a day is not an ordinary gain for older hogs; believed in early feeding and quick returns. Pork raising is a very important industry.

J. F. N. Bowen said that no pig was a hog except the old-fashioned razor-backs. Pigs should be kept ready for market at any time. Thought pigs sold at about 6 mos. old most profitable. Had weighed pigs he was feeding every month, gained 1½ lbs. a day when feeding 1 bu. of shelled corn per day to 22; thought too much feed was used to fatten a hog 1 yr old or over.

M. G. Updyke thought Millfeed most profitable feed for young pigs. Had started pigs on millfeed and at nine and ten months had weighed and beaten corn-fed pigs 2 lbs. for 1. Had grown 3 lbs. a day. Could make a pig 6 mos. old gain 2 lbs per day.

A. P. Halliday knew of a hog gaining 4 lbs. pe day. Would rather feed barley than mill-feed.

W. B. Keyser knew nothing about mill-feed; did not believe pigs would over eat and get stunted if they had exercise. Thought that the quicker you could make a pig weigh 200 lbs the more profit there was in him.

The date for the meeting to be held at O. P. Remington's, was changed from Wednesday to Friday evening, March 16th. The program is as follows:

MRS. MORGAN TALKS TO DOCTOR LANCH.

MAN, MICH., Morgan, Sept. 1887.

DOCTOR—Do you remember my coming with you some months ago about my rheumatism, and that one of my power limbs was partially paralyzed from the effects? I asked you about the Springs, and you replied to me that if there was anything under the sun that would cure me to take it. So I commenced using Hubard's Rheumatic Syrup, and I want to say to you that it is the greatest medicine in the world. I firmly believe that fuzziness that troubled me as well as the rheumatism is cured, and my blood is in a healthy condition. My appetite and sleep are both good, and I am healthy. Doctor, that is a great family medicine, and you need not hesitate to recommend it.

MRS. THOMAS MORGAN.

OVER THE RIVER.

Lucy Olivia Tefft was born in Marcellus, Oneida County, N. Y., Aug. 9th, 1858. She came to Michigan with her parents in April 1869, when her father bought the old Thos. Lovett farm in Raisin. She attended the district school in the vicinity until she had passed all the classes and afterwards was a pupil in Raisin Valley Seminary for two years. Her father sold his farm in the spring of '82 and since then the family have resided in this village. For the past five years the deceased has been in feeble health, having been troubled with premonitory symptoms of consumption. She never surrendered the hope of final restoration to health, but battled against fate with a heroine's devotion. On the 12th of October last she went to Riverside, Cal., to spend the winter months, and during the first few weeks of her residence there was much benefited. Recently however she became worse, with a tuberculous formation in the throat, and on the morning of Feb. 21st, her frail body surrendered to the dread destroyer. Her brother Oliver, who was living in that section, was summoned by telegraph but failed to arrive until after her death. On the 24th he started on the long sad journey across the continent with his sister's remains, and arrived in Tecumseh on Wednesday the 29th. The funeral services were held at Mr. Tefft's residence, on Friday afternoon, March 2d. Many beautiful floral offerings adorned the casket, and the house was filled with mourning friends. The choir sang a responsive service and Rev. J. M. Getchell offered a few words of consolation, which reached the hearts of all.

Lucy, as she was called by her intimates, was a young lady of fine talents and possessed of a remarkably cheerful disposition. Kind words always graced her lips and her daily life was a constant record of friendly deeds. Death cometh to all soon or late. When the dread messenger summons his victim in the flower of youth, the blow is softened by a father's acts of kindness and by a mother's words of love. But when a young life is blotted out far from home and kindred, it seems doubly sad. No mother's hand stroked her feverish brow, no sister's voice cheered her aching heart. Her spirit broke the shackles that bound it, when her father and mother, sister and brother were hundreds of miles away. The skill of care and medical skill were sparingly given by her Riverside friends, but to the death stricken sufferer there is no place like home. Her life was faultless and beautiful on earth. Her earthly trials are now over and she has passed to her eternal inheritance on high.

Heaven gives its favorites early death.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

H. E. Anderson is at Davisburg this week.

Hudson is already talking about a base ball club.

L. M. Waldron has moved into the Whitter house, which he purchased.

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Hicks of Oscoda are visiting relatives in Tecumseh.

The New Peoples Cyclopedia is the latest and best now on the market.

The members of the Morenci fire department are paid $1.50 each annually.

Will McClenahan started for Tallapoosa, Ga., last Tuesday on a prospecting tour.

Mrs. H. E. Anderson started for Cleveland, Tenn. Monday, for a few weeks visit with her son.

Fred Burger and his two sisters, Mary and Carrie, will start for Elgin, Ill. next Monday.

Wm. Smith is spending some time in Toledo preparing to sell the "New Peoples Cyclopedia."

Adrian has organized a Young Men's Republican Club, but men up to 90 are eligible to membership.

We invite all who are in need of engraving to call at the HERALD office and inspect our samples and prices.

C. A. Sharp, of Columbus, Ohio, was in Tecumseh last Friday. He was called home to Ridgeway by the serious illness of his mother.

The sugar social at the M. E. Church last evening was largely attended and about $12 was realized for the benefit of the organ fund.

We regret to learn that B. J. Coller of Adrian is going to Florida. We call attention to his ad of a closing out sale in another column. Here is a cheme to buy pianos and organs cheap.

In Hernings meat market you can see a fine birds eye view of Napa City, Cal. This is the town where Fred Herning is now located and he sent the lithograph home to his father.

The village safe that is kept in the council room was exceedingly safe last Saturday as no one in the village could be found to open it and an expert from Detroit had to be imported. He was successful.

There will be a meeting of the Union Picnic committee at the HERALD office Saturday March 17th. at 2 P. M. It is requested that all farmers clubs in this vicinity send one delegate. W. B. Keyser Sec.

The Detroit Tribune will soon commence the publication of Robert Lewis Stevensons new serial story, entitled "the Outlaws of Tunstall Forest." The illustrations alone cost $2000. The Tribune has made a ten strike in securing this story.

Since buying out his father's grocery business, Will Anderson has made several changes for the improvement of the interior of his store and has one of the neatest places of business in town. He will undoubtedly increase the large trade he already has.

Last Thursday evening a large party of G. A. R. boys gave their comrade, Charles A. McNeil, a surprise, about forty taking him by storm. After enjoying a good time and partaking of refreshments prepared by the hostess they returned to their homes feeling first rate.

The HERALD Job Rooms have just issued a catalogue of the Jonathan Hall Library at Ridgeway. The pamphlet contains the articles of association and by-laws and a complete catalogue of all the books. It is one of the neatest jobs ever issued from this office.

While the canvass was in session last Saturday evening when the crowd was the greatest, about 200 being present, the floor of the room was heard to give forth two ominous sounds, as though the joists were cracking, and nearly created a panic. The floor was said to have settled nearly two inches.

Owing to the very successful dance given by the K. of L. on the 29th. of last month, they will give another social hop on Wednesday evening, March 14th, at Bidwell's Hall. Refreshments will be served during the evening. Another enjoyable time is anticipated. Come and enjoy yourself. Tickets 50 cts. Ladies free.

Miss Alice Lazell of Manchester visited with her friend Miss Julia Wyrill a few days this week.

The winter term of four months in District No. 9, Franklin, closed last Friday. The number of pupils enrolled for the term was 29, with an average attendance of 21. Harry Marshall, age 8 years, who had a distance of two miles to walk, was absent only five days during the term. The following pupils were neither absent nor tardy during the term:

Frank Cole, age 18, Roy Withered, 11; Artie Brighton, 9; Cora Swift, 9; Alta Bradley, 7.

M. NELL PARKER, Teacher.

Jno. Mason of Adrian was in Tecumseh Monday.

Bishop Harris has appointed April 8 (the Sunday after Easter) as the time for his visitation of St Peter's Church at Tecumseh.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crosby received a large number of their friends last evening at their residence and entertained them finely.

Persons desirous of obtaining life insurance at actual cost, should write for circulars to the SECURITY MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY, No. 233 Broadway, New York.

The Ladies Social of the Universalist church will be held at the residence of Guilford Burtch Friday afternoon, March 9. Supper from 5 to 7. All invited. L. L. STACY, Sec.

We learn from a reliable source that J. C Clough of Battle Creek, formerly a resident of this village, has become hopelessly deranged in mind and taken to an insane asylum.

L. L. Bates has purchased the interest of his partner in the meat business and will go it alone in the future. He will be pleased to see all his old friends as well as new ones.

Mrs. T. E. Webb, of Medaryville, Ind., arrived in town Friday evening. She will remain several weeks visiting her sister, Mrs. Myron Conklin, and other relatives and friends. Mrs. Webb has been ill for several weeks and came here for recuperation.

Philip DePuy of Reading and Jas. DePuy of Owasco Cayuga N. Y. are visiting friends in Tecumseh and Macon for a few days. James DePuy is the new Democrat post master of his town. They expect to eat some Democrat turkey at Frank DePuy's.

A. P. Coldington reports a thoroughbred Shropshire lamb weighing thirty pounds when it was twety nine days old. It is one of a pair of twins the other one weighing 24 pounds at the same age, making fifty three pounds for the pair: who can beat it?

S. C. Stacy spent last Saturday and Sunday with his brother George at Elgin Ill. He stopped over in Chicago on Monday on his return to make a few business calls and arrived at home Tuesday morning. Although he struck a cold spell he had a very pleasant trip.

The Sheep Breeders and Wool growers of Franklin and vicinity will meet at E. Buck's store on Saturday Eve Mar. 17th, 1888 at seven o'clock to make arrangements for a Spring shearing and to transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting. T. E. Bradley Pres't.

The central telephone office will be moved from its present location over Strong and McNair's store to Marks and Russell's drug store. The new telegraph line from Ridgeway will also connect there, which with the other two lines will make a central office for all kinds of messages.

Prof. Byron W. Cheever died at his home in Ann Arbor last Tuesday of pulmonary trouble. He contracted a severe cold during a recent trip to Arizona and grew rapidly worse on his return. The professor was a graduate of our High School class of '59 and held a chair in the pharmacy department of the University.

John J. Orr opened his new store yesterday. It is fitted out with entire new sheiving and fixtures, the walls are papered, and altogether it presents an attractive appearance. Ernest Goff has taken a clerkship. Mr. Orr has had fourteen years experience in the drug trade and he now opens a store on his own account under the most favorable auspices.

The funeral of Mr. John Wilson was attended at the house of his brother Mr. William Wilson on Railroad street, on Friday last. Mr. Wilson died suddenly of congestion of the heart in Montana and his remains were brought here for interment. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. H. Ramsey of the Presbyterian church.

T. F. Pryne of Detroit, Deputy Grand Master Workmen of the Ancient Order of United Workmen is in Tecumseh for the purpose of organizing a subordinate Lodge of that order. This is the oldest and strongest fraternal, benevolent order in the country having over two hundred thousand members and has paid over $20,000,000 to the families of its deceased members.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh.

A meeting of citizens is hereby called, to be held at the Council building Friday evening, March 9th, at 7:30 P. M., for the purpose of considering the advisability of making an attempt to induce the Gale Mfg. Co. to locate in this village. A full attendance is earnestly requested. D. T. HALL.

THE VILLAGE ELECTION.

The corporation election last Monday was considered by old timers as one of the most exciting on record. From the opening to the close of the polls representatives of two tickets were busying in more wire at electioneering. Although the issue seemed to lie between the saloon element and temperance people, as to who should run the wheels of the village government, anyone could tell by a glance at the two tickets that all were temperance men thereon.

The caucus held Saturday evening was the largest for years, and selected a strong corporation ticket, consisting of some of our most prominent business men. The temperance people held an adjourned caucus after the regular one, and put up an equally strong ticket, and a close contest was the natural result. Another amusing feature was the misunderstanding of some as to the difference between corporation and town registration, and many who had registered for town election found, on being challenged, that their names were not on the village registration book, and were consequently obliged to forego the pleasure of voting. It was however about an even thing between the two tickets, as challenging was indulged in freely on both sides. The whole number of votes cast was 440, of which two were thrown out, as in two cases two tickets were rolled up together. The number of straight tickets was—corporation 180, and temperance 178. The total was corporation 230, and temperance 208. The following list gives the number of votes each candidate received, and by reference to which can be seen the close nature of the contest.

For President,

THE GALE PLOW WORKS.

Many of our readers are doubtless aware of the fact that the Gale Plow works of Albion are intending to change their location. In reply to a letter addressed to the Company by D. T. Hall they state their ultimatum, which reply is herewith given:

D. T. HALL ESQ.—DEAR SIR:—Your recent favors in regard to locating our works in your locality have been duly considered by our Company at a meeting held on Saturday, March 3rd at which time following decision was reached, viz., all cities or towns desiring to secure the Gale Plow Works will please forward at once a bona fide proposition covering the following points and stating shipping facilities to points in East, New York, Penn., Ohio and N. J. and for West and Southwest. The amount of land donated not less than 20 acres, to be approved by the Gale Mfg. Co., and amount of cash bonus in addition to land.

Kindly send information on such points as is herein indicated that we want and send to us so we can take your proposition under consideration. We have deferred our meeting for final action until March 20th, but it will be necessary for us to have your proposition before the 13th, as our committee will require the intervening time between the 13th and 20th to visit the most desirable locations.

Yours truly,
GALE MANFG. CO.

A citizens' meeting will be held at the Council rooms tomorrow Friday evening, to take this subject into consideration, and it is hoped that every business man in Tecumseh will be in the meeting. Let us take hold of the matter in earnest and make it boom.

SEED OATS.

It will pay you to buy the Early Swedish Oats for seed, as they yield the most and stand up the best of any. Read what J. W. Baker says about them and call and see the oats.

C. A. SLAYTON.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Mar. 7, 1888.
C. A. SLAYTON—DEAR SIR:—The Early Swedish Oats I got from you last Spring and sowed have proved all you claimed. I sowed the New Welcome and White Russian oats also, giving each one a good chance, and the Early Swedish yielded twenty 20 bushels per acre more than either. The straw is very stiff and they stand up better than any other variety I ever raised. I am well pleased with them and will sow all of the Early Swedish this year. Yours truly,
J. W. BAKER.

Card of Thanks

We painfully extend our heartfelt thanks to those friends in Tecumseh and at Riverside, Cal., who so kindly rendered their aid and sympathy in our recent affliction.

THE DAKOTA BLIZZARD BY ONE WHO WAS THERE

EDITOR OF THE HERALD: My last letter to the Herald was written from the gaseous region of Ohio, and presented to your readers a picture quite in contrast to the one I now present from this country of cold winds and blizzards.

We open up with the following extract from our city paper because such truthfulness on the part of a local editor in this country we consider the strongest warrant we can have for telling the truth as it appears to us.

"The storm of last Thursday and Friday was the worst that ever swept over this country since it has been inhabited by only a few pioneers. The old settlers and those that lived in any of the western states remember the terrible blinding storm that swept over the northwest Jan. 7, 8 and 9, in 1873 in which so many lost their lives and so many more became cripples for life from the effects. This storm swept over Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois, blocking railroads even into Chicago and St. Paul and causing much loss of life and suffering. The death roll swells to over one hundred and keeps increasing, besides many more who will not be found until the spring shall remove the snow. Eastern people will no doubt be again seared and horrified by the accounts, which will no doubt be greatly exaggerated by the time it reaches their ears. But the greatest loss of life comes from Dakota on account of the scarcity of settlers and the few landmarks that guide one at such a time. Had the same thing happened in Minnesota and Iowa years ago the loss would have been just as great. As time brings more settlers, and better highways are made for travel the accounts of lost travelers will be fewer, and had Dakota the number of homes that New York state has, freezing to death on the prairie would be an uncommon occurence here."

We do not remember the storm of 1873 but we do remember several that we have experienced in this country during the past four and a half winters, and we remember writing of each of them, "The worst storm of the season," or "The worst storm known in this section for years," or "The worst storm ever known here," all of which was true and does not in the least detract from the truth of the first clause of the above editorial. If it was not the worst storm may the worst one be reserved for a future generation of buffalo bulls, or at least until we can read of it at a remote distance.

If it will not be wearying to your readers I will attempt a description of this much written and talked about, slandered perhaps, and never to be forgotten storm. It began on Wednesday, the 11th, coming from the south but with no unusual force but gradually increased through the night and on Thursday morning showed unmistakeable signs of a "bad one." At noon Thursday it became evident that we were going to have a blizzard or what is so called. I went home, some three eights of a mile, to dinner and had to work hard to get back to the school house, so strong was the wind and blinding the snow. The smaller children who went home to dinner did not return to school in the afternoon. In less than five minutes the wind changed from south to northwest and as suddenly increasing in fury and the snow in quantity and density. All objects whether near or far were hidden entirely from sight. To attempt to go even a short distance over a well known path or road became absolutely dangerous. Tracks were obliterated as fast as made. Between three and four o'clock parents began to fight their way through the storm to the school house after their children and it was with difficulty that they succeeded in getting them home in safety. After the greatest care in wrapping them up, some of them had their noses, ears, cheeks or necks frozen but none seriously. Those who were in from the country were kept in town all night.

Thus the storm raged until toward morning of Friday when it began to abate, but the cold was much more intense, the temperature Friday morning being 20 below zero.

Although we had no idea that a child would be allowed to go out on such a morning we battled our way against the wind to the school house to find that the janitor, concluding the night before that there could not be any school, had let the fires all go out, and as we burn coal and as there was no wood on the ground we could not get the house warmed in time to be of any use if any pupils came, and could do no better than to retreat to the store of K. E. Rudd and watch for the venturesome. We succeeded had a half dozen boys and girls, from 9 to 16 years of age who had started for school, inside the store and Mr. Wagor, Mr. Penn, and ourself holding snow to their frozen noses, ears, cheeks, and foreheads. After the frost had been drawn in this manner and they had warmed themselves they seemed as chipper as though it was a balmy June morning and with not a whimper out of one of them. Notwithstanding the intense cold and unbeaten paths we could have had a school of over 25 pupils.

Right here I'd like to give you a picture of our town as it appeared on this Friday morning as I went to school. Black ink, a coarse pen and a poorer penman [illegible] at outfit with which to paint a winter scene. Could your readers with help me with their imaginations I will make the attempt, for the sake of practice if nothing more. Imagine the business portion of Chicago street built on one side only, with a railroad and railroad buildings, elevators, lumber yard, coal sheds, etc., opposite. Take a position at the east end of the street below the park and take a look westward up the street to find the business houses and dwellings barricaded with a range of snow banks from five to twelve feet high with their summits four to fourteen feet from the buildings, the base excluding on one side to the buildings with a depth of from two to four feet and on the other across the street in ridges from three to five feet deep.

But little effort has been made to remove the snow from the walk. Places have been dug down to allow of admittance into the stores but between buildings and doors the snow has not been removed, and in some places it would hustle any two of your heavy weight men to walk abreast without one or the other dragging his ear on the perpendicular walls of snow.

No effort has been made to remove the snow from the street. Remembering that this snow is packed in so solidly that it can only be removed in chunks and will bear up pedestrians you have some idea of the ease and safety of locomotion on our streets. Possibly a blizzard may come along with vim enough to pick up and whirl it over back of the stores or take it off down to St. Paul to see the Ice Palace. If not, then we shall have the pleasure of its company until April or May, or June, for we shall not have a "January thaw" as any other, or rains to remove them.

Went out to a neighbors to spend the evening and entered their front gate by walking over the top of the fence, the caps on the gate posts were just even with top of drift. So it is all over town; where ever their was an object to stop the snow there is a drift.

We have heard of no loss of life or great suffering in this immediate vicinity. It is reported that at the town sixteen miles from here one man was frozen to death, and one had both arms frozen off. We are not prepared to say how much the reports reaching the east are exaggerated, but it could not be otherwise than that very much suffering and loss of life should be the result of such a sudden and severe storm. At present we are having nice winter weather.

A Eastern editor sat in his lair

With a grimy look and disheveled hair,
Weaving Munchausen tales of despair
With fiendish glee.

[illegible]

To move his wife in a free-for-all
Sort of Kinglish spree.

He wrote of a hundred degrees below,
Of fifty foot drifts of blinding snow,
Of legions of victims Death laid low
On the drifted plain.

The babe frozen stiff in its mother's arms,
The gay young lass with her winsome charms
Old Boreas claimed for his ice-locked arms,
Adding the slain.

The editor laughed and he dipped his pen,
Looked out on the world with him then
And smiled with a smile as cold as men
And colder than ice.

"Ah there," said the scribe, "are you here, too?
I'm in search of material for a weekly stew
That's a thousand times worse than you
It's a fearful thing."

The Devil smiled the smile of a wizard,
He scratched his head from A to izzard,
Then said, "Yes, sir, A Dakota blizzard,"—
And the lie went forth.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medium of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is reached out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

this ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 10 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR MARCH 11th.

CHRIST ENTERING JERUSALEM.—MATT. XXI, 1-16.

NOTES.—"And came unto Bethphage."—This means House of figs, an Bethany means House of dates. Each was probably a different quarter to a long, straggling village. Bethphage has entirely disappeared——"An ass tied."—He mentions the mother with the foal. The ass in the East is by no means an ignoble creature. It is prized nearly as much as the horse. Its coat is glossy and its equipments are always handsomely kept.——Verse 4 explains that this happened not accidentally but according to divine fulfillment.——Verse 5. The author expresses the thought delightfully, but he is not punctilious about giving an exact quotation. This is a free rendering partly of the Hebrew and partly of the Septuagint, combining Isa. lxii, 41, with Zech. ix, 9——"Put on them their garments." Uncertain which he would mount, they covered both. The "thereon" refers of course to the garments. From verse 5 we are sure he sat upon the foal now. The multitude pay him now honor usually only granted to kings when they spread their garments and strew his path with branches——"Hosanna."—Ps. cxviii, 25, means bestow salvation, here speaking to God. It is somewhat like the French cry, Vive! the Latin Io Triumphe! It is a shout of salvation, "Save, we pray." It was a term usually applied to the Messiah. It is an acknowledgment on the parf of the people, that in their enthusiasm they recognized Jesus' true Messiahship at this time.——"Money changers,"—It was in the court of the Gentiles, the outer court, where the requisites for sacrifice were exposed for sale. These changers exchanged on commission the two drachmæ pieces, used to pay the temple tribute. This is the second cleansing of the temple that has taken place. The first can be found in John ii, 13.——Verse 13.—The quotation is from Isa, lvi, 7, also from Jer. vii, 11. It is also a free rendering.——The quotation is from Ps. iii, 2.

INSTRUCTION. Anything can be consecrated to the Lord: pots, kettles, animals, all that we have. Nothing is so insignificant but can do him service.

When the call is made in the name of Christ, let no one withhold his own. Even if it be the giving up of a highly prized possession, or even a dear son or daughter to his service.

When God sends us on errands it is well to go trustingly and unhesitatingly. These two disciples must have thought that a curious order to go ahead and find there two special animals stationed at that particular hitching post. But they obeyed cheerfully and went. The better they knew Christ the more they could trust him. It will be the same with us.

The disciples in default of polished trappings put their best on the colt for their master. Raleigh in default of a suitable pathway threw down his mantle for his queen. They were all noble. They had the mind for unselfish surrender. Undoubtedly the cloaks were soon what spotted in either case. So our hearts are spotted, but they are our best. Let us throw them down before our Saviour.

The eighth and ninth verses teach the nature of true enthusiasm. The crowds shouted "Hosanna" amid tears of welcome. It was one triumph for all. It was a mutual inspiration. But that was not all. They did what they could to show their loyalty and respect by casting garments and branches before their Prince of Peace. Huzzas are not enough to start any Christian enterprise. Enthusiasm must be interpreted by unwavering loyalty and increasing respect for the cause in continued action as well as by rejoicing words.

"Who is this?" All ask this momentous question. None can escape it. To each heart Christ may manifest himself in a peculiar way; but to all he is a product from God to man. Shall we in our day answer less than the multitude whom he heard and loved? He does all that and more for us.

Jesus acted with greater authority than that of a zealot in clearing the temple. It was a gigantic outrage that greed should intrude its leering face into its sacred courts. Our hearts are our temples. Only Christ can cleanse them from all opaque spots that God's pure rays fail to penetrate.

All services of the Church, all Christianity of the parish or home should be so simple and clear that the children can easily grasp the ideas that are to be conveyed. Their beautiful responses is the most inspiring element in the Christian life.

SHE MARRIED A SCHOLAR.

Oh she said she'd never marry any Tom and Dick and Harry
But she married some famous scientist of learning and renown;
But her Tom was quite commercial, and of Agassiz and Herschel
He was as ignorant, she said, as any circus clown.

But she married him for all that, and he was meek as any kitten
He went to making money and forgot his wild despair,
Forgot, I say, at any rate he hastened to degenerate a
Into a sordid business man, a trifling millionaire.

But she wed a scientific, and his tastes were quite terrific
For various kinds of insects and for toads and other game;
And instead of plaques and pictures, rattlesnakes and boa constrictors
He'd take into his sitting room to ornament the same.

As a jealous decorator he preferred an alligator
To a statue of Minerva or a bust of Henry Clay;
And you ought to hear him talk awhile of his bouncing baby crocodile
That he played with in his parlor just to while the time away;

And his cobra di capello, a very charming fellow,
Through his dressing room and bedroom used to nonchalantly drift;
And an elephant's proboscis and two young rhinoceroses
He presented to his children as a fitting Christmas gift.

But he sold his wife's piano to buy ipecacuanha
To feed his hippopotamus to ease his stomach aches,
And a shark ate up his baby, for you know how hungry they be,
And he went and pawned his overcoat to feed his rattlesnakes.

Met His Waterloo.

"Jes' a minute, if you please," said a man in western Nebraska as he came out of a house and hailed us as we were going past. "Did you happen to notice the school house much when you come past it down here a mile?"

"Yes, we saw it."

"School wasn't called yet, I reckon?"

"No."

"Was the boys out havin' a ring rastle an' whoop'n a good deal like Injuns?"

"No; everything was v'ry quiet."

"School house broke up any—winders gone or door st'ove in?"

"Guess not."

"See anything of the teacher?"

"Yes; saw him through the door, sitting with his feet on the desk reading a book."

"Was he? Seemed calm?"

"He appeared that way."

"See anything of a big, raw boned boy, with long arms an' big hands, wearin' a high felt hat painted red, white 'n' blue?"

"Yes; we noticed him."

"Wa'n't he walkin' 'round talkin' loud with his thumb under one galluss an' a chip on his shoulder?"

"No. He was sitting on the ground near the school house, with his back against a tree. His nose was all bloody, his arms were hanging down, and he looked sick. His clothes were about half torn off of him, and one of the small boys was carrying his striped hat full of water to him from the creek."

"Well, I swar if that don't beat me! Didn't holler no slang at you or offer to fight you?"

"I don't think he saw us at all—one eye was closed up."

"I expect—nothing surprises me now. I reckon the plan didn't work."

"What was it?"

"Wy, thar is boy my boy, you see, an' he jawed to him together this morning, I s'pose, I reckon from what you say something went wrong sot to me. The teacher gave him a longer 'rithmetic lesson than he cried, an' says I to him, 'Hop onto the little dood an' whale him—jes' show him that you understand what's the matter o' Hanker!' Bill said that he'd do it an' that I'd better see the other two school officers an' git another teacher somewhere, 'cause there wouldn't be enough o' this un left to wad a gun when he got done with him. Says he, 'Pap, don't be scart if you notice small pieces of a school teacher fallin' 'round here long durin' the forenoon.' One eye shet an' his nose bloody! An' Bill al'ays claimed he was a fighter, too! I'll be tetotally chawed if he ain't been trottin' in the wrong class for two years. When he gits home if I don't bring out the old strap an' larrup him myself then you can shoot me. A black eye an' nose all bloody! Say, wait till 4:30 o'clock an' you'll see a big, lazy, double fisted fraud of a boy git pounded all to pieces by his old father!"—Chicago Tribune.

THEATRICAL COMMENTS.

California Twenty Years Ago.

Edward Harrigan, the favorite actor, tells some amusing stories about his early experiences in California. Nearly twenty years ago he was coming down from a [illegible] It was a cold, snowy night, and he and his companions were huddled together smoking their pipes and longing for the town lights to appear. The stage driver and a friend were holding a desultory conversation on the box, to which Harrigan listened for want of something better to do.

"Say, Bill, were you in that show last night in the Eldorado opera house?"

"Were I? Well, I should say I were, and, if I ever lay hands on those crowd that gave that show I'll blow 'em full of holes, or my name ain't Bill Simmons. They ain't worth a pinch o' beans.

Harrigan was slightly amused at this openhanded criticism, but the next words of Jim made him a trifle uneasy.

"Bill," said Jim, "you don't mean to say you don't know who them officers inside is?"

"No, I don't," responded Bill.

"Why, they're the very actors themselves."

Then Bill shouted "Whoa!" to his horses and brought the stage to a standstill. He descended to the ground and opened the door of the stage.

"Git down!" was what he said to the occupants. They did not seem to understand him. "Git down, I tell yer," he shouted again, "or I'll put you out by the ears!"

The people within tumbled out with a great deal of grumbling and a great many oaths. When they were all ranged about in the snow Bill looked from one to another and addressed them as follows:

"I haven't got much to say to you fellers. But this is the way it is. I saw you try to give a show last night, and you can't ride on my stage. It's eight miles to town, and you can tramp it. You won't suffer half what I did last night."

The driver then mounted the box again, whipped up his horses, and disappeared. Harrigan and his friends walked into Sacramento very mad, but not daring to give their experience any publicity.

ARIZONA PETRIFIED FOREST.

The Hardest Stone Ever Polished Except the Diamond.

The wonderful petrified forest lying south of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad, near Holbrook, is one of the most remarkable natural curiosities in the West, and has frequently been described in these columns. The petrified logs and chips cover many hundreds of acres, and the stone is of incomparable beauty. Some of the Colorado or Yellowstone agates, the Mexican onyxes, or the most gorgeous marbles look shabby beside it. Its only drawback is its hardness. While Colorado agates average only 40 to 50 per cent of the hardest of diamonds this petrified wood averages 70 per cent. It cuts glass readily, is not "phased" by the finest file, and yields to nothing short of diamond dust. A great many attempts have been made to polish it but its fearful obstinacy has baffled the lapidaries. About four years ago, as readers of the Gazette may remember, a syndicate known as the Drake Company was formed to work the wood. It leased the land to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad and erected works for polishing. The attempt was met by all sorts of obstacles and by enormous expenses. The company has "blown in" fully $125,000; but, as a reward for its nerve is at last successful, and its $5,000 plant at Sioux Falls, D. T., is turning out the most superb stonework ever seen anywhere. One pillar of petrified wood, nine inches in diameter and thirty inches long, is now at Tiffany's in New York, and is valued at $800. There are also several big slabs, the largest agates ever polished, which are worth $500 apiece. One might think this a little high, but those familiar with cutting such stones are not surprised at the price. No other lapidary establishment in the United States can cut an agate face more than twelve inches in diameter. F. C. Hatch, Superintendent for the company at the petrified forest, had in Los Angeles a section of a large tree trunk thirty-three inches in diameter, it is worth $500. The hardest chilled steel saw procurable gnawed away at that section ten hours a day for sixty one days and eight hours. The saw at entrance was six inches wide, when it came out on the other side it was only two inches wide. Mr. Hatch had with him a lot of magnificent specimens which he put on exhibition at Bartlett's.

How Much a Man Eats.

It has been calculated that on the average each man who attains the age of three score and ten consumes during the course of his life twenty wagon loads of food, solid and liquid. At four tons to the wagon, this would require spend on an average of about a hundred ounces of food per day, or say some one hundred and twenty ounces per day during adult life, and about eighty ounces during infancy and youth. Most men do not come in regarding one hundred ounces of food per day, our ancestors to live on six half pints of liquid food and seven or eight pounds of solid food, as in excess of the real daily requirements of a healthy man or woman.

Yet probably most of us take more than this, in one way or another, during the day. Dr. Lankester, from an extensive analysis of the dietary of soldiers, sailors, prisoners, and the better paid class of artisans and men in London, found the average daily quantity of solid and liquid food to be one hundred and forty three ounces. Doubtless many do not take so much, but unquestionably many take much more than this. When one one mentioned before Sydney Smith the twenty wagon loads of food calculated for each man's allowance, he turned to Lord Durham, who, like himself, was corpulent (and not without sufficient reason), with the quaint remark: "I think our wagons, Durham, must be four horse loads." There are members of the London Corporation to seek no further. Whose wagons must be six-horsed ones and well loaded at that.

He Dealt in Futures.

"Do you understand, sir," he said to the young man, "that if you marry my daughter you may wed a portionless girl, that the property she has reason to expect will come to her may go elsewhere?"

"Yes, sir," responded the young man, nobly. "But I am willing to take the chances. Nothing venured, you know, sir, nothing gained."

Where Sardines Grow Large.

Gentleman from Maine to waiter—Them sardines, waiter, must have been picked after they were ripe. It takes a lot of them to make a mouthful.

Waiter—They are the finest imported sardines.

Gentleman—Well, I guess you've been swindled. Why, up in Maine, we git sardines as big as herrin'.

Does Farming Pay?

An impression somewhat general seems to prevail that farming is not [illegible] as other vocations; that more money can be earned in almost any other vocation with less labor; hence the farmer's son abandons the farm, where he is a success, for the uncertain gains of town.

[illegible] far from the truth. Take the farmers in every state in the West; most of them commenced life poor; if they have strictly adhered to legitimate farming and avoided speculation, in most cases they are well situated, and are far more comfortable than an equal number of associates who chose the town. Facts sustain us in the assertion that out of one hundred young men who leave the country for the town or city, not more than one becomes wealthy; perhaps one-tenth obtained a competency, and nine-tenths barely make a living. Out of one hundred young men who remain on the farm, possibly not, one becomes wealthy, but more than fifty per cent have substantial possessions and good houses, while most of the remainder make a good living and rear respectable families. The point to be impressed is that average young men are far more likely to succeed on the farm than in the town; although they may not actually make more money. One thing that has allured many from the farm is society, and schools may be added. In these particulars a marked difference can be observed within a few years to the credit of the country. Farm houses and surroundings are more beautiful; the sons are men of culture and the daughters are accomplished in the elegant as well as the useful. Society in the country is no longer rude; if it lacks some of the grace of the city, this is more than compensated by solid acquirements and an honest welcome, characteristic of a high bred people. The turning point has undoubtedly been passed, and the future great men of this nation will be farmers.—[Knapp.

Learned Professors Say.

The most serious diseases of the heart, says Prof. Da Costa, may occur without any symptoms. Prof. Trousseau, of Paris, states that death from heart disease is usually caused by congestion of the lungs, liver, stomach or kidneys, from imperfect circulation of the blood. Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is the latest and most reliable remedy for this little understood but grave disease. It has cured thousands of cases. Don't fail to try it. Ask for testimonals. Sold at Baker and Hall's Drug Store.

GOOD EVENING, MISS JENNIE; I am very much pleased at seeing you here. You sang beautifully. I understood yesterday that you could take no part in the exercises on account of a severe cold. Well, I did not expect to, but mama got me a bottle of Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam, and it helped me at once. That is so; I hear it spoken of in great praise.

I NEVER saw any thing like it. Everywhere I go I hear nothing but praise for Hibbard's Throat and Lung Balsam.

A Sensible Man

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung Troubles, than any other medicine. The proprietor has authorized Baker & Hall, to refund the money if after taking three-fourths of a bottle, relief is not obtained. Price 50c and 1. Trial size free.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

The funerals of Mrs. DeWitt Hendershot and Mrs. W. W. Hess last Friday A. M. and P. M., were both largely attended.

Mrs. Ella Rose and Margie returned home from Detroit Thursday last.

E. R. Smith took a trip east last week, as far as Dansville, N. Y.

Eddie Mills, son of Wright Mills of Dorr, Mich., is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Geo. Southworth, who has so long worked for Henry Mensing, left Saturday for Grosse Pointe. He is to work for John T. Clark.

Doctor Blatchford is to occupy the building just vacated by Mrs. McMaster.

Mrs. VanHouten of Grass Lake, visited C. E. Corwin's family over Sunday.

Mel Coffin has a class of eight scholars for the Guitar, and is forming one for the Violin.

Lydia and Sarah McNiel of Tecumseh, were at A. C. Stewart's from Saturday until Monday.

The Children's Missionary Society connected with the Methodist church will give an entertainment at the church, Friday evening. Admission 10cts.

The ladies of the Congregational church are to give a musical entertainment at the Town Hall, Friday evening, March 23rd. They will be assisted by several singers from abroad.

Dame Rumor was correct for once at least, as Chas. Parker and Mina Muir were married Saturday evening last. Congratulations are in order.

Doctor H. H. Brown of Lyons, Ohio, made his parents a flying visit the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Hendershot wish to express their thanks to the Grand Army boys, neighbors and friends for their kind attentions and sympathy in their great affliction.

J. S. Kies returned home the last of the week.

Will P. Hamilton and cousin, from Detroit, came over Saturday for a little hunt, but the weather was so bad they returned Tuesday afternoon.

Ed. Rose was here over Sunday.

The Kies building on the corner of Tecumseh and Chicago streets is being re-moddled. Mrs. Mattie Clark will soon occupy it with a stock of millinery goods.

Miss Libbie Kirchgessner has been home for several days.

Edward Kirchgessner of Monroe, arrived in town Wednesday to see his relatives here.

A number of the Masons attended the funeral of Arthur Case, at Manchester, Wednesday.

Chas. W. Parker went back to Detroit Monday afternoon, leaving his young bride with her people.

In the case of Mrs. Maria Larzelere vs. Frank Kirchgessner, which was tried at Adrian last week, the jury brought in a verdict for plaintiff of $4000.

The relatives and friends of Frank Kirchgessner have been greatly worried about him since Saturday, as he did not return home from Adrian as expected. They could get no trace of him until Wednesday, when a letter was received from him written in Chicago. They fear his anxiety over the late suit has unsettled his mind.

Joseph Wastell was with his father here Wednesday.

The village election Monday was very tame, there being but one ticket in the field, consequently the entire ticket was elected as follows:

S. Brown, President.
Geo. Calhoun, Wm. Amspoker, E. R. Smith—Trustees.
C. D. Cutting—Clerk.
W. D. VanTuyle—Treasurer.
Frank Brown—Assessor.
Ed. Semark—Street Com.
Dow Draper—Constable.

Mrs. Beard of Sandusky, Ohio, visited her friend Mrs. Ella Clark, Friday and Saturday of last week.

Fayette DePuy sold his fine Jersey heifer Florence Dombey, a few days since to George Wilson of Tecumseh, for which he received a good round sum.

C. A. Waldron of Tecumseh, and A. G. Hall of Raisin, visited C. D. Keyes Tuesday.

Mrs. C. B. McMaster and daughter Anna left Tuesday for Flint, their future home. During their sojourn here they have made hosts of warm friends who were very loathe to have them go. The citizens of Flint will gain a fine business woman in Mrs. M and a charming girl in Anna.

Kies & Kishpaugh shipped a fine White Dorking cockerell to parties in Detroit, Monday, and a pair of Mottled Java fowls to Vernon, Mich.

Peter Young, one of our German citizens, died Monday forenoon at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Casper Jacobs. The funeral was held at the house Wednesday.

The Miller family gave an entertainment at Town Hall, Monday eve. We are informed that quite a number of boys, almost men grown, made themselves particularly disagreeable by stamping, whistling and making remarks. How much longer this community will allow such disgraceful scenes at a public entertainment we know not. If persons who are old enough to know better will so conduct themselves as to disgust people generally, it is high time some summary measures were adopted to put an end to such annoyances. If a few of these disturbers were dealt with as they deserve, it would soon have a salutary effect and people could take some comfort at entertainments.

There will be a children's entertainment at the Methodist church, Friday evening, at 7 o'clock. There will be singing, recitations, motion songs, and other exercises to entertain. Come and encourage the children. Admission 10cts.

Married, at the home of the bride's parents, on Saturday evening, Mr. Chas. W. Parker of Detroit, and Miss Mina L. Muir of Clinton, Rev. A. W. Stalker officiating. The wedding was a quiet one, only relatives being present, and yet their friends remembered them and caused themselves to be remembered by some handsome gifts.

MACON MUSIC.

Will Kyle and wife have again taken up their abode with us, having moved here on Saturday last.

Horace Burgess has been seriously ill with neuralgia in the stomach, but is better at present writing.

The G. A. R. boys of this place attended the funeral of their comrade, Dewitt Hendershot, of Clinton, on Friday last.

The Baptist Aid society held at the residence of Mrs. Langan's, two weeks ago, was largely attended and a pleasant time reported.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mrs. Sharp, who has been a great sufferer with dropsy for the past six months, quietly passed away on Wednesday morning shortly after 5 o'clock.

Jesse Potter made a business trip to Toledo Monday.

Choir rehearsal at the home of Prof. Huston next Saturday evening.

Jennie Osgood is on the sick list at this writing.

The sidewalk boom has begun operation, as G. W. Clark built a new pine walk in front of his residence last week. As soon as the weather will permit D. W. Loree and Uncle Housman will build one in front of their residences.

Mrs. Daniel Allen went to Tecumseh one night last week to make her son, Frank, and family a visit. During the evening several of the young folks from this village joined with some of the Tecumseh young people and gave Mrs. Allen a surprise. They enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Ace Smith moved his family to Britton the first of the week. He, with his brother Lank, will carve the round for the citizens of Britton the coming season. We highly recommend them as a most respectable and jolly family.

Charles Gripton has moved back to his farm east of Britton, and is contemplating the erection of a house the coming summer.

The L. C. S. will give an ice-cream social at the home of Mrs. W. R. Wilson this week Friday evening. A short literary program and plenty of music will be furnished. The Miller band will give a variety of band selections. The proceeds are to be used in building a walk from the church to the library. Usual price, ten cents a dish for cream. A cordial invitation is extended to young and old to come out and enjoy an old fashioned time.

Since our last scribe real estate in the village has been changing hands a little. Mrs. D. W. Loree has bought of Allen Kelley the property formerly owned by G. W. Jackson, and Samuel Barlow the property owned by E. C. VanVleet on South street. Mr. Barlow will move his family to their new home in the near future and Jim will run the farm. We, in behalf of the citizens, welcome Mr. Barlow and family to the village.

The W. C. T. U. will give a public entertainment at Cottage Hall, Tuesday evening, March 20th, 1888, one half of the proceeds to go to the sidewalk fund.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

B. Kelley, who has been confined to the house for nearly two weeks, is at present writing some better, but as yet is unable to be out.

George Hoxsie is making a business trip to Louisville, Ky.

The C. T. line was extended again last Monday to the residence of Jerome Pullman.

Harry Pullman started last Monday evening for Dakota. Good luck to you, Harry.

Mr. John Iveson is at the present writing quite sick.

G. Anderson returned Monday from a trip to Ann Arbor, to the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Ash.

Wm. Doty has commenced "knocking out the maple syrup." We sampled some of the first batch, and all we have to say is, we would like to have a barrel of it in the cellar.

Geo. Hayward started last Monday for Nebraska. He has rented his farm to Will West, and if things suit him may not return.

N. Spencer purchased a fine road horse one day this week from a man living near Ridgeway. Nate won't take anyone's dust in the future.

We hear some talk of erecting a hall at this place, and we don't see why so rich a community as this cannot support one. There is hardly a small town around us that has not enterprise enough to erect such a building, and we can see no reason why the people of this vicinity should not be ashamed of not having one. Allowing us to give our opinion, it would be a good investment and pay good interest on the money.

The Miller family gave a fine entertainment at the school house last Friday evening, March 9th, and we must say it was far beyond our expectations. The cornet duet by Nett and Covert was applauded until they responded and furnished the audience with another fine duet. Little Fern was also called back after singing "Call me back again" and responded with "The Spanish Cavalier." She certainly is the finest singer for her age we ever saw. The house was filled to its utmost capacity and all passed off in fine shape.

Our school house was the scene of a pitched battle Monday. The teacher concluded to punish one of the boys for whispering, and as near as we can learn, gave him a few "winders" that he felt. Then after the teacher let him up he grabbed a ruler, and being reinforced by his chum, succeeded in driving the teacher from the house and chased him over to Mr. Doty's. That gentleman made the scholars go back to their lessons and got things quieted down. We think if the teacher cannot boss such small boys as this the board had better interfere.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Uncle Perry Allen was 90 years old St. Valentine's day.

Those who are so lucky as to own a sugar bush are now tapping their trees. Some of them have been tapped for two weeks, and some syrup has been made, but the weather has been very unfavorable.

David Burroughs has been under the doctor's care for a few days, but we hear is now better.

On Friday last the funeral of the fair young wife of Art Slate occurred, another victim of that fell destroyer, consumption. On the same day Wm. Burroughs, who has been for some years in very poor health, was also buried.

James Eddy has again engaged to help G. W. Allen with his farm work the coming season. Albert Demlhe will work for John Bunting, Edward Spaulding for Elias DePuy and Jacob Muhl for E. J. Whelan.

Mr. Wm. Lamkin and Mrs. Milton Frank have returned from a somewhat lengthy visit to their son and nephew, Frank Lamkin, in Pratt, Kansas. Frank Lamkin is now enjoying good health and is the happy father of a fine boy. Mrs. Frank Lamkin was getting along very nicely, indeed; had been able to ride the short distance to her sister Grace but a short time before the ladies departure for Michigan. She was prostrated by an attack of malarial fever, and since they reached home letters received from Kansas state that she has been much worse. The doctor says it is a sort of acclimatizer. Mrs. Burns expresses herself being very much pleased with Kansas.

And now is the time that saloonists for their own future comfort had better communicate with his satanic majesty. Jerome Conlin is trying to burn wood enough to cords of which will be sufficient to put out the fires of hades. At least, Met Burns says so.

The Franklin Union Literary and Lyceum met at the house of A. B. Wisner March 2d, the change in the place of meeting being caused by the previous stormy Friday evening. The night was exceedingly unpleasant, and many who were on the program were absent. The following therefore were presented: Rec., "In Answer," Nettie Allen; song, Willard Allen; dialogue, "Old Bob's Examination," G. W. and J. S. Allen; dec., Ernest Lamkin; paper, Anna Allen; song, Bertha Lamkin; dialogue, "The Flower of the Family"; memoirs of the society extending from 1860 to the present time. The dialogues were both excellent, the latter named being the best of the whole season. The question, Resolved, that dress is a better passport to society than education, was decided in favor of the negative. The last meeting of the season will take place at W. Allen's March 23.

On Tuesday, Feb. 28th, the friends of Jennie Osborne inflicted a surprise on their young lady. Her teacher and schoolmates, besides others, were on hand and report having a splendid time. On Friday evening occurred another surprise in which Miss Maud Poucher was the victim.

Miss Brown will give an exhibition at the close of her school in district No. 2.

[This letter should have appeared last week, but was unavoidably delayed.—ED. HERALD.]

WEST FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB.

The club met on the evening of the 9th, at the residence of Rev. Mr. Putnam, a large and interested audience being present. Meeting called to order by Prest. Love. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Sec. Crittenden and adopted; also the report of treasurer Bradley. A short literary program was then carried out which consisted of a song by Glee Club, essay by Mrs. Putnam, entitled, "How women can improve their health," which was a credit to her and was interesting to the hearers; song by Miss Amy Alexander, select reading by Ernest German, dialogue by Miss Burroughs and Miss Crittenden, chip basket by Miss Girty Wheaton, song by Glee Club, remarks by Rev. Mr. Putnam. The Halcyon Home was the name then announced for this place.

A motion was then made and carried to change the name of the club to that of West Franklin Farmers' Club. A short recess was then taken.

Meeting again called to order and the election of officers for the ensuing year proceeded with which resulted as follows:

Prest.—J. Q. Osborn.
Vice Prest.—Mrs Crittenden.
Sec.—Elmer Wilson.
Treas.—F. C. Bradley.
Reporter—Clifford Crittenden.

Remarks by the retiring President, also a vote of thanks to him for the labor he has performed and the interest taken in the welfare and advancement of the club.

A motion was then carried to adjourn until the 13th, to meet at the residence of Wm. Pentecost.

GET THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Garrettsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time but have, with what remedies we knew, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it; she fell, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Pazaloon. Cheaper Cure as a last resort. To-day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Pazaloon, extract of flax. Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

SCROFULA, dyspepsia, gout, and rheumatism, or any of the diseases arising from an enfeebled condition of the system, can be effectually cured by the great blood purifier, Hubbard's Rheumatic Syrup.

OLIVER ORTON'S LETTER

The Western Union Monopoly Turkish Baths and the Fun Makers Space from Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 17th, 1888.

Since the great Western Union monopoly has gotten the cases on the telegraphic ladies that stick to all different jobs, competition is dead, [illegible]

[illegible] is a well established physiological fact that the digestion of persons who laugh a good deal is much more perfect than those who go around with a sober face, hence we cannot have perfect digestion without fun, and we cannot have fun without fun-makers. The first of the four mentioned has probably peeked deeper into the dark cracks and crevices of human nature than any other person living in the last half century, except perhaps his brother Henry, while Twain and Burdette have not kept their eyes closed and have possessed the power of pleasantly telling what they have seen, while the whole western world knows that Henry Berge has immortalized his name by making the horses laugh with his care and attention.

Upon the subject of common sense living, I will begin in this letter by saying that fresh air and exercise are the best remedies under nearly all circumstances. There is nothing truer in the world than the old saying. The things are the things that keep the dress of life burning. DARING AND SUFFERING.

A History of the Andrews Railroad Raid Into Georgia in 1862.

The Most Heroic and Tragic Episode of the Civil War.

Embracing a Full and Accurate Account of the Secret Journey in the Heart of the Confederacy, the Capture of a Railway Train in a Confederate Camp, the Terrible Chase That Followed, and the Subsequent Fortunes of the Leader and His Party.

The expedition, in the daring of its inception, had the wildness of a romance; while in the gigantic and overwhelming results it sought and was hard to obtain it was absolutely sublime.—JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL HOLT'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

It was all the deepest laid scheme, and on the grandest scale, that ever emanated from the brains of any number of Yankees combined.—THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERACY (ATLANTA, GA.), April 15, 1862.

Despite its tragic termination, it shows what a handful of brave men could dare and dare in America.—COMTE DE PARIS' HISTORY OF THE CIVIL WAR IN AMERICA, vol. 2, p. 187.

By WILLIAM PITTENGER,
A MEMBER OF THE EXPEDITION.

One of the boys happened to look up, and said to the other that he saw a great bunch on a tree. The second looked to see what it was—shifted his position—looked again and exclaimed that it was a man! They cried out in alarm, and thus announced their discovery to their friends on shore. The latter instantly returned, and Andrews, seeing himself discovered—the story is almost too painful to be told—dropped from the tree run to the lower end of the island, seized a small dead log, and with a limb for a paddle pushed into the stream, hoping to reach the opposite shore before he could be overtaken. So far as the island pursuers were concerned he might have succeeded, but there was another party with a skiff lower down the stream, who slowly out to meet him. The helpless man could do no more, and was taken.

The struggle had been one of almost hopeless agony. He had eaten nothing since Sunday afternoon, and it was now 2 o'clock on Tuesday. His back was blistered by exposure, unprotected, to the sun, and his feet were covered with bleeding gashes. He said that he felt so wretched and miserable that the thought of certain death, to which he then resigned himself, had no further terror.

William's attempt to escape was for a time more fortunate and skillful than that of Andrews. He broke through the guards and ran the gauntlet of hasty shots without injury. Soon he reached the river bank and not wishing to attempt the passage in the growing light, hit upon the happy expedient of making the enemy believe that he was across. To this end he threw off his coat and vest, dropping them on the river bank and then waded a little way in the water to throw the hounds off the scent; then quietly slipping back, hid himself in a dense thicket of canes and rushes. He soon heard the hounds and men who were pursuing on the bank above and all about him. He could hear the words they uttered, they were so near. At length they found the clothing and concluded that he had taken to the river. They crossed over and searched with their hounds along the water's edge on the other side for the place he had come out. As might be expected the dogs failed to find the exit, and after due consultation they concluded that he was drowned, which being a satisfactory termination, they returned.

ESCAPE OF ANDREWS AND WILLIAM.

But William was not drowned. He spent the day in mortal misery and suspense, and when night came he cautiously left his lodging place and worked his way along the river to the rear of Chattanooga, till he came across a canoe which he borrowed [illegible] without seeing [illegible] all night. This was a craft made of pieces [illegible] drawn by [illegible] canes, and [illegible] for a week. Twice he was [illegible] for a [illegible] had [illegible] Gen. Mitchel. Last [illegible] Nelson [illegible] twice [illegible] to be some Confederate boat. Perhaps searching for him. In the dark it was not easy [illegible] by in the shadow of the shore without being discovered.

But at last he made the mistake that Wood and Wilson had made long before. He inagined that he was safe and went boldly forward in the daytime. The more night's journey by book or half that time put in on foot directly northward, would have carried him safely beyond the border. But as he was going forward congratulating himself on having succeeded so well, a band of Confederate cavalry, who were making a raid into Mitchel's territory, saw him and, procuring a boat with several pair of oxts, came out to meet him. William saw his danger, and there was a hot chase, but the advantage was all on their side. He was retaken, and as usual tried to deceive them as to his character, but a Lieut. Edwards, who had been with the party who captured him the first time, identified him, and he was reunited with his comrades in Atlanta.

When Andrews was brought back to Chattanooga a scene of much apparent barbarity followed. His escape had excited great rage and produced most terrible [illegible] which will be narrated hereafter [illegible] were now determined to give him no further opportunity of snatching their cherished vengeance from their hands. He was put down in the hole with the other prisoners [illegible] was denied. Of course no other visitors could see them. The guard was stimulated to renewed diligence. But as chains and handcuffs had proved ineffectual, something more secure was wanted. From the shop of William Lewis, a colored blacksmith, a man was brought over and taken down into the dungeon, where rivetted a pair of heavy iron fetters around his ankles. Dorsey and Wilson, who were present, describe the scene as obnoxious and terrible—the dinness of the dungeon, the poor, death sentenced man, half reclining with his feet across the blacksmith's anvil, the blows of the heavy hammer as the work of riveting went on. A strong chain, only eighteen inches long, united the two heavy fetters, so that only half a step could be taken at once. The feet were thus fastened in the same manner as hands are by handcuffs, and the latter were also replaced. When all these arrangements were completed he was once more left to himself.

CHAPTER XIX.

LAST DAYS.

Andrews had now but four days more of dungeon life between himself and eternity. Escape was impossible unless there should be a rapid advance of the Federal forces—a possibility which did come very near being made a fact. He applied himself to the great business of preparing to die. Most unexpectedly a letter written at this time and in some way carried through the lines has come to hand, and throws great light upon his character and thoughts at this period. He managed in some unknown manner to get writing material and wrote two or three letters. One, no doubt, was written to his betrothed in Flemingsburg, but never received. Another was written to his mother in Missouri. The contents of the latter can only be given as they are remembered after an interval of many years by one who read the letter. He told his mother that he was to die, and that all he regretted was that he had been able to do so little for his country; that many other sons had left their bones bleaching on southern battle fields; that he had tried to do his duty, and was now seeking the pardon and favor of God. There were many other half remembered expressions similar to those which are given in the letter below.

The following communication addressed to a trusted friend in Flemingsburg, Ky., and which from some references to property in contains has been called "the will of Andrews," needs a word of explanation. The gift bestowed upon Miss Layton was of trifling value, though most pathetic—a mere empty trunk. [illegible] full significance of this was [illegible] given, with probably more sweet [illegible] bequests, in one or other of the [illegible] letters. This letter, which reached Flemingsburg, Ky., in August, two months after it was written, being mailed at Louisville, is recorded in the Flemingsburg book of wills, while the original is most carefully preserved. Andrews had directed his friend to draw out his money in the Flemingsburg bank—some $2000, with good interest—in case he never returned, giving him a clerk for that purpose, and to lend it on good security, paying the interest as a perpetual bequest to the town poor. The friend was faithful to his trust, and though the money was afterwards squandered in a painful way and gave rise to vexatious law suits yet this secured the careful preservation of the letter.

In all probability Andrews wrote first to his betrothed, giving them sad remembrances and bequests which would not be repeated in a letter to another, and followed with this more general and business like communication. The original is terribly misspelled, far beyond the ordinary misspelling of ignorant persons. This is probably intentional, as a few lines at the first have no errors.

FRUIT CANNING.

The essay read at the late Farmers Institute in Tecumseh by Mrs. O. P. Remington.

Canning fruit suggests summer. June roses and sweet June butter fields abloom with violet, daisy and buttercup, clusters of ripe cherries with their cooling acid, strawberries emitting their sweet fragrance, blushing peaches, juicy pears and the standard of northern and eastern fruits—apples, purple grapes, orange quinces, amber tomatoes and the golden corn. All right here in the heart of winter. Just as if I could eliminate anything new on the subject with all the great canning establishments and the thousand and one new conveniences and experiences in this direction. I feel like Rip Van Winkle after his long sleep. I wonder if I am Rip. To be canning fruit when even the blades of grass are hidden and the violets are asleep in the earth, like the more cherished and beautiful forms resting there, and every little seed and fruit bud is wrapped in thick folds drawn about them by the great Creator, again to be loosed when spring and rain, and summer and sunshine shall be on the hills, and to know that the hand of the [illegible] unseen seals and unseals and will continue the plan as long as there is fruit to bud and blossom and make human capabilities shrink into insignificance. But canning and sealing fruit will occupy much time and thought of every housewife, from the ripening of strawberries in June until the late autumn fruits are gathered. I will give my method first with strawberries. I select fruit when it is freest from grit and sand and this condition exists in absence of heavy rains. I never wash my berries. H[illegible] weigh fruit and sugar allowing ten ounces to every pound of fruit. To make syrup I sprinkle sugar between layers of fruit, cooking as little as possible to heat them thoroughly. I boil the syrup four quart quantities. Tops rubbers can perfect. If a few grains of grit or sand are found in the bottom of my preserving kettle I have it there with a little syrup and I either throw it away or [illegible] strain into the vinegar to my mind. LETTER FROM KANSAS.

EDITOR HERALD:—Your valuable paper comes to Pratt promptly every week, a little earlier now than a year ago, as we have the Rock Island R. R. here now giving us a direct connection with Chicago, and consequently with a vast territory surrounding it. By the way Pratt is a division, both passenger and freight, on the main line, and aspires soon to be on the W. & W. R. R. which was built here over two years ago. But as I merely intended to give you some idea of the country here, I will say no more about city improvements, still I imagine some of your many readers would think I am given to exaggeration if I should say that the town is only four years old and has 2,500 inhabitants, and that in 1887 it made over $500,000 of improvements, but it is so.

The past winter has been cold to us, but warm for a man from the north. We have had a very delightful time all around and don't want any more Michigan winter in ours. People buggy-ride the year round and some of our most pleasant rides are taken in Dec. and Jan. Pratt county is rapidly taking rank with older counties. This year she is eighth in the wheat production in the state. We have several farmers who raised this year 40 bushels of wheat and a number who raised considerable more. There are now four mills in the county, but they can't grind near all the wheat. The finest location for a mill I know of is at Pratt City, there being none at that place. It will however take a man, or company, who can put in a mill that will grind 100 barrels a day at least, and have plenty of money to buy grain with, as it is a great grain market already.

Stock raising is very profitable here as corn can be raised so cheap. The wrong impression prevails east about our grain markets. We don't have to ship our grain east, however what we do ship there we have facilities for. West Texas and Colorado are good dealers and [illegible] better than eastern places. [illegible] a direct outlet to the Gulf of Mexico by rail, as well as east and north. Texas is not all that is [illegible]. Everything that grows in good [illegible] this latitude, grows here. [illegible] peaches, cherries, apples, [illegible] potatoes, peanuts, and [illegible] varieties to prevent a [illegible] crop.

[illegible] is delightful all the year round and healthy, so healthy that many who are seeking health resorts had better come here. The water is mild and pure, and a well was never known to go dry here. The surface of the country is just a little rolling and the soil is deep. It is just the place for farmers to come while land is cheap. Pratt City will grow massively again this year, and people who invest in city property will be back to own lots in Pratt. I would like to my old neighbors and friends, if they contemplate moving to a more southern clime, come here and see for themselves that it is a good place to make investments and a choice place for farmers.

The K. of L. had a jolly party in their hall last evening. A good number participated in the dance and the room was crowded with spectators. Refreshments were served in the band room by the wives of the members. Taken altogether it was a most enjoyable entertainment, and the series, now so auspiciously begun, should be kept up.

The attention of the doctors in this vicinity is directed to Burnham Stoppel & Co's announcement in another column. Their spring stock is complete in every department, and in buying for their Detroit and Kansas City houses they have taken on large quantities of goods at extremely low prices. Merchants will do well to inspect their stock when in the market.

The jury in the circuit court last week gave a verdict of $100 in favor of Maria Lareder in her suit against Frank Kirchgessner. The parties reside in Clinton and the defendant is a saloonist. The plaintiff's husband fell from a wagon when driving to his home in that section some time ago, breaking his neck. At the time he was intoxicated by liquor purchased at the defendant's saloon. The jury was out only five minutes.

THE GALE PLOW WORKS.

A respectable number of citizens responded to the call for the meeting last Friday evening to take into consideration the question of offering a bonus to secure the Gale Plow Works of Albion in this village. Pres. D. T. Hall occupied the chair, and stated his reasons for calling the meeting. He thought it was time Tecumseh was waking up and doing something; and if they could secure this large factory it would be the best thing that ever happened to it. We have two railroads which would afford the necessary shipping facilities, and the land at the intersection of the roads known as the Bills farm, would be a very desirable location.

M. P. Brown and C. F. Field were in favor of taking steps toward the organization of a business men's association as a good many were present who would be interested in it. A committee of five was appointed to solicit names and call another meeting, consisting of Oscar Bills, Will Hayden, C. F. Field, Wm. DeMott, J. D. Shull.

C. E. Williamson was of the opinion that it would be a good idea to raise $30,000 and start a factory of our own, if the plow works could not be secured.

Wm. DeMott moved that $30,000 and 20 acres of land be donated to the Gale Plow Works, and that C. E. Williamson and Fred Wood be appointed a committee to see if the land could be purchased.

The motion was carried, and D. T. Hall was appointed to notify the company of the offer, after which the meeting adjourned.

The fact that a number of large cities were making larger offers to the company, and that Tecumseh's chance seemed to be very poor, probably kept many business men away who thought the case was hopeless. That something should be done to awaken the village from its Rip Van-Winkle slumber is a fact apparent to every live business man in our community. The business men's association should be formed and inducements held out for industries to locate here.

In regard to the Gale Plow Works, our chance for securing them, are by no means discouraging. Nothing can be accomplished in any progressive move without a beginning. The M. & O. railroad project was talked down by the growlers, who claimed that it would be utterly impossible to raise the bonus for that road. But the bonus was raised and the road was built, although its construction for a time seemed very uncertain. If the President of the Gale Co. should make us a written proposition to the effect that a bonus of $30,000 and twenty acres of land would positively secure the removal of the works to this village, we believe the necessary amount could be raised in ten days. Why not appoint a committee of business men to visit Albion and acquaint the officers of the company with the advantages we possess for an enterprise of that kind.

At all events, let the Business Men's Association be organized at once. That is something we have long needed and now seemes to be the opportune time to start it.

SLIGHTLY PERSONAL.

DEHORNING.

The following communication from James B. Colvin, of Raisin, is taken from the last issue of the Michigan Farmer:

TECUMSEH, MARCH 1st, 1888.

EDITOR MICHIGAN FARMER:—With reference to dehorning cattle, will say I have practiced it for a short time, and find it works splendidly. Have very lately taken the horns from six cows with no injury to the cows what ever, and you ought to see the difference it makes in the conduct of the ladies—they are as kind to each other as the same number of sheep.

I tie my cows with ropes round the head, so I had to leave enough of the horn so the rope would not slip off, otherwise would have cut them close to the head, as I think they look better. Do not fear the bleeding, it will do not a particle of harm. I use a small buck saw, but any saw will do so you get horns off. Would cut them off with a crosscut sooner than leave them on.

When the calves are from two to three months old, after the horn gets formed and started, and just before it adheres too firmly to the head, I take a stout sharp jack knife, but first throw the calf and tie its legs, cut down beside the horn, turn the knife under and out on the other side and the horn is off. It is much the same as cutting the button off an overcoat, and no more difficult. You will ask if it won't bleed? Of course it will bleed, but that won't hurt the calf.

In cold weather I take an old bag, cut it up into pieces six inches square, smear the cloth with warm tar, and when I cut a horn off I slap the tarred cloth over the end of the horn and tie with sheep twine, cut off the horn and then tie the ends of the strings together across the back of the head.

A great many are deterred from cutting their cattle's horns off from fear that they will bleed too much, but there is no danger of that whatever, I assure you. You can tie them up or not, just as you like, but the bleeding will do no harm if the horns are not tied up.

The idea of turning a vicious cow with a pair of sharp horns into a yard to chase and gore the other animals, is both cruel and foolish. How many valuable colts and horses have been killed by such foolishness every year it would be difficult to tell. Brother farmers, be sensible on this question and make moolies of the whole tribe at once.

The best way to hold the cattle is to tie the head down close to the manger, and have a stout man hold the nose or put in stanchions and do the same.

Messrs. [illegible] & Co. have ready a [illegible] new Emperor of Germany, by Michael Harbon, the [illegible] German content. The work contains [illegible] pages, and [illegible] illustrations. The [illegible] is a [illegible] of the [illegible] event that has occurred in [illegible] years. The [illegible] Wilhelm [illegible] ninety years old, [illegible] important part in [illegible] history, having served under Frederick the Great, Napoleon, from whom he received his marshal's baton, and having [illegible] from Transcaucasia to Cuba. Mr. Harbon's graphic pen has never had a better opportunity than in the writing of this book, and it is doubtful if the German Emperor will ever have a more beautifully written biography.

HONORED BY HIS ASSOCIATES.

At a meeting of the University Senate held on the 7th, to take action on the death of Prof. Byron William Cheever, the following resolutions of respect were passed:

By the death of Prof. Byron William Cheever the University has lost a loyal son. The Senate again sees one of its most valued members stricken down in the full tide of active usefulness and almost without warning. Friday afternoon Prof. Cheever was to his accustomed place in the laboratory; Tuesday morning he breathed his last.

Prof. Cheever was born in Ellisburg, Jefferson Co., N. Y., September 17, 1841. He came to Ann Arbor in 1859, and since that time has maintained an almost unbroken connection with the University, either as student or teacher, with the exception of the few years he spent in Philadelphia and in the West Indies as a commercial chemist, and in the Rocky Mountains as a practical miner and metallurgist. He took the degree of A. B. in 1863. While still an undergraduate his proficiency in chemistry was recognized, and he was occasionally employed as assistant in the chemical laboratory. He subsequently entered the department of medicine and surgery, and received the degree of M. D. in 1867. After his return from the mining regions of the West, where his health had suffered from the exposure to which he had been subjected, he turned his attention for a time to legal studies, and took the degree of LL. B. with the class of 1875. But science was more to his liking than law, and in 1878 he accepted a position in the chemical laboratory, where he took charge of the work in quantitative analysis. In 1881 his duties were enlarged and he was appointed to the chair of metallurgy, which position he was occupying at the time of his death.

In the line of his chosen work he was able, accurate, conscientious. His knowledge of mineral deposits, and the unbounded confidence that could be placed in his word, brought his services as an expert into frequent demand. His contributions to the literature of his profession were frequent and valuable. Of an inventive turn of mind, he showed great skill in devising new forms of apparatus. As a teacher, he was clear and distinct in his explanations; rigid, though fair, in what he required of his students.

In the community in which he lived he was known for a certain steadiness of practical wisdom, a voice of no uncertain sound in public affairs, and an unfailing punctuality in meeting obligations. In spite of the care he was obliged to devote, in the later years of his life, to the preservation of his health he was always willing, earnest and prompt, though without ostentation, to do all in his power to support measures designed to promote the common welfare.

To the family and the wide circle of relatives of the deceased, in this hour of supreme sorrow, the sincere sympathies of the Senate are extended.

Resolutions were also passed by the faculties of the Pharmacy and Medical departments.

GREECE'S STRENGTH.

The Army, Navy and Other Fighting Resources of the Hellenic Kingdom.

Greece is divided, since March, 1883, into six military districts for recruiting and administrative purposes—the eastern district, with its headquarters at Larissa; the western, headquarters at Mesolonghi; and the southern, headquarters at Athens. The peace effective of the Greek army, including non-combatants, was 29,000 officers and men, with 48 guns, in 1880, and 26,692 in 1881. Deducting non-combatants, the effective would be about 23,000. This force consists of the following units: 22 battalions of infantry of the line and 9 battalions of chasseurs. Total, 36 battalions; 12 squadrons (8 battalions of regiments) of cavalry; 8 field and 8 mountain batteries (4 battalions); 4 siege batteries (1 battalion). 12 companies (3 battalions) of engineers; 1 company of train; 1 gendarmerie force of 4,800 men. The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood, by this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is saturated and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

this ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that, as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificate of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WHAT RUM COSTS HONEST BUSINESS MEN.

The dollar and cent standpoint is a low one for judging a great moral question; but is a view of the case which is, after all most potent. Men respond to a touch upon the pocket nerve more quickly than to any other. Hence it is legitimate, in the warfare against that truthful parent of vice and crime, of lewdness and debauchery, of sorrow and misery, poverty, and degradation, to set in array the money cost of the Rum Traffic.

There are some things so priceless that no money value can be assigned them. They can not be bought with gold. The mother who stands by the coffined form of her dead son, brought low by rum, is beyond comfort and consolation, for though she may be wealthy, all her shining store of gold can not restore the vital spark; can not place that son, once her idol, the center of bright hopes and fondest aspirations, back on the parting of the ways, when he took the wrong road, that has led him to death. No wife can measure in money the value of a husband's love and care, of which she has been robbed by the devil of drink. No son, defrauded of his birthright through his father's yielding to the temptations of Rum, no parent whose child is treading the downward way, can measure the irreparable loss, the shame, the misery, by the standard of dollars and cents.

Let us then leave the consideration of the irreparable damage thus wrought by Rum, and turn to what may be called a business view of the subject.

The average man lives, as a rule, pretty close up to his income. If he earns $600 a year, he spends it all, or very nearly all. If this annual amount is raised to $1,200, his style of living improves; he has a greater variety of food, and of better quality; he and his wife dress better; he lives in a larger and more comfortable dwelling; he has better carpets and furniture; he has more books and pictures; in short, he enjoys life better. And if his earnings go up to $2,000, for instance, he will improve his style of living still further. There is not one man in ten thousand, under the circumstances named, who would live in narrow way he was compelled to do at the commencement of his career.

With these men who are the slaves of Rum, the demands of the infernal habit compel a style of living as narrow as is compatible with keeping of soul and body together. The drinking man if dependent on his daily labor for support has to live in poor quarters. The furniture is scanty, of comforts in the household there are few, and of elegancies none. The clothing of himself, his wife and family, is of the poorest and cheapest. The food is stinted in quantity, and of the cheapest in quality. All that he can possibly spare goes across the counter of some Rum hole, for the devil's drink which will temporarily assuage the tormenting thirst of which it was originally the cause.

Prohibition stops this waste of his means, by crushing out these infernal man traps. With Prohibition enforced properly, the mouth of this monster which devours the wages of honest labor is closed forever. The drinking man can go to his home without meeting temptation a dozen times in traversing the space between his place of occupation and his home. He can put in full weeks, for there is no temptation to take a holiday in order to go on a debauch. His full wages are in his pocket on pay day, for the saloon keeper no longer exists to take the bulk thereof as his toll.

What is the result? There is no need to otherwise, for the experience of Atlanta tells the tale. The result of lifting the incubus of supporting the saloon keepers in luxury from the shoulders of these men is exactly the same as that stated above. The same result is reached as if their incomes were increased by the amount they formerly spent for Rum. They all live better. They have better food, more abundant in quantity and in greater variety. They live in larger and better houses, which are better furnished. These are now homes, in place of cheerless barracks. There are pictures on the walls, books and paper on the table. They enjoy life, instead of its being a burden.

What effect has this on every line of legitimate business? The question answers itself. The money that once supported the accursed saloons, now goes to support the real business enterprises. The butcher shops and groceries, the clothing stores, the dry goods and millinery establishments, the furniture stores—in fact every possible kind of business house which supplies the ordinary, legitimate needs of our modern civilization has its trade increased. This increases the demand on the farmers, the manufacturers and all who supply them with their goods. The money is kept in the legitimate channels of trade, and not poured into the bursting coffers of the Rum Power.

We have in mind a town in Ohio of [illegible] which pay the Dow tax. Each of these saloons has an average daily revenue of over $10. That is $300 a day, and, as they are open on Sundays [illegible] entire year, $109,200. It has the reputation of being a rather quiet, dull town. Suppose that this $109,200 was spent in the stores and other establishments of the town—would not business "boom"? It is more than the total business of the three largest houses in the town. This is but one instance; suppose that we had Prohibition in the entire state of Ohio. Calculate, in even as moderate a basis as that given above, what an enormous sum would be added to the business of all the legitimate trades of the state! There would be no stagnation then. Everything would hum. Our factories, our manufacturing establishments would be crowded with work. No fear of dull times!

Business men, here is a state of things to make you think. The saloon is the greatest enemy to all of you. The money that they absorb would pass over your counters were they crushed out, your trade would enlarge its borders. Each and every one of you would prosper. Is it not time you shall band together to crush your common enemy? Is there not enough here stated to show you the business wisdom of throwing your weight of influence in favor of the effort to do so.

Very Sensible "Jap."

In Japan the old school physicians are prohibited to wear only wooden swords. This is a gentle sarcastic way of expressing the opinion that they kill enough people without using weapons. But the druggist who introduced Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery into the Empire, carries a fine steel blade. It was found that all who tried this wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, consumptive tendencies, blood, skin and liver troubles, were, without exception, greatly benefitted. The Mikado himself is said to have "toned up" his system by its use, and the importer was therefore permitted the exceptional honor of wearing the sword of the nobility.

Discoveries Made by Accident.

Valuable discoveries have been made, and valuable inventions suggested, by the veriest accident.

The swaying to and fro of a chandelier in a cathedral suggested to Galileo the application of the pendulum.

Mezzotint owed its invention to the simple accident of the gun-barrel of a sentry becoming rusted with dew.

An alchemist, while seeking to discover a mixture of earths that would make the most durable crucibles, one day found that he had made porcelain.

The power of lenses, as applied to the telescope, was discovered by a watchmaker's apprentice. While holding spectacle glasses between his thumb and finger, he was startled at the suddenly enlarged appearance of a neighboring church spire.

The composition of which printing rollers are made was discovered by a Solomon printer. Not being able to find the ball, he inked the type with a soft piece of glue which had fallen out of a glue-pot. It was such an excellent substitute that after mixing molasses with the glue, to give the mass proper consistency, the composition ball was entirely discarded.

The process of whitening sugar was discovered in a curious way. A negro had gone through a day's paddle-work with his muddy feet into a sugar house. She left tracks on a pile of sugar. It was noticed that wherever the tracks were the sugar was whitened. Experiments were instituted, and the result was that negro clay came to be used in refining sugar.

The art of etching upon glass was discovered by a Nuremburg glass cutter. By accident, a few drops of aqua fortis fell upon his spectacles. He noticed that the glass became corroded and softened where the acid had touched it. That was hint enough. He drew figures upon glass with varnish, applied the corrosive fluid, then cut away the glass around the drawing. When the varnish was removed the figures appeared raised upon a dark ground.

Do Not Think for a Moment that catarrh will in time wear out. The theory is false. Men try to believe it because it would be pleasant if true, but it is not, as all know. Do not let a [illegible] attack of cold [illegible] to develop catarrh. You owe it to yourself to cold shot at least a chance of health by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. If already afflicted rid yourself of this troublesome disease speedily by the same means. At all druggists.

Why Woolen Fabrics Shrink.

The fibers of wool and certain kinds of hairs are toothed or jagged at the edges, the teeth, or imbrications, pointing upward—that is, from the root to the point. When subjected, therefore, to compression or friction, these fibers, being free to move only in one direction by reason of these asperities of surface, have a great tendency to unite and lock together. This explains the peculiar capability possessed by wool of felting, and also the shrinking of fabrics of wool. In the latter case, the excessive rubbing to which they are subjected causes a matting or binding together of the ultimate fibres, which causes shrinkage; and this is intensified by changing the goods from hot to cold water, which is usually practiced, as the contraction of the fibres which this causes is itself a felting process. For washing woolen articles, it is recommended to place them in warm water, never in cold; and if changed from one water to another, they should go from hot to hotter. They should be cleansed with as little and as gentle friction as possible. The fibers of cotton and linen are straight and smooth, and possess none of the surface roughness that characterize the structure of wool, hence they do not shrink in washing.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON FOR MARCH 18th.

THE SON REJECTED.—MATT. xxi, 33-46.

NOTES.—Jesus had just concluded the parable of the man with two sons (vs. 28-32.) Now he adds another parable applicable especially to the Pharisees. He chose a figure most familiar to his hearers, for Jerusalem was surrounded by vineyards.—"A hedge."—Protection from robbers, animals or stragglers, so that no short cut path could be made across it.—"A winepress in it."—This consists of an upper and lower vat. In the upper, which was about eight feet square, the grapes were trodden. The juice was drawn off then into the lower, which was, perhaps four feet square and four feet deep.—"A tower."—For protecting the property.—"His fruits."—Not the whole vintage, but his proportion to pay for rental.

"And the husbandman took his servants . . . and they did unto them in like manner."—The servants are the prophets who were unceremoniously rejected.—"But afterwards he sent unto them his Son. . . ."—Mark and Luke bring this out more graphically. The owner makes a final supreme effort to recover his property—his people.—The 38th and 39th verses clearly prophesy his own murder. The Pharisees with blind hearts refused to see the application. Also the enormity of the sin of rejection and murder is impressed in the climactic sentences of the parable. Verses 40 and 41 represent Christ as asking a question the answer of which he gives himself, though he puts it in the mouth of his hearers. Mark and Luke include them as Jesus' own words. Still they are a subtile prophecy of the far future that Paul speaks of in the Epistle to the Romans. The Revised Version is best, "miserably destroy." The adverb and adjective correspond in the Greek.—"Did ye never read in the scriptures?"—A quotation from the same "Hosanna" Psalm cxviii, 22-23. The Messiah is the corner stone. To reject him in his incarnation would be national loss to the Jews. To finally reject him when he cometh in his glory would be disastrous and total ruin. The last two verses of the lesson show that the rulers comprehended well that the words referred to them. His figurative language had graduated until it became positive personal denunciation. The Pharisees and high priests fluctuated between final action and fear of the people. To the mass he was a great prophet. None dared as yet disregard that imperious feeling.

INSTRUCTION.—Many calls and warnings from God often tend to embolden rather than soften the heart. Such was it with the Jews. To each one of us the call comes repeatedly. For each one God makes a supreme effort to save. The Son is the gift of mercy unto every individual. If any one casts him out, the sin rests upon him who rejects, no one can be his avenger but who deadly resists the Spirit.

Mark the fact that the rebellious tenants did not kill the Son within the vineyard. Impiousness dared not carry them so far as that. The vineyard may represent our privileges under the covenant and the revelation of truth. Let no one who has eaten the rich grapes of Christian love and protection cast out the Son who has given them to us, his tenants. All truth is from God. Shall we accept the truth in our hearts and reject the truth giver? It is madness in a Christian land to stone Christ. Blindness, not greater revelation, follows this horrible folly.

Christ fought a running fight, fierce and exhausting, against unbelief, as manifested by the Jewish authorities. His body was finally seized, but not the free spirit. Ours is a perpetual conflict, too, though not so harrowing as his. Think it involves to win or lose. Christ won. Judas hanged himself.

The vineyard was fully equipped for use and profit. Every one who has heard the teaching of Jesus is ready for remunerative work for him. We cannot pay principle and interest at the same time; but we can return to him a fair percentage. Let us give him from to-day on as high a rate as possible.

We are his husbandmen. Our hearts and the world are his vineyard. If we refuse his heralds we will also finally murder the Son. Care lest we offend the heart of his messengers, in whatever guise they approach us!

Character, honor, purity, in short, holiness can be rejected, when the deluded one clings to the mere name of Christ—all truth is in Christ and he is all in all.

The popular sentiment prevented the high priests from carrying out their murderous intent. All popular emotions are not the truest. It is no shame to go with the mass when it is right. It is indeed by disgraceful not to breast the current when it is misdirected.

"Ayer's Medicines have been satisfactory to me throughout my practice, especially Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has been used by many of my patients, one of whom says he knows it saved his life.—F. L. Morris, M. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Struggling Lives.

You, reader, who are blessed with a comfortable home—who are well fed and warmly clad and sheltered—you can hardly realize to what straits and make-shifts many a poor mortal is reduced to live honestly, or even live at all. Women there are, delicate, refined, sensitive, and all unused to physical labor—women nursed often in the lap of luxury, but thrown suddenly and helplessly upon the world by some social or domestic volcano that engulfed home and friends and left them stranded and alone to struggle with the hard conditions of cruel and relentless poverty. We have seen them thinly and poorly clad, with pinched faces from lack of nourishing food, boarding themselves in cheerless and isolated rooms, and eking out a bare pittance, honestly earned with needle or pen—patient, often, and hopeful in their sad and lonely lot. Let their more fortunate sisters, born to affluence and comfort, with every luxury within their reach, imagine themselves suddenly reduced to such extremities, and can they wonder that many a tempted one is led into a gilded life of sin? Truly, society is out of joint, and there is need for a larger measure of charity in the world. We wonder if the favored one of earth are aware that there is but little, if any, to the goodness of one who has never been sorely tempted.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite young. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle that disagreeable catarrhal smell had all left him. He appears as well as anyone. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

Mr. A. Nichols suffered from catarrh for years. He purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm of us. He is now almost cured, and says you cannot recommend it too highly.—Evers Bros., Druggists, Independence, Iowa.

Professional Ignorance

Nothing is more common, nor less true, than for physicians to tell patients in the first stages of heart disease that their trouble is only nervous, etc., and of no account. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing as shown by the great number of people who die of heart disease when its existence is not expected. Take warning. Don't neglect the first symptoms, and if you would avoid sudden death, angina pectoris, etc., take Dr. Miles' New Cure before it is too late. Sold at Baker & Hall's drug store.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, Oh, it will wear away, but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which we sell on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free at Baker & Hall.

GOOD EVENING, Miss JENNIE! I am very much pleased at seeing you here. You sang beautifully. I understood yesterday that you could take no part in the exercises on account of a severe cold. Well, I did not expect to, but managed to get a bottle of Hobbard's Throat and Lung Balsam and it helped me at once. That is so. I hear it spoken of in great praise.

I NEVER saw anything like it. Everywhere I go I hear nothing but praise for Hobbard's Throat and Lung Balsam.

The human body is seven-eighths water. The blood is mostly water. All the tissues owe their softness to it, and even the bones have a share of this fluid. No organ of the body could perform its duty, nor could life be sustained [illegible] alcohol burns up the water, diseases and destroys the body.

An iron rail properly made, it is said, will last as long as those of steel. The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton road near Dayton has in use iron rails placed there thirty-one years ago which are yet in fair condition. They were made at Johnston, Pa., and the order required that they should be the best possible to be made. It is safe to say that no iron rails are made nowadays which would endure an equal amount of traffic for thirty years.

Denmark has lately acquired a torpedo-boat which is pronounced in England, where it was made, the largest afloat. Her displacement is fifty-five tons and her armament comprises four of the largest Whitehead torpedoes, each carrying eight pounds of gun-cotton and a Hotchkiss revolving gun. She has a coal capacity of ten tons, which is equivalent to 1,200 miles at eleven knots, but her full speed is twenty knots. Despite her great size, the boat is capable of transportation by rail.

In a paper read before the British Medical Association, Dr. J. Hadden objects to the treatment of fevers by immersing the patient in cold baths for the purpose of directly abstracting heat. He says the theory upon which such treatment is advocated is incorrect. The high temperature is not itself the cause of the worst symptoms of fevers. Furthermore he declares that in practice such treatment is dangerous and that the only safe way of using baths in fevers is by sponging the surface with moderately cold water. Even tepid or warm water will exert a cooling and soothing effect. The immersion method is too shocking.

Professor Donders, long known as the most distinguished oculist in Holland, recently delivered a lecture in Amsterdam, on color, which has been widely quoted. After an elaborate experimental analysis of various popular notions on the subject in hand, Professor Donders proceeded to demonstrate that, notwithstanding the prevailing theory, green must be ranked with the primitive colors, like red, blue, and yellow. Green, the Professor explained, could not be produced by mixing pure yellow and blue; such a composition would be white, in the very nature of things. The green color which is apparently derived from the mixture or amalgamation of two paints is, in reality, says Professor Donders, the result of "subtraction."

A Primitive Tribe

Dr. Hunter describes a peculiar tribe in India which has preserved an extreme primitiveness. The people are called Leaf Wearers, because they wear the costume of Adam and Eve before the fall; or, more strictly speaking, they did, so until the English persuaded them to adopt cloth.

In 1871 the English officer called together the clan, and after a speech handed out strips of cotton for the women to put on. They then passed in single file to the number of 1,900 before him, made obeisance to him, and were afterward marked on the forehead with vermilion as a sign of their entering into civilized society. Finally, they gathered the bunches of leaves which had formed their sole clothing into a great heap, and solemnly set fire to it. This leaf-wearing tribe had no knowledge of the metals till quite lately, when foreigners came among them, and no word existed in their native language for iron or any other metal. But their country abounds in flint weapons, so that the Juangs form a remnant to our own day of the stone age. "Their huts," writes the officer who knows them best, "are among the smallest that human beings ever deliberately constructed as dwellings. They measure about six feet by eight feet. The head of the family and all the females huddle together in this one shed not much larger than a dog kennel. The boys and the young men of the village live in one large building apart by themselves; and this custom of having a common abode for the whole male youth of the hamlet is found among many aboriginal tribes in distant parts of India."

After the Sunday Dinner.

After the Sunday dinner, what? Well it all depends. A person whose brain is wearied with intellectual work during the week, or whose nervous system is exposed to the strain of business or professional life, ought to sleep within an hour or so after the Sunday dinner, if he can. It is surprising how much like a seven-day clock the brain will work if the habit of Sunday nap become formed. Nature will take advantage of it as regularly and gratefully as she does of the nightly sleep, and do her best to make up lost time. People on the other hand whose work of body or mind is physical, may well give their minds entirely while their bodies are resting. Two strenuous and three or four hours of solid reading are a real rest to some on Sunday, while to others such a course becomes to a positive Sabbath-breaking. Sunday is a day of rest, not a day of work, religious or otherwise. It is a day of repose not for exhaustion. In what the aristocracies of old and the lower classes on the other are apt to overlook is the fact that all men do not rest alike any more than they look alike and what may help one may hinder another.

THE GIANTS' CAUSEWAY.—The Giants Causeway is in the County Antrim, on the northeast coast of Ireland, between Portrush and Port Rush. For one seven or eight miles along that coast there are cliffs of basalt, many of which are made up in great part of rude vertical columns which alternate with layers of amorphous beds of the same class of rocks, and ranges of these in places reach the height of 400 or 500 feet. When these are viewed in front from the sea they suggest rude resemblances to architectural forms. The name of Giants' Causeway is often applied to the whole coast range, although it is properly applicable to but a small portion of it. It is a platform of basalt, composed of closely arranged columns, ranging from 15 to 36 feet in height, and it extends from a steep cliff down into the sea, till it is lost below low-water mark. Its length exposed at low-water is about 600 feet, and it is divided into three portions called the Little, Middle, and Large or Grand Causeway.

Old and reliable Medicine are the best to depend upon. Acker's Blood Elixir has been prescribed for years for all impurities of the Blood. In every form of Scrofulous, Syphilitic or Mercurial diseases, it is invaluable. For Rheumatism, has no equal.

NORTH EAST FRANKLIN.

Mrs. James Updyke has been very sick.

S. N. Munger is proud and happy over the arrival at his home, on Saturday last, of a fine boy.

Miss Alice Peck of Linden, Mich., is visiting at Joseph Spaulding's. She will return to her home next Saturday.

Miss Etta Spaulding, who has lived in Tecumseh for about a year and a half, has made her many friends happy by her return home. It seems like old times to have Etta once more and we would be glad to keep her here.

Lyle Crane of Bridgewater, closed a very successful term of school in Dist. No. 3, last Friday. Sat evening the school gave an exhibition. Music, recitations and dialogues were rendered very finely. The house was full and every one seemed highly pleased with the entertainment.

HAVE YOU CATARRH?

Read this letter. I have hundreds more like them.

VICKSBURG, Mich., May 17, 1884.

H. G. COLEMAN, Chemist:

I am glad to speak a good word for your Petroleum Balm. I have had Catarrh for twenty years. It had become so bad that I could no longer speak in public, and at times I feared that it would destroy my voice entirely. I used many catarrh cures with no benefit. One of your samples gave me great relief, and a 25c box has made me feel like a new man.

Yours truly, C. E. BAILEY.

LATER REPORT.

PLANO, Ill., September 17th, 1887.

H. G. COLEMAN, Kalamazoo, Mich.:

When I lived at Vicksburg I used some of your catarrh ointment, Petroleum Balm you called it. It cured me and you used my name in your circulars. I furnished some persons here with it who desire more. If you think best I think I can make arrangements with a druggist here to sell it for you. I think it really valuable. I am cured and do not need it for myself. Yours truly,

C. E. Bailey, Attorney.

N. B.—Until May 1st, '88, I will send out 25c boxes for trial on receipt of 12c.

H. G. COLEMAN, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Very Sensible "Japs."

In Japan the old-school physicians are permitted to wear only wooden swords. This is a gentle sarcastic way of expressing the opinion that they kill enough people without using weapons. But the druggist who introduced Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery into the Empire, carries a fine steel blade. It was found that all who tried this wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, consumptive tendencies, blood, skin and liver troubles, were, without exception, greatly benefited. The Mikado himself is said to have "toned up" his system by its use, and the importer was therefore permitted the exceptional honor of wearing the sword of the nobility.

Save the Children. They are especially liable to sudden Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. We guarantee Acker's English Remedy a positive cure. It saves hours of anxious watching. Sold by

Badly Decayed Teeth

Can be restored to their original appearance so perfectly that the art is concealed, by a

NEW PORCELAIN PROCESS,

Patented Dec. 20, 1887.

These improvements make it possible to restore every condition of decay to their original appearance in shape, size and color.

Undeveloped teeth can be enlarged to their proper size and made to appear perfect. Old roots can have artificial crowns attached to them, and when made to antagonize become as useful as ever. Large and conspicuous gold fillings can have porcelain sections placed over them and thus hide their glaring appearance. Devitalized teeth that have become discolored can have an artificial coat of enamel placed over them and be so thoroughly renewed in appearance that the art is concealed.

The above illustrates a practical piece of work indicating the amount of porcelain added in order to restore the original shape, size and color perfectly. Send for descriptive pamphlet. Address

UNEQUALED CLUB OFFER

TO READERS OF THE HERALD.

TWO PAPERS FOR PRICE OF ONE

The Publishers of The Farm and Garden have arranged with us to offer their journal to its readers (all if they OWN papers) in connection with ours on the special terms given below.

WHAT "THE FARM AND GARDEN" IS

It is ONLY farm paper devoted to the interests of its readers, and made up, managed, and edited from the letters of its subscribers. Look it up for this alone.

It is ONLY farm paper which does not insert frauds on the farmers in its advertising columns, and fearlessly exposes them as they appear in others.

It is ONLY farm paper which takes pains to look up and verify all its statements about methods and about new varieties of fruits and vegetables. It intends not to mislead; it seldom does.

It is ONLY farm paper which is edited with a view of helping the farmer rather than preaching at him.

It is ONLY farm paper which we feel we can recommend to you in this way and not be disappointed. Specimens can be seen at our office, or will be sent on receipt of a stamp.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER:

We will send The Farm and Garden one year and THE HERALD one year for the price $1.50.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

A new pine walk has been built along the lots owned by Uncle Housman and D. W. Lorke.

The poles are all set and the wire is being strung on the C. T. line to Tecumseh.

The material is on the ground for a walk from the Hall villa on South street to the depot. How much longer have we got to wait before the one from the postoffice to the depot will be built? We hope not long.

By request, the Miller family will give an entertainment at the Grange hall in Macon, Saturday evening, the 24th. A new programme will be presented.

N. M. Hindes is repairing and building too. When completed, his house south of the village will make a very pleasant home.

Service will begin at 7:30 on Sunday evenings, instead of 7:00, until further notice.

Attorney Henry Smith, of Adrian, was in the village as counsel for John Beasley in the suit of Beasley versus Daykin, before Justice W. H. Arner on Tuesday.

Mrs. Sturms, of Holland, is visiting at Mrs. A. J. Sutton's this week.

F. N. Miller has commenced the study of telegraphy with station agent Sutton. We wish him success.

H. J. Williams went to Milan Saturday in the interest of the slating business.

Wm. and Chas. Clack spent Sunday with their parents in Blissfield.

Minnie Montgomery, of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with Marcia Kelley.

Maud Vreeland, of St. Johns, visited relatives in the village and vicinity last week.

Postmaster Geo. Doty and wife, of Manchester, attended the funeral of Mrs. Sharp last week.

The funeral of Mrs. Peter Sharp was held at the church on Thursday afternoon of last week, Rev. W. H. Benton officiating.

Saturday was a day long to be remembered by our respected citizen, Mr. David Coryell. It being his 60th birthday, his relatives made him a surprise and spent a very pleasant time. They left him $11 in cash as a token of their esteem.

Don't forget the teachers' institute to be held at the school building in this village next week Thursday and Friday.

We learn from a letter recently received from Marshall D. Snedicor, who is attending the Carlton college at Northfield, Minn., that he is spending his vacation with a glee club of eleven members, giving concerts. Mr. Snedicor's school-boy days were spent in our village, and his many friends are pleased to learn of his success in college and extend their best wishes for a grand and noble life's success.

At the good old age of 29 years, "Old Sam," the faithful horse owned by Uncle John Schreeder until his death, passed quietly away on Friday morning, March 16th. His life had been a long, faithful one, spent in the service of his old master with much credit to his race. Since the death of Mr. Schreeder he had been cared for by W. H. Arner.

There was a very large attendance at the social held at Mrs. Wilson's on Friday night last. The Miller band furnished some fine selections during the evening. The following program was carried out very successfully. Music, Miller band; opening hymn, Society; devotional exercises; duet, Misses Flota Smith and Emma Miller; select reading, Mrs. C. Gove; selection from Miller band; recitation, Hattie Russell; vocal solo, Fern VanDuser; reading, T. H. Temple; cornet solo, J. D. Arner; select reading, Loana Davidson; music, Miller band. After the exercises were over ice-cream, etc. was served, and the society realized a net profit of $8, which will be expended in building a walk from the church to the library.

Arrangements have been completed whereby the Lenawee County Board of School Examiners will hold a two days teacher's institute and examination in the school building at Ridgeway, on Thursday and Friday, March 29, 30. All the teachers in the northeastern part of the county, as well as those who have any thought of becoming teachers, should avail themselves of so valuable an opportunity. Professors Walker and Tripp will be present throughout and in addition to the usual examination they will give some time to addresses upon the method of teaching each branch. Those attending from a distance will be provided entertainment by applying early to Prof J. D. Huston, Ridgeway.

Michael Cummins, of Jackson, visited friends here from Friday till Monday.

Mrs. Josie St.John, a former Clinton girl, now of Detroit, made her debut at White's Opera House Monday night in an entertainment given by the Detroit Musical Society, of which she is a member. She was the soloist in the Crusaders. The critics compliment her highly on her voice and execution of the difficult role. Her many friends rejoice at her success and they feel that it is well merited, for generally the Detroit critics are very severe on home talent and particularly on debutants.

A. F. Kishpaugh visited Detroit over Sunday.

Lon. Marshall has bought 40 acres of the Patrick Cummins farm and leased for three years the other 40 acres. He will occupy it at once.

Patrick Cummins intends to make an extended visit at Jackson with his son, Michael.

Ed. Rose again Sundayed here and left Monday for a more extended trip.

Solomon Brown paid the county seat a visit, Tuesday.

Morris Bartlett, who worked last summer for Belden Mills, and more recently for Sol Tate, left Tuesday for Hillsdale, where his parents now live.

Frank Kirchgessner, whose absence has caused his family so much anxiety since the trial week before last, returned home Monday noon. He has no knowledge as to his going to Chicago, and even now is far from being well; it is hoped his indisposition is but temporary and that with rest and good nursing, he will soon be well again.

Mrs. Clara Mesler of Mason, paid her friends here a flying visit the last of the week, and when she returned home she took her son George who has been living in Mr. Brown's family.

The Blue Ribbon meeting last Sunday passed off pleasantly.

We have to chronicle the death of another of the old residents of this vicinity Mrs. James Bostedor, which occured Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. She has been quite an invalid for a long time yet the blow to her friends is none the less severe. The funeral was held Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

Miss Lottie Gardner, who, a short time ago went to live with a sister in Dakota was married about two weeks since to a gentleman there.

D. Woodward and Son shipped due of their famous plows to a man at Phelps, N. Y., Wednesday.

Several of our poultry men have their incubators running.

John Van Tuyle has been in Ann Arbor several days.

Wm. Welsh is moving into his own house this week.

Miles Martin and family have moved into the country west of town.

Dr. Blatchford now occupies the building lately vacated by Mrs. McMaster.

Mrs. Chas. H. Fisk is visiting her mother, Mrs. Mary Dorr.

Belle Hogan is home from the Normal and will remain through vacation.

O. Heath and wife of Adrian visited A. C. Huntington and family this week.

Mrs. Florence Conklin entertained friends from Mason this week.

Cora Gardner is visiting at Mrs. Jennie Kimballs.

Ed. Stern is spending the week with his parents, resting up—His position has required him to work nights which for a boy so young has been very hard for him.

Ed. Forsythe of Ypsilanti who formally lived east of this village committed suicide recently.

Lafe Ward now occupies the Terryberry house.

Winter term of school closes this week.

B. S. Covert and wife, of Ypsilanti visited his brother-in-law Geo. Runyan, Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. J. J. White is very sick with consumption and liable to pass away at any time. Her sister Mrs. J. J. Hickey of Harrison is here taking care of her.

Lina Jones is again in her accustomed place at Freese's.

John Swift and Will Tolton are both in town again.

D. L. Shurtz of Toledo has been at the Lancaster House for the past week.

Semarks building is nearing completion and will soon be occupied by Bush and Waldron, grocers.

LAKE RIDGE.

Our winter term of school closed on Friday last.

Chris. Dascher has moved onto Dr. Stewart's celery farm, near Tecumseh.

Ed. Smith and wife have set up housekeeping in the L. Sowles house on John Beckley's farm.

Irve Wilkins is moving onto the John Stewart farm.

Fred Miller is moving onto Joe Daykin's farm.

Lew Martin was out from Leslie last week.

Scott Sherman and Sam Stewart have returned from the north woods.

A. Easlick loaded two cars with baled hay last week.

The "mystic goat" of Macon Grange is having quite a siege. Twelve candidates are learning the grips and signs. John Hicks will find lightning rods no protection against the electric current of eleven lady candidates.

Jerry Bobean had a stroke of palsy last Sunday, and it was thought at the time that he would not recover, but at this writing he is improving.

Last Monday John Beckley received a telegram from Toledo, announcing the sudden illness of Geo. Smith from congestion of the brain. His pulse had dropped to nine pulsations per minute. Two or three hours later a second dispatch announced that he was reviving.

The time is drawing nigh for transplanting candidates for town offices. Why not combine the elements opposed to the catch-penny policy of the sugar trusts, coffee trusts, oil, coal, wheat, whisky, usury and mortgage trusts. Why vote protection to monopolistic capitalists who contract the circulating medium and control the productions of industry? Why carry a national debt of fundable, interest bearing, non-taxable bonds, with a surplus in the treasury and resumption vaults of nearly one billion dollars? Why run a million saloons at an annual expense of a billion dollars? Why protect an army of millionaires in their ill-gotten gains, thereby oppressing the masses, causing poverty, crime, tramps, and at least 100,000 on a strike all the time? Echo answers "Why?"

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Burt Alverson from Hillsdale is visiting his many Franklin friends; also sister in Tecumseh.

Miss Wilber closed a very successful term of school in the Center Dist. last Friday. The afternoon session was given up to recitations, declamations, etc. Those present report a full house and a fine entertainment.

There were a lot of disappointed people on the 10th inst., who wanted to go to Miss Brown's school exhibition in Dist. No. 2, but were kept at home by the rain. The few who were courageous enough to venture out were well repaid for the effort. The exercises are reported as well selected and finely rendered.

Leon Allen, son of G. W., has been having a severe cold or influenza which terminated in inflammation; it is hoped the worst is over and he will soon be out again.

The season has not thus far been favorable to the maple molasses business. The cold winds have dried up the flow of sap. Trees that have been tapped two weeks or more will likely have to be tapped over again to produce a paying "run," a thing that some tappers dislike to do as it cuts up the trees too much they think.

Mrs. George Allen is very low; she suffers very much and is extremely weak. Her friends have no hope of any change for the better.

Walter Osborne is erecting a fine hog house, convenient, commodious and substantial.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Seymour Barrett and John Campbell made a trip the latter part of last week to Brooklyn, Clinton and "Ireland." They returned Saturday eve.

Ye reporter had the misfortune to lose his pocket-book, containing some money, last Friday evening. But we are happy to say an honest man, (A. Gillis) found the article and returned it to its owner.

GOT THE BEST OF THE DOCTOR.

W. F. Beyer, Garrettsville, Ohio, says: "My wife has been troubled with Catarrh a long time, but have, with what remedies we had, and what the doctor could do, kept the upper hand of it until this fall, when everything failed. Her throat was raw as far as one could see, with an incessant cough, when I invested my dollar in a bottle of your Papillon Catarrh Cure as a last resort. To day she is free from cough, throat all healed and entirely cured." Papillon (extract of flax) Catarrh Cure effects cures when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

MOTHER EVE'S FASHIONS.

A Shower of Hats, Coats, and Sashes Expresses the Approval of the Audience.

The Japanese school of acting might be called the natural one, the whole progress of the play being carried on in the quiet, bombast or rant, except in the classical interludes, when everything is as stilted and conventional as possible. Pathos is always deep and long drawn, and the last tear is wrung from the eyes of the audience, that responds with handkerchiefs to the slightest appeal to the emotional side. Tragedy is very tragic and murders more gory than we would quite enjoy. Death on the Japanese stage always results from sword cuts and the antics of the lovers, the wonderful endurance of the hacked victims, and the streams of red paint that pour from all over them before they die are rather too much. The audience knows this, however, and they shouts, shriek and whoop out delight when a good, gory tumble comes. To express greatest approval they throw pieces of their clothing or any of their valued belongings on the stage, just as excited young ladies at the opera hurl their bouquets at Patti and pieces draw off diamond rings and bracelets to hand to Nilsson.

A foreigner who saw the fall of coats, sashes etc., falling on the stage after a thrilling scene, tossed his hat over, too. It was an old one that he did not care for. He had a soft cap in his pocket and he thought it rather a nice thing to be able to follow the fashion of the country. At the end of the play the manager brought his hat to him and asked for the $10. The enthusiast then found that all the things tossed to the star were merely pledges, to be afterward redeemed by money, the actors having a regular schedule—so much for a coat, a kimono, a vest and a pipe, and corresponding sums for hangers, hats and loose articles. The enthusiast sadly paid his $10 and took back his abused hat, as the manager only bowed and continued to hold it out in spite of his generous protests about his wishing the star to keep it as a small souvenir.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S AGE.

No Monarch Known Who Reached His Number of Years.

Long reigns are rare in history, long royal lives much rarer still. Princes occupy one of the lowest levels in the whole range of longevity. The air of courts is destructive of health, nerve and vigor. Lives which early corruption, brutalizing and effeminate habits, unchecked passions and unremitting excitement do not terminate are frequently shortened by oppressive ambition or care, worn like rust and petal of the murderous hand of conspiracy. Among the remarkably long reigns in history are those of Uzziah of Judah, fifty two years, Mithradates of Pontus, fifty seven, Sapor II of Persia, seventy one, Alfonzo I of Portugal, seventy four, Frederick II, of Germany, sixty three, Christian IV, of Denmark, sixty four, Louis XIV of France, seventy two, George II of England, fifty nine, Ferdinand IV of Naples, sixty five, and Pedro II of Brazil, fifty seven. But Uzziah was sixteen when he was placed on the throne, Mithradates a boy, Sapor a newborn babe, Alfonzo an infant, Christian, 11 years old, Louis 4, Ferdinand 9 and Pedro 5 and of all the monarchs mentioned only George III reached the age of boyhood. Poland had one King who lived to the age of 88, Stanislas Leszczynski, but he reigned only five years and survived his throne fifty six years, being the oldest monarch. We must go back to the ancient antiquity to find Emperor William's equal in years and the only ones we discover are Hiero II, of Syracuse, and Masinissa of Numidia, both of whom claimed their reigns at the age of ninety two. The reign of Ramses II, Pharaoh of Egypt, the Sesostris of the Greeks, is believed to some Egyptologists to have lasted ninety seven years and the Pharaohs of the fifth dynasty have left behind them a number of papyrus rolls to prove that his reign was in no way inferior to the reigns of his predecessors. There is no doubt but that he was alive to the time of Cambyses, king of Persia, who invaded Egypt 525 years before the birth of Christ, and he could be the same Sesostris who, according to Herodotus, was the first king in Carisendom who invaded the land of William.

MRS. LANGTRY'S HOME.

The Little Palace in Which She Lives in New York City.

One of Mrs. Langtry's close personal friends, who is a newspaper writer, describes the other side of the high fence [illegible] veritable palace. Instead of the ordinary hallway, the entrance is into a wide room which is equipped like a museum, with a litter of rugs of skins, of bric-a-brac, and of quaint chests, clocks and furniture. A striking feature of the collection is a mass of Indian implements, weapons, scalp locks, and ornaments picked up by the English woman on her trips to the West. A parlor at one side of the hall has its ceiling and wall covered with white satin, broken only by a great mantel mirror and a chandelier of Venetian glass. This room contains a small fortune in pretty pretties. Next to it is the billiard room, with walls panelled with embossed leather and a ceiling of heavy oak beams. The Lily plays billiards every day when she is at home. Further on is the dining room, in which there is a grand display of heavy plate and a portrait in oil of the mistress of the house. Adjoining the dining room is a little glass roofed retreat appointed with card tables, hung with turkey red hangings, set about with palms and other plants, and designed for use as a smoking room, as well as for card playing. The public or common rooms of the house also include a morning room, distinguished by a luxurious or ornate divan, on which the actress poses when receiving intimate friends. Books, manuscripts, and pretty furniture meet the eye here, as also does the portrait of the hostess by Millais. Altogether one gets the idea that Mrs. Langtry is comfortably housed in a home that is arranged with a semi-Bohemian taste.

THEY HATE MATINEES.

Actors and Actresses Regard Them as Cold and Clammy Impositions.

"I hate matinees," said an actress recently at the close of a performance, as she walked into the lobby.

"And why particularly?"

"I hate them for a variety of reasons. You'll find it very hard to put your hand on the man or woman in the profession to-day who doesn't hate matinees. Everybody hates them, and I'm ashamed to say it if it wasn't for a pack of women we shouldn't have to give matinees at all."

"But why do you hate matinees?"

"Firstly, because I regard one performance a good day's work, and as much as any conscientious actor ought to do. Secondly, because the daylight struggles into the theater and gets up a fight with the gas almost every time—and I'd like to see the woman who looks well under daylight and gaslight mixed.

"Thirdly and chiefly, I hate matinees because at them the audience is almost always a cold, chilly thing, chary of its applause, and scattered all over the house, like a flock of church geese. The reason for the meanness of applause always to be noted at matinees is that the audience is usually nine tenths women. Nature has built women for extravagant manifestations of delight in America, and the makers of gowns and applicators of fancy in dress have decided that what little disposition the American woman has for applauding shall be thwarted by unmanageable and complicated devices. You can't expect a woman to crack her gloves or bring about an attack of heart disease to gratify an actress, can you? That's what she'd do at the very least the average tailor-made woman if she clapped her hands and cried 'bravo' sufficiently.

Precept vs. Practice.

He who would elevate others must first elevate himself. Precepts are good, but practice is better, as the following incident illustrates:

A quick tempered teacher was once discoursing to his pupils on the beauty and necessity of guarding one's lips and keeping careful watch over angry passions if one would be happy himself and make others happy.

Remember the old adage about the soft answer that turneth away wrath and put a seal of silence on your lips in all times of sudden anger, not forgetting that—Frank Smyth, what do you mean by giggling while I am talking?"

"Come here to me and remain after school, and I'll settle with you. I've stood as much of your impudence to-day as I will stand sir. Put your books away the rest of you, and if one of you dare speak while I call the roll, I'll whip him, too."

The Sting Removed.

He put on his hat, started slowly for the door, hesitated, came back, looked deeply, and took the proffered hand in his own and pressed it to his lips.

"Katie, he murmured, "I have waited long, oh, how long, for this opportunity. Will you, Katie, will you, darling, be mine?"

"Henry," she replied, with a look of half sorrow and half consideration, "I can never be."

"Never! Oh why have you permitted me to believe? Why have you encouraged me, only to sting my bleeding heart a fresh?"

"I am sorry, Hector, that I [illegible] years. I have since gone to [illegible] organ loft."

"You Henry, I am not expected [illegible] "Then I feel that you should be mine."

Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic is not a stimulant but a nerve tonic, restoring nerve force lost by sickness or excessive mental work or the use of liquor, opium, morphine or tobacco. It supplies food for nerve tissues and by its gentle aperative action, removes all impurities from the excretive organs, hence curing all diseases of stomach and liver. Dr. Geo Ferguson will supply the genuine Red Clover Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

HIBBARD'S Rheumatic Plasters are of great merit for weak lungs and stomach, and should be applied over the parts affected.

Now is the time to pay up.

THE peculiar combination of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup enables it to do what no other remedy has ever accomplished, and it is daily curing those who years ago had given up all hopes of being cured.

The reason why Acker's Blood Elixir is warranted, is because it is the best Blood Preparation known. It will positively cure all Blood Diseases, purifies the whole system, and thoroughly builds up the constitution. Remember, we guarantee it. C. A. WRIGHT & CO., Druggists.

ANIMAL CATCHING DEVICE.

With this simple tool one man and a boy 10 years of age can hold and ring the most vicious and largest hog with ease. It can be used for handling hogs for all purposes, and sheep as well. In washing or shearing sheep, put the catcher loose in the handle, then reach out and catch the sheep without disturbing the flock, always catching by the leg. There is no danger of breaking the leg, the device being pulled out from the handle when on the leg of the animal. On receipt of $1.25 I will send to any address postpaid the Catcher with twitch to hold the nose of the hog to ring. Catcher without the handle for $1.00. Large profits to good agents. Ask your hardware merchant for them.

When I say Cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I MEAN A RADICAL CURE. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a free bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office address. Respectfully, H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., New York.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

ESTATE OF GARRET ATEN.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 27th day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty eight.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Garret Aten, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Lewis Smith, administrator, with the will annexed, of said deceased, praying that he may be licensed to sell the residue of said estate remaining in his hands, not necessary for payment of debts and legacies, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the payment of the debts and legacies of said deceased, and the charges of administration on said estate, and that the final account may be allowed, and the residue of said estate remaining in his hands, ready for payment of debts and legacies, be assigned to the persons who may be entitled to the same by law.

It is ordered, that the 26th day of March next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for hearing said petition, when all persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be held at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN THE MATTER of the Estate of [illegible] deceased.

[illegible]

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, on the 11th day of October [illegible] Hardenburg, all that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit: Beginning at a point in the east line of Pearl street ten (10) rods north of the north line of Shawnee street, running thence eastwardly parallel with said ten (10) rods distant therefrom [illegible] to the Railway Depot Grounds, thence northward on west line of said Depot Grounds about six (6) rods to lands of Heesen Brothers and [illegible] land, or at least occupied by them as a [illegible] Ribger Factory; thence west on south line of said land of Heesen Brothers and Nyland twenty [illegible] rods more or less to land conveyed by said [illegible] W. Templeton wife, Hettie A. to Edwin Wood; thence south on east line of said land so aforesaid conveyed to said Wood two and one half (2½) rods to the southeast corner thereof; thence west on south line of said parcel of land so aforesaid conveyed to said Wood eight [illegible] rods to the east line of Pearl street aforesaid; thence south on east line of said Pearl street [illegible] place of beginning, with all the appurtenances thereto belonging or in any wise appertaining thereunto situated, including the machinery in and about the buildings thereon or to be hereafter annexed to the same or any part thereof, to secure the payment of $253.00 in five years from the date thereof with interest to be paid annually at the rate of ten per cent. per annum for the first three years, and for the remaining two years interest to be paid annually at the rate of nine per cent. per annum, which mortgage was on the 11th day of October, 1883, duly recorded in office of Register of Deeds for said county of Lenawee in Liber 93 of mortgages on page 38 and 340. And whereas said mortgage contains a provision that in event any default shall be made in the payment of said interest, or any part thereof at the time therein specified, and shall remain in arrears for the space of sixty days the aforesaid principal sum with all arrearages of interest thereon shall at the option of said mortgagee, his executors, administrators and assigns, become due and payable. And whereas default has been made in the payment of interest on said mortgage to the amount of $50.00 and upwards and the same having remained unpaid and in arrears for a space of more than sixty days, and the undersigned, administratrix, hereby elects to declare and does hereby declare the whole amount due, both principal and interest, amounting at the date of this notice to the sum of $180.92 Dollars, and no proceedings having been commenced at law or in equity for the recovery of said sum or any part thereof. And whereas the undersigned administratrix has been compelled to pay the further sum of $8.37-100 for insurance premiums to protect her interest as such administratrix in the mortgaged premises.

Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and by virtue of the statutes of the state of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys so due and owing on said mortgage, and the interest thereon from and after the date of this notice, and insurance premiums and interest thereon, as provided in said mortgage, and the cost and expense of this foreclosure, and the attorney fee provided by law, the said above described lands and premises will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the city of Adrian in said County of Lenawee, that being the place where the circuit court for said county of Lenawee is holden, on Saturday, the 26th day of May, A.D. 1888, at two o'clock in the forenoon of said day.

Dated March 1st, 1888.

ALICE B. HARDENBURGH, Administratrix of the estate of Addison Hardenburgh, deceased.

CHARLES BURRIDGE, Attorney for Administratrix. ma1

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage made and executed on the third day of June 1886, by the Ogden & Michigan Coal and Manufacturing Company to Addison Hardenburg, and recorded on the 4th day of June, 1886, in office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 115, of mortgages on page 71, by virtue of which said default the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative; and whereas there is claimed to be due and owing at the date of this notice upon the said mortgage and note secured by same for principal and interest the sum of $267.50, and whereas the undersigned administratrix has been compelled to pay the further sum of $16.7 for insurance premiums to protect her interest in the mortgaged premises, and whereas no suit or proceedings at law or in equity have been instituted to recover such indebtedness or any part thereof; Now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statutes of the state of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the moneys so due and owing on said mortgage, and interest thereon, and the said insurance premiums and interest thereon, and the cost and expense of this foreclosure, the attorney fee provided by law, the said premises will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder on the fifth day of May, A.D. 1888, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, that being the place where the circuit court for said county of Lenawee is holden.

Dated March 1st, 1888.

ALICE B. HARDENBURGH, Administratrix of the estate of Addison Hardenburgh, deceased.

Tecumseh Herald

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 22 1888.

ANNUAL REPORT OF VILLAGE HEALTH OFFICER.

Mr. President, Gentlemen of the committee on Public Health and members of the Common Council:

Conscious of my inefficiency, yet with pleasure I acknowledge the appointment to the office of health officer of our beautiful village.

The duties of the office have not been onerous, neither have they been difficult.

In all cases officially brought to my notice, the recommendations of the committee have been promptly complied with.

With these few words I might close the report, but it would not contain the information due the common council nor the recommendations I believe to be in the interest of public health.

Since entering upon the duties of the office there have been but few cases of disease dangerous to the public health. Only two cases of typhoid fever, one of scarlet fever and five or six of dysentery have been reported. No deaths have been reported from any of these diseases.

Old resident physicians inform me that during their residence in Tecumseh they have never seen a true case of typhoid fever. Cases indeed rarely occur. Only two have been reported in the past year and those of a mild type.

This immunity from typhoid fever is probably largely due to our excellent water supply. Underlying the town at a depth varying from 22 to 30 feet is a stratum of gravel containing an abundant supply of pure and wholesome water. This water supply should be carefully guarded. It would be well for the common council to forbid, without its consent, the farther digging of open, bricked up or stoned up wells, and to require the lot owners to hereafter put down only the drive well. For without great care the surface water, the drainage of the barnyard, the percolations from the privy and cesspool and animal and vegetable matter will get into the well and not only the water of that well, but the water supply of neighboring wells become contaminated.

The latest researches tend to show that typhoid fever germs get into the system from water or other fluids taken into the stomach, and that the prevalence of the fever in any section is greatest when the water is the lowest in the wells. With suitable precautions as to the water supply, and a proper isolation of cases as soon as they occur, our village may continue as exempt from this disease as in the past.

The ice supply is also abundant and good. Naturally, however, we would expect the ice from the upper pond to be more wholesome for drinking purposes than from the lower ponds. The water of the upper pond is derived from the Raisin, a large and rapid stream, while the water of the lower ponds is partly from the Raisin and partly from Evans' Creek. Evans Creek is a small stream and flows in close proximity to many barnyards. In addition to the barnyard drainage into the creek, the lower ponds take refuse of the paper mill and the wash of the slaughter house on Evans Creek and the hog pen and slaughter house below the Globe Mill.

It would be difficult to find a town plat with better natural drainage than Tecumseh. However two or three well constructed sewers would be of great benefit, but the expense of sewerage is so great I will omit any recommendations.

There is one matter that should receive the consideration of the common council. It is the vaccination of all the children who have not been vaccinated and attend the public schools. The constant flow of emigration through Michigan to the great northwest endangers the towns on the line of railway to the introduction of small pox. I have been informed that for several years no systematic effort has been made to secure the vaccination of school children and that a large number are now wholly unprotected. It would be prudent for the common council to set one or two days for the vaccination of school children immediately after the close of the summer term of school, and to provide at the public expense pure animal vaccine virus and to supply each practicing physician with sufficient to vaccinate all who shall come to his office on the days appointed. The expense for virus would probably not exceed fifteen or twenty dollars, an expense much less than the care of a single case of small pox in the family of an indigent person.

During the past year one if not two preventable deaths have occurred in habitual drunkards. One in the hot and the other in the cold season. These deaths might have been prevented had the men been taken to suitable quarters and there detained until the effects of alcohol had passed from the system.

While the death of any one of us is of little account as there are enough left and the one gone is soon forgotten, yet in as much as the public is supposed to be benefited by the variety and amount of alcohol consumed, it should guard with jealousy the lives of those who are endangered by its excessive use. I do not wish to say that habitual drunkards should be cared for that they may live to consume alcohol, but that the public deriving benefit from the consumption of alcohol owe a debt of care to those who are injured by its excessive use. I simply desire to call up the question whether in the interest of public health there should or should not more suitable accommodations be provided for this class of persons.

The various industries of the village should be encouraged and a greater number induced to come among us. Nothing conduces more to public health than steady, healthful employment. But the health of employees should be looked after, especially in those industries where women are employed. It would be well to require your health officer to frequently visit the fruit drying and chicken picking establishments. Women are much less likely to complain than men and they suffer preventable annoyances longer than men. In the fruit drying factories the sulphur fumes were often so great as to produce irritation to the throat and lungs. Yet none of the women entered complaint. I can but think that it is the duty of the common council to look after the health of such employees, viz. who from being too timid or from fear of losing their place suffer loss of of health from preventable causes.

Permit me in closing this report to express my thankfulness for the assistance given me in the performance of my duty.

GEO. HOWELL,
Health Officer.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

Tuesday evening, March 13th, the Farmers' Social Club met at Jacob Everhart's. After some general business, the program was carried out in a pleasing manner.

Mr I. H. Schreder opened the discussion with an excellent paper containing criticisms and comments upon the various papers and discussions. He thinks the institute was of practical value in bringing the Agricultural College and other matters of like nature, before the people for thought.

Mr. Kehoe thinks the institute a success, but perhaps no better than the one held last year. He thinks at the College they are better at teaching and preaching than practicing; yet, he thinks we may learn from them to think and observe and prove whether their theories and experiments are true. They also teach us that experiments are usually expensive, and the State farm could not pay expenses and exist if they did not have the State to back them.

Mr. Horton. If we receive any practical benefit from the College it is negatively not affirmatively. We have received a benefit from the institute, and we may always receive practical benefit by holding one of our own.

Mr. Fisher. The institute was a success and I enjoyed it all through, but I was disappointed in the practical knowledge I hoped to receive from the Professors of the College. We try to carry out Prof. Johnson's ideas of mixed husbandry. Prof. Cook gave us some good information in regard to noxious insects, but had he given us information in regard to cut worms and the Hessian fly, etc. and remedies for the same it would have been acceptable.

Mr. Everhart. Perhaps we are not able to see all the benefits of the institute at this time. Their experiments at the State farm are of use to us, as we would not be able to conduct the experiments, but they make them and give the farmers the benefit. The College is not self supporting but we receive the benefit.

Mr. F. Rector. The question is, what practical benefit did we receive from the institute? I think we received much information and could have received much more had we had more time to ask questions and discuss the various topics as presented. The institute was a success and I derived much pleasure in attending.

Mr. Griswold: I think we received a benefit from the institute in having a very pleasant entertainment, and that should be of value, but I think the experiments of Prof. Cook were of value and I received much information. The experiments are sometimes expensive to the State, but they are certainly of use to us even if they are failures.

After some general talk the club adjourned to meet Tuesday evening, March 27th, at R. B. Gillespie's. This will be the last evening meeting for the season.

PROGRAM.

Inst. Duet—Grace and Ora Gillespie.

THE GEOGRAPHY SCHOLAR.

STRANGER—"I say, Bub, does this road run to Tecumseh?"
BOY—"This road don't run nowhere. It stands still."
STRANGER—"But you can go to Tecumseh on this road."
BOY—"I s'pose you can, sir, if you keep on travelin."
STRANGER—"How far is it to Tecumseh, anyway?"
BOY—"Wall, if ye go on follerin' yer nose, as you're pointed now, its about 24 997 miles, but if ye turn square 'round and go t'other way, its about three miles."

EAST RAISIN FARMERS' CLUB.

The club met as usual, on March 13, 1888, at the church. The president called the meeting to order at the usual hour, Mr. Belden opening with prayer. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and accepted.

The following programme was then carried out:

Vocal solo—Inez Richards.
Declamation—Guernsey Kelley.
Recitation—Etta Robbins.
Declamation—Ned Belden.
Recitation—Florence Mize.

After a short intermission the topic of the creamery business was discussed and was led by W. E. Doty. He did not think there was any profit obtained from it; he thought it paid better to raise calves on the cows than to milk them at all. He said a string of cows a mile in length would not support him.

He was followed by G. Holloway, who thought there was no profit to the men in the creamery, as they had to do the work of straining and skimming while the women stood by and looked on.

A. Richard thought this section of country not adapted to the dairy business.

Mrs. Mize said that the creamery was a great saving of labor and that she received a better profit than from butter.

D. B. Raymond, of Dixon, Ill., said there was a good profit in cows, and gave an instance of a man who came to their county and went in debt for a large dairy farm. In eight years he cleared $17,000, he had from thirty to fifty cows.

S. R. Rogers thought that cream paid the better.

Miss Colvin then favored the club with one of her original poems.

The president then presented a communication from the secretary of the Farmers' Union Picnic Association, requesting them to send a delegate to meet with the executive committee at Tecumseh. W. E. Wilson was chosen as such delegate.

C. Fowler then favored the club with a violin solo. He was assisted by Lue Billmeyer as organist and J. Richard with the cornet.

The society then adjourned to meet March 27th.

THE BEST PHYSICIASN OUTDONE.

J. A. Crawford says: "I have had the worst form of Eczema two years, and found no relief from some of our best physicians who have made this disease a specialty. I was pursuaded to try Papillon (extract of flax) The relief I received was like a charm and I am well. I think Papillon one of the blessings of the age." Try Papillon (extract of flax) Skin Cure when all others fail. Large bottles $1.00.

The Population of Tecumseh

Is about 2,800 and we would say at least one half are troubled with some a section of the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. Mrs. Morgan Talks to Doctor Lynch.

MANCHESTER, Mich., Sept., 1887.

Doctor.—Do you remember me conversing with you some months ago about my rheumatism, and that one of my lower limbs was partially paralyzed from its effects. I asked you about the the Syrup, and you replied to me that if there was any thing under the sun that would cure me, to take it. So I commenced using Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and I want to say to you that it is the greatest medicine in the world, I firmly believe. That dizziness that troubled me as well as the rheumatism is cured, and my blood is in a healthy condition. My appetite and sleep are both good, and I am healthy. Doctor, that is a great family medicine, and you need not hesitate to recommend it.

MRS. THOMAS MORGAN.
